Comedy predominates "My Soldier Girl," but the delicious foolishness is interspersed by charming musical numbers introduced by a remarkable chorus of singing and dancing experts who trip through the cleverly conceived march, drills and dancing ensembles fetchingly.

Wm. J. Haggarty, president of U. S. and South American Trading Co., was sentenced at Newark, N.J., to 14 years for defrauding investors out of $300,000.

He—You refuse me and give no reason! You are cruel! She—No, professor, only kind.—Washington Star.

The Bait.

"George," said Mrs. Smith, sitting up suddenly in bed, "there's a burglar in the place!"

"Nonsense!" replied her husband drowsily.

"I'm quite right," she returned. "I can hear him distinctly crossing the floor of the room below. Now"—excitedly—"he's lighting one of those cigars I gave you for your birthday. I heard him pick up the box and put it down again."

Then George sat up and listened.

"By Jove, Annie, you're right!" he answered. "He is! He's actually smoking one of those—er—er—those cigars!"

Then he nestled more comfortably beneath the blankets.

"Go to sleep, Annie," he said complacently. "We'll find the poor wretch in the morning!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Quite Another Thing.

"Whom are you going to give those cigars to?"

"To the janitor, so that he will give us more heat."

"Why, I thought I heard you abusing him terribly this morning."

"My dear woman, you don't think I dare address the janitor like that? I was talking to the landlord."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Herself Included.

Helen was eating breakfast with her father and her mother one morning when she remarked:

"Nina Fletcher's mamma has been married nine years today. We've been married longer than that, haven't we?"—Lippincott's.

Rebuked.

Binks—But if I tell the fellows I caught twenty pickerel aggregating sixty pounds they'll know I'm lying.

Jinks—What of it? Have you no moral courage or strength of character?—New York Globe.

Contrary.

Knick—Does the dentist drill your teeth? Knack—Yes, but he can't make them act right.—Judge.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

"Arteriosclerosis."

Hardening of the arteries, as the Greek term means, is one of the processes of growing old. A man is as old as his arteries, and some men are much older than others at the same years. Arteries are not merely tubes that carry blood under pressure from the heart, but living channels which themselves react to changes in the human body, and by degenerating lose their elasticity and so interfere with the circulation. Vitality soon ebbs when the blood current is hampered, and every organ suffers. It is the whole of life that must be regulated. Overworking, but, above all, overworrying, overeating, overdrinking of stimulants—all contribute to the wearing out process eventually seen in arterial degeneration. But the crux of the problem is the individual element, for what constitutes excess for one man in many of these ways seems to leave others quite unaffected. The prevention of arteriosclerosis is the adaptation of the individual to his nature, his work and his play so as to obtain the longest life for the human machine that he gets by heredity from his special family strain.

Mining Work in the Rockies.

The gross value of British Columbia's mineral production for the year 1918 was $41,763,474, an increase from that of the year 1917 of $4,772,082, or 12.9 per cent., according to the annual report of the Minister of Mines. The gross value of the metallic minerals recovered in 1918 was $27,910,278, which represents an increase of 2.3 per cent. The provincial mineralogist, Mr. Fleet Robertson, in commenting on these figures, states that only once in the history of the province's mineral statistics has this output been exceeded, and that was in 1916, when the year's mineral output amounted to $42,290,462, only 1.2 per cent. greater than in 1918. This is accounted for by the fact that 1916 was a phenomenal year with metal prices temporarily inflated, due to war conditions.

As compared with earlier years, he points out that the production of 1918 shows up even more favorably, for it exceeds the next highest recorded production — $32,446,886, made in 1912 — by $9,341,674, or about 29 per cent.

Cruel Retort.

A good story is told of a famous author who had the misfortune to be seated next to a terrible boring old lady at a friend's dinner party.

"Do you know, Mr. Blank," she said, gushingly, "my sister was intending to sail on the Lusitania, but was prevented at the last moment; wasn't that fortunate now?"

"I really couldn't say," replied the author. "I never knew your sister!"

L'AFFAIRE ROCHETTE.

French Financial Swindler Had a Remarkable Career.

Henri Rochette, banker and promoter, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment and a fine of 3,000 francs for swindling French investors to the amount of more than 10,000,000 francs through the sale of Mexican railroad bonds in 1910.

"L'Affaire Rochette" has afforded Paris a big sensation, which is not to be wondered at, considering the huge amount of money involved. Never in the course of French financial history has there been such an extraordinary successful promoter as Rochette, the man of 43, who not many years ago was a cafe waiter and a barber's assistant. He seems to have been able to raise all the money he required for everything he took in hand. He began life as a messenger boy at a railway refreshment room at Melun. He inherited a small sum of money and went to Paris where he took lessons at a commercial school. He then became a junior clerk in a great French bank, which he left to enter a company promoter's office. On his employer's failure Rochette circularized the creditors, offering to take the business over and manage it with their assistance, undertaking to get their money back for them.

He next succeeded in getting himself financed by a gentleman of large private means, and started the Credit Miner (Mining Bank). From that time forward he became a sort of financial wizard. Companies sprang up at his bidding as though at a command of a magician's wand, in a couple of years the Credit Miner was doing such business that it employed 400 clerks.

There was a continuous stream of promotions of companies of all kinds. There were issued to the public in turn the stock of collieries, copper, silver and gold mines. South American and Mexican land and railway concerns, banks, fisheries, gas-mantle factories, colonial concerns, and various other undertakings. So enormous did the financier's business become that he formed a subsidiary company, the Banque Franco-Espagnol, and started a daily financial newspaper. In his heydey his two offices gave employment to 700 clerks.

In 1906, everything was going on swimmingly, and all that Rochette wanted was the Ribbon of the Order of the Legion of Honor to enhance his prestige. An application was drawn up by some friends of his, and it was initialled by a great political personage; but he got the ribbon of a minor order instead, and the disappointment was intense. Then Rochette launched the Nerva mines, in Spain, with a capital of $4,000,000, but the result was also a disappointment to him, as this venture did not meet with anything like the support that he had anticipated. The "Buisson Helia," another of his undertakings, was a system for giving a wonderfully clear light by incandescent gas at very small expense, but it did nothing that was claimed for it.

It is alleged that M. Rochette spent a very large sum monthly in "hush money." It is stated that the money so paid amounted on an average to between $10,000 and $15,000 per month. Some of his influential protectors are said to have been in the receipt of weekly allowances of $250, $300 and $400 and from the Credit Miner, and it is alleged that but for their protection Rochette would have been arrested long before he was actually taken in.

Although at first his liabilities were placed at $20,000,000 it was later found that twice that sum would be a more correct estimate.

The whole "affaire" was made the subject of investigations by a Parliamentary Committee of Inquiry, and one of the most interesting witnesses examined was M. Lepine, the Prefect of Police in Paris. In the statement that he made he said that Rochette's method was to float companies in groups. As soon as one got into difficulties another was floated to support it, and was thrust upon the investing public by means of extraordinary advertisement. Seven companies were thus floated in the course of three years, he said, had brought Rochette more than $15,000,000, and by a system of inflating the prices of their shares they had been made to produce, altogether, nearly twenty-five millions. "It is a house of cards," he declared, "no foundation but the credulity of the public."

A Bucket Line.

A seventy-five mile ride in a bucket high in the air will soon be possible in the Himalayas. An aerial railway of that length—the longest in the world—is to be constructed on the plains of a Canadian engineer from the Punjab to the famous vale of Kashmir. The ruggedness of the country and the danger of rock slides and landslips makes a railroad track out of the question. Towers will be built nearly half a mile apart, and a cable will carry steel cars loaded with 300 or 400 pounds. The cable will be in five mile sections, but an arrangement has been adopted to automatically pass a car or bucket from one cable section to the next. Plenty of water power is conveniently at hand to develop electricity for hauling the buckets.—Exchange.

New Gold Brick.

The following advertisement appeared in the Swiss German papers of Zurich, Switzerland: "An alchemist wishes to borrow from a noble gentleman or lady the sum of $500 at 100 per cent interest to install a laboratory destined to manufacture Lapis philosophorum (the elixir of long life and remedy against all diseases). Twenty-five years' study of this science permits me to begin its practice. Who will aid me?"

Glass That Won't Splinter.

An ingenious process for producing glass which will not splinter has been devised by a French inventor. One side of each of two glass plates is covered with a thin coating of gelatin, a thin clear plate of celluloid is laid between these two surfaces, and glass and celluloid are then united by strong pressure into a single pane.

MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH TOMORROW

If the Thanksgiving atmosphere is to be felt anywhere, and the glories of the autumn season to be visualized in any sanctuary it will be so in the beautiful auditorium of Murray st. Baptist Church tomorrow. The decorations are not only suitable but superb. Art and nature are met together and over and above all, the flags proclaim the fact that peace is more precious than any of the many gifts for which God is to be thanked. The music will be of a high order and Mr. Webb will preach both morning and evening. The thanksgiving offering will be made.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY TAG DAY

CITIZENS ARE ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE TO THIS NOBLE WORK TODAY

It has been customary for some years for the Children's Aid Society of this city to hold an annual tag day for the purpose of receiving funds to make it possible to carry on their work efficiently. Today is the chance for the citizens to contribute to that worthy cause. The Children's Aid Society are doing a great work in caring for the children of the city and immediate neighborhood.

They take care of all homeless children and provide a good home with careful training for these unfortunates. When they become old and strong enough to work the officers of the society procure suitable work for them and watch them carefully for some time after they leave their immediate care to see that they get fair treatment.

Besides this noble work they take a keen interest in the children who are being brought up in houses that do not give to them good opportunities.

Surely this is a noble work and deserving of the hearty financial support of Peterborough's citizens. It is hoped that the Society will recieve a record contribution today to enable them to carry on their great work even more thoroughly and extensively during the coming year than they have done in the past.

CONSERVATIVE RALLY

Don't forget there will be a rally of Liberal-Conservative workers tonight at 8 o'clock, in Mr. Soden's Committee Rooms, 176 Simcoe street.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES AT TRINITY CHURCH

The services in Trinity Methodist on tomorrow will be especially attractive. The choir, under the leadership of Mr. George H. King, will give a splendid program of music at both services. They will be assisted by Mr. H. A. Croxall, of Orillia, leader of the Methodist choir in that town and one of Canada's leading baritones. Mr. Earl Hodgins, former soloist in Bond Street Congregational Church, Toronto, will also sing. The pastor's morning theme will be, "The Grace of Gratitude." At night he will speak on "The True Substitute for the Saloon." A brief memorial service for Lance-Corporal Carl Moffatt will be held.

NO PRACTICE

There will be no orchestra practice at the Conservatory tonight.

CAPACITY HOUSE FOR GUY BROS.

ENTERTAINMENT HIGH CLASS AND COMPANY WOULD BE ALWAYS WELCOME HERE

Guy Brothers' Minstrels played to a capacity house last night at the Grand and as usual their performance delighted the audience. This company is known from one end of the province to the other and very few theatrical organizations are better or more favorably known than the ever-popular Guy Brothers.

Their performance last night included songs of the old plantation days as well as some of the newer musical hits and their vaudeville numbers were of a very high order.

Kelda the famous frog man, is a wonderful contortionist the Agawam Quartette were good in their songs The Musical Baums introduced a unique musical act. They manage to get music out of several different instruments without any apparent effort. Hugh Norton, the lightning change artist, was good in his act.

Altogether the entertainment provided by these minstrels was of a high order and they are sure of a warm welcome every time they return to Peterboro.

Proposed Housing Operations

Information Wanted

Under the provisions of the Ontario Housing Act, the City Council is desirous of being informed if there are citizens ready to enter into arrangements to have dwellings built, under conditions of payment as specified in the said Act.

Houses of moderate cost, say from $2500.00 to $3500.00, including cost of lot.

Names may be forwarded, by letter, to the City Clerk, giving brief particulars as to locality desired within the city limits, and cost, not to exceed above amounts. Applications to be in by Saturday, 18th inst.

Replies will enable Council to determine as to the advisability of taking up the proposition.

ONLY an artist can blend colors to match the beautiful Red Rose.

Blending teas is even more difficult.

It requires expert knowledge and a highly cultivated sense of taste to select teas from many different gardens and produce a uniform blend day after day.

Only the largest companies can afford to employ men who are expert tea tasters and blenders.

Red Rose Tea is an example of the fine art of tea blending, more than a dozen varieties of choice teas being used—principally rich, strong, full-flavored ASSAMS.

Its delightful and distinctive flavor is exclusive to Red Rose. And its rich strength means economy in your tea pot.

Try a sealed package of this expert blend.

. O'CONNELL ADMITS EVIDENCE IS NOT OF CONCLUSIVE NATURE

not Explain Contradictory Evidence of Chief Thompson nd Inspector Stewart—Mr. Hall Explains it by Psychology—Investigation Concluded Decision Deferred

he police investigation, Saturday g, Mr. Saunders, solicitor for ense Board, was a witness. He ed correspondence which went w the ill feeling that had exist- some time between Inspector t and the police force. He lso questioned concerning the ton statement and practically ed that he did not really be the statement at that time or time since.

Buttin was also a witness and f a conversation he had had Inspector Stewart in which the tor had called the Chief of Po- damn liar and a damn thief.

n Detective Newhall went into x but most of his evidence was ned till the afternoon session.

en the Saturday afternoon ses- pened shortly after two o'clock ll was in the witness box being ned by Mr. Hall.

Newhall's Evidence.

, I never did, the whole thing is hhood from beginning to end."

name to you?"

, he never talked to me becaus ew that I knew about his liquor tions although I could not lly catch him at it."

d you ever sneer at Mr. Stew- nd turn into a door way when net him?"

o, I always consider he is not while bothering about."

aking of the time that Stewart Chief Thompson had an argument Chief's office, he told of going e stairs and remaining just out- the door of the office because xpected trouble on account of art's method of going through olice station like a "mad bull." eard Stewart call the chief a and a liar and he heard the say: "If you were not such an man, I would smash your face." hen entered the room and stepped een the men and Stewart went en Mr. Stewart was again put e box and emphatically denied g over offered $5 to any con- e for giving him information he if was given to the chief.

garding the Bridgenorth beer. Stewart swore that he and Sergt had never thrown any liquor the sewer.

Stewart Sticks to His Story.

Referring to the liquor that was alleged to have been taken to the Chief's house, he repeated the statement that the chief told him of taking the liquor to his own house and Sergt. Kidd admitting taking it there.

Mr. Stewart swore that he didn't konw one word of what Dunford was going to give as evidence until he heard the evidence.

"When did you make your agreement with Dunford?" asked Mr. Hall.

"I heard from other sources that he was connected with liquor so I went and asked him and he admitted it. Then we made this arrangement."

This ended the long list of witnesses which gave evidence and judging from the length of time and the searching cross-examinations, no one can reasonably doubt that the investigation has been exhaustive and thorough. No stone has been left unturned to get to the bottom of the matter.

Mr. O'Connell' sArgument.

Mr. O'Connell referred to Hamilton's evidence produced before the court. Besides the charges contained in this statement there is the charge that Sergt. Black broke into Stewart's [illegible] Then there are the charges against the Chief for using threatening and abusive language and for, on two different occasions, appropriating confiscated liquor.

He referred to Mr. Stewart's long period of public service as a police constable and since that time as a license inspector. And during that time he has always carried out his duties as thoroughly and efficiently as he was capable. The only criticism launched against him was that he had too much zeal in the prosecution of his duties.

Mr. O'Connell reviewed the evidence of Dunford and how it connected certain members of the polince foce with liquor transactions. Also Hamilton swears that he heard of the police protection from Sullivan and Sullivan swears that he did not give Hamilton this information. But, Mr. O'Connell drew the attention of the court to the nature of Sullivan's sory. He also urges the court to disbelieve the story of Ahey on account of the inconsistency of the statements and also on account of his rather impertinent manner in the box.

Admits Evidence Not Sufficient.

Mr. O'Connell admitted that the evidence produced was not of a sufficient conclusiveness to convict these men of the very serious charges brought against them.

LIVES OF JUSTICE WEEKS AND POLICE OFFICERS THREATENED

New York Anarchists Declare They Will Wreak Vengeance on Officials, and Call on all Workers to Arm and Fight Capitalists--Home of Detective Gegan Guarded

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Oct. 14.—Heavy police guards were placed today within and about the criminal court building, where two alleged anarchists are on trial following the discovery late yesterday of highly incendiary circulars threatening the lives of Supreme Court Justice Bartow S. Weeks, Assistant District Attorney Alexander I. Rorke and Detective Sergt. James J. Gregan, head of the police bomb squad.

Novel Experience.

Gegan, who had the novel experience last night of being guarded in his home by brother policemen, joined with detectives and agents of the United States Department of Justice today in an effort to run down the authors and circulators of the dodgers, which called on all workers to "arm and fight back" against the capitalists.

Must Pay the Price.

The homes of Justice Weeks, who is trying the case of two alleged anarchist newspaper editors, and Mr. Rorke, who is directing the prosecution, were closely guarded last night as a result of a declaration of the circular that they may as well drop their high positions for they will have to pay price for every worker killed or wounded.

Guards also were placed about public buildings regarded as likely targets for anarchistic bombs.

ALLEGED MAKER OF THIRTY-SIX BOMBS SENT BY MAIL ARRESTED

Entire Terrorist Organization Responsible for Attempts on Lives of Law-Enforcers at Last Revealed---Would be Assassin of United States Attorney-General Palmer Said to be Under Arrest.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Oct. 14.—Federal authorities at Gary, Ind., where military control was established after the situation growing out of the strike of steel workers became threatening for the state authorities to handle, have arrested the alleged maker of a bomb exploded on the night of June 3 last in a doorway of the home of A. Mitchell Palmer, United States Attorney-General, at Washington, and have obtained evidence clearing up the terrorist bomb plots on May Day and June 2, according to authoritative information here today.

Organization Revealed.

Evidence also has been obtained that revealed the entire terrorist organization responsible for attempts against the lives of law enforcement officials throughout the country, who had been active in arrests and prosecution of radicals.

The man held in connection with the Palmer bomb is believed to have been the manufacturer of the thirty-six bombs sent through the mails, in boxes wrapped in paper, from Gimbel Brothers' store in New York, and timed to reach their intended victims on May 1.

Stockade For Prisoners.

Since the 16th hundreds of soldiers of the fourth and sixth divisions took control of Gary, investigations have been shrouded in secrecy. There have been many arrests made, and a strong stockade was built to keep prisoners in.

THE EXAMINER INSULTS THE JEWISH RACE

In its front page spiel, with Mr. R. J. Soden's circular to the electors as a text, the Examiner in its Saturday's issue simply challenges Mr. Soden's statements without attempting to disprove them. Mr. Soden in that circular has said no more than have the Globe and the Star, and with neither of these does the Examiner feel itself strong enough to take issue. Perhaps the Examiner believes all it says about its own party, but if it does it is laboring under the delusion of its career.

The Examiner cannot bring Mr. Tooms into this controversy by insinuating that Mr. Soden alleges that the liquor party are financing the Labor candidate. No one believes that the liquor interests would spend one dollar in West Peterborough, the rural section of which has been under local option for years and where the city has twice recorded a majority for temperance.

However, Mr. Tooms is non-committal as to the referendum. He takes the safe course of leaving that matter to the people. Prominent members of the Citizens' Liberty League have announced their intention of supporting Mr. Tooms, and will probably bring the majority of the membership with them. The Liberty League is the only visible representative of the liquor traffic in the local field.

With the Examiner, its interest in party success transcends its solicitude for the endorsation of the Ontario Temperance Act. If not, why does it attempt to bring that measure into disrepute by charging that it is administered in the interests of the party in power? The Examiner bases this contention upon recent charges made by Hartley Dewart, who is discredited on his record as a critic of that law.

Our contemporary gratuitously insults, with stupid partisan malice, every Jew in Toronto, in Ontario and in Peterborough by maintaining that they sought to convert a solemn religious rite into a drunken orgy and that it was possible to purchase their political support by relaxing the Temperance Act in their favor. No man who knows anything of the Jew's zeal for his faith would make any such slanderous charge. The Jews as a race are the last people on earth to be accused of excessive drinking, and it is silly as well as malicious to allege that they could be bribed by any such methods as those which the Examiner, for purposes of its own professes to believe were employed.

Campaign Notes

The three candidates are now officially in the field, all legal formalities having been complied with at the nomination meeting held yesterday in the Court House. R. J. Soden's nomination papers as field bear 123 signatures, G. A. Gillespie's 119 and those of Thomas Tooms the same number. V. J. McKiderry is financial agent for Mr. Soden, J. E. L. Goodwill for Mr. Gillespie, and C. W. Saunders for Mr. Tooms. J. F. Strickland, the returning officer for the riding, officiated, and the entire proceedings lasted less than an hour.

There are a large number of votes to poll in the south ward, and appeals there were numerous. It will be possible, however, to poll all the votes if the electors will go to the polls early and not overtax the booths by leaving this duty to the last moment.

There was two hours of oratory at the nomination meeting at Norwood yesterday when the speakers were Mr. James Thompson, Conservative, Mr. E. N. McDonald, Farmers' candidate for East Peterborough, and Mr. A. Brethien, who addressed the voters on behalf of the latter. The electors present appeared satisfied with the services rendered the constituency in the past by Mr. Thompson and everything points to his re-election.

Mr. Thompson held a meeting at Post schoolhouse this afternoon and will address the electors at Clydesdale this evening. He is receiving flattering assurances of support in all parts of the riding.

Mr. Tooms, the Labor candidate, was at Bridgenorth last night and will speak at Young's Point tonight.

Mr. Soden will speak at Buckhorn tonight, and at Ventre's schoolhouse tomorrow evening. Thursday night a meeting will be held at Ennismore.

WOMEN TO BE QUESTIONED ON THE QUESTION OF PROHIBITION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 14.—The announcement was made at a gerat prohibition mass meeting held at Glasgow, last night, that women throughout Scotland would be canvassed on the question of prohibition.

W. E. Johnson, Anti-Saloon League organizer, who has been conducting the prohibition movement in Great Britain for some time, was given a great reception at this meeting.

MORE THAN 2½% IN THIS DRINK

Drank Two Bottles of Beef, Iron and Wine to Get Intoxicated.

Harold Millichan pleaded guilty to a charge of being intoxicated before Acting Magistrates Rush and Adams at Police Court this morning. When asked what he got drunk on the prisoner replied beef, iron and wine. He had drunk two bottles of it, causing him to be in a very intoxicated condition. Chief Thompson stated that this was the second or third time he had been up and Mr. Rush promised him the maximum penalty if he should ever appear before him again. He was fined $10 and $4.10 costs.

THREE BOYS FINED $1 EACH

Pleaded Guilty to a Charge of Using Insulting Language.

Too much mischief lead to three boys from the north end of the city paying $4.10 each into the city treasury at the Police Court this morning. They were charged with casting insolent remarks at one of Peterborough's quiet citizens while attending the Opera House in company with his wife. The boys would call the man names and when he would turn around would impudently ask him 'what was biting him?"

The boys pleaded guilty and after a severe lecture from Acting Magistrate Rush, paid their fines of $1 and costs.

HEROIC PRELATE VISITS TORONTO

CARDINAL MERCIER WELCOMED BY ECCLESIASTICAL AND CIVIC DIGNITARIES THIS MORNING

PRESENTED DEGREE OF L. L. D.

EXPRESSES WARM GRATITUDE TO CANADA AND PRAISE OF CANADIAN TROOPS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 14.—Cardinal Mercier, the heroic Belgian prelate, visited Canada for the first time today, arriving here this morning from the United States. A large gathering of civic and ecclesiastical dignitaries met His Eminence at the station, and following a short visit to the residence of Archbishop McNeil he was tendered a civic reception at the city hall and luncheon with members of the Empire Club.

Canadian Degree.

This afternoon he was given the degree of LL.D. at Toronto University. His Eminence expressed deepest gratitude for the help of Canadian people to Belgium in her distress, and highest admiration for the valor of the Canadian troops.

Berlin.—It is semi-officially announced that Gen. Von der Goltz left his command on Sunday and will arrive in Berlin very shortly.

SODEN DISCUSSES PUBLIC ISSUES BEFORE ELECTORS OF YOUNG'S POINT

r. R. J. Soden, Conservative can- te for the Legislature, addressed eeting of the electors at Young's t last night and dealt in detail ll the leading features of the rnment's record and platform, g special emphasis upon what been done in the way of extend- agricultural education. Mr. So- also pointed out that if the Gov- ment is sustained, a fat stock , established by a Government nt, is likely to be secured for this rict.

he Government at Toronto es- lished the Hydro system and e cheap light and power pos- e. That Government is in favor the extension of radial railways. street railway in Peterborough ow operated by the Hydro Com- sion, and the city has decided to e it for the present under that nagement, because the system can be more readily extended by ines to Chemong, Young's t. Lakefield and other places in county.

Mr. Soden showed by figures how legislative grants to the schools Ontario have been increased five dred per cent. since 1905, and referred to the fact that the price of text books is now half what it was at that time, and has not increased even though the cost of production went up during the war. He also dwelt on the war record of the Administration, and the fact that Ontario had established at Orpington a modern and well equipped hospital for the care of its wounded heroes. Now that the war is over the Government is doing everything possible to re-establish the veterans in civil life.

As usual in all his addresses, Mr. Soden discussed the temperance question, explained fully all the questions of the referendum, and stated that so far as he was personally concerned he would vote "no" on all the points raised.

Mr. R. A. Charlton, one of the most active workers of the party in that district, presided, and the audience gave the speaker an attentive hearing, frequently applauding his remarks. In the election five years ago Young's Point gave Mr. Soden a majority of twenty. The indications are that on Monday this lead will be increased.

INTERESTING APPEAL CASE AT OSGOODE HALL DISPOSED OF—COUTERCLAIM DISMISSED.

The Ontario Court of Appeal, at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, dismissed the Appeal of Quinlan & Robertson Limited, of Montreal, to set aside the judgment of Charles Dawson, of Campbellford, against the Company for $24,000 and interest and costs, and dismissing the counterclaim of Quinlan & Robertson Limited against Mr. Dawson for $85,000.00. This action was brought by Gordon & O'Brien on behalf of Mr. Charles Dawson against Quinlan & Robertson Limited, in January, 1918, for $24,000 due Mr. Dawson as manager of the Dixon Bridge Works, of Campbellford, and the action was tried before the Honourable Mr. Justice Latchford, at Cobourg, at the November assizes, 1918, when the trial lasted four days, and judgment was given in favor of Charles Dawson for the amount of his claim and costs and the counterclaim of Quinlan & Robertson Limited for $85,000.00 against Charles Dawson was dismissed with costs.

Quinlan & Robertson appealed to an Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario, and the appeal was heard on the 22nd., 23rd., and 24th. days of September before the second Appellate Division and Judgment was reserved.

The Appellate Division has now handed out judgment sustaining Mr. Dawson's claim for $24,000 and interest since the date of trial, his costs of trial, and costs of appeal and dismissing the counterclaim of $85,000 brought by the company against Mr. Dawson.

Messrs. D. O'Connell and G. N. Gordon appeared for Mr. Dawson at the trial and on the appeal, and W. N. Tilley, K. C., of Toronto, and R. A. Pringle, K. C., of Ottawa, appeared for Quinlan & Robertson Limited.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1919.

IF MR. SODEN IS ELECTED.

IF MR. R. J. SODEN is elected, as he is likely to be by a handsome majority next Monday, West Peterborough will have an efficient and energetic representative in the Legislature. He is a good speaker who will be able to hold his own in the debates, a man who would keep his constituency in honorable prominence. His knowledge of public events is beyond all question, and his judgment on important questions is reliable. As a committee worker he would have few equals. When he went after anything for the riding he would never waver in his efforts until he had secured it. Since his defeat in 1914 he has been, according to political custom, recognized as the head of the Conservative party, so far as the Province is concerned, in this riding. During that time he has rendered West Peterborough more actual practical service, he has secured more for the riding, than did the elected member, who drew the indemnity for his attendance. This being the case, how much more would he not be able to accomplish if he were in a position to attend the sessions of the Legislature and work in committee?

Mr. Soden was defeated in 1914 simply because he was in advance of his party and of the Opposition on the temperance question. The Review supported him [illegible] for a candidate whose party could not go further than a compromise with the liquor interests.

The late Sir James Whitney did not agree with Mr. Soden in 1914, although he respected him, as he always did any man who had the courage of his convictions. Sir James told Mr. Soden before the last election that if he was successful at the polls he would devote at least one day of the first session to a non-partisan discussion of the temperance question and give Mr. Soden an opportunity to introduce a resolution in favor of total prohibition. If this secured a majority, Sir James Whitney promised—and he was a man who always kept his word—to introduce a prohibition bill.

Had Mr. Soden been elected in 1914 it is not unlikely that the temperance issue would have been given a new impetus in the Legislature and that West Peterborough would have the honor of a representative who made a definite stand for total prohibition and whose policy prevailed.

Mr. Soden was ahead of his party in 1914 and immeasurably in advance of the Opposition. His party has progressed in the past five years and overtaken him. Mr. Soden is the man to elect to support that party now.

WHEN THE LIBERALS VOTED FOR PROHIBITION.

THE LIBERAL MEMBERS of the Legislature, it is true, supported the Ontario Temperance Act when it was up for final adoption. Some of them did this all the more readily because they were of the opinion that they were putting the Hearst Government into a hole. Otherwise, how comes it that Hartley Dewart was elected leader of the party if there was no intention to take political advantage of the situation?

Mr. Dewart was not a member of the Legislature when the prohibitory law was enacted. His election was the first organized protest against the measure. But Mr Dewart has since his election opposed every amendment proposed in the House to make the enforcement of the Act more drastic.

THE LIBERALS' TEMPERANCE RECORD.

THE EXAMINER puts up a lame argument to show that the Liberals of this Province are the real friends of temperance, and, as usual, its article is incomplete. It tells something less than half the story, whether purposely or because it is suffering from its chronic affliction, a lack of knowledge of the political history of Ontario.

Harking back to the days of 1912, when the Liberal party, under a new leader and fresh from the country found themselves without a platform and in a painfully inconsequential minority, they sprung their abolish-the-bar cry, the Examiner tells how it was voted down and revived in 1914 and again in 1915, only to meet with the same fate. It certainly required consummate assurance on the part of the Liberals to parade their temperance policy again after it had been rejected by the voters and the party overwhelmed in a defeat that stopped just short of annihilation.

But the Examiner does not give all the story in connection with that famous flier of its party in the temperance cause, probably because it has no knowledge of the facts. Mr. Rowell was in favor of total prohibition, let it be here cited to his credit. He at least was sincere. But unanimity among his handful of followers as to a temperance policy was essential. Five of these followers were interested in liquor stores. They had no objection to closing the bars, but refused to turn the key on the stores. The result was the sorry compromise that the Province of Ontario as well as the Legislature rejected. The drinking man would not be inconvenienced by the closing of the bar-room provided he could still obtain all the liquor he wanted in a licensed shop.

To make sure of his ground, Mr. Rowell, before he announced his temperance policy, called all the Ontario publishers of Liberal newspapers to a conference in Toronto with the object of enlisting their support. In this conference the Examiner was represented. The idea of total prohibition was rejected by this convention as an unsafe political move. All but four of the newspaper publishers agreed to the compromise of closing the bars. Of the four who dissented, one was a weekly and the other three dailies, all of influence, and they objected to any interference with the license law as it existed at that time.

Mr. Rowell was the only sincere prohibitionist the Ontario Liberal party had as leader, but he was handicapped by his associates. And now these same Liberals, shouting temperance from the housetops, have read Mr. Rowell out of the party. He may not have been loyal to a discredited section of the Liberal party in 1917, but it must be said of him that he was loyal to his Empire and to his native land, faithful to political death to the men who were sweating blood in the defence of both.

The Examiner is unable to cite anything that the Liberals have done for temperance except while they were in opposition. When the devil is sick it is of common report that he shows some disposition to repent of his sins. The Liberals, according to their record as recounted by the Examiner, are righteous chiefly when in the minority and their virtue is in proportion to their numerical weakness.

When Premier Hearst was faced with the prohibition issue he did not call the editors of the Province into conference to court their support. He did what he thought was right, regardless of consequences to himself. There was nothing of compromise in the law which he enacted, and the machinery which he provided for its enforcement was complete. The Liberals retained the liquor interest as a working partner all the years they were in power. Sir James Whitney removed the traffic out of the realm of politics when he placed it under the control of an independent commission.

AND THERE ARE OTHERS.

"I HAVE ALWAYS voted for men rather than for parties," said Mr. Noble Kelly when he presided at Mr. R. J. Soden's meeting at Bridgenorth Friday night. "Both Mr. Soden and Mr. Gillespie are good friends of mine. I am, however, going to vote for Mr. Soden because he is supporting Premier Hearst, the man who has given Ontario the most advanced temperance legislation it has ever had."

Mr. Kelly is one of West Peterborough's most representative residents. He is a man with vast business interests in the community, one who enjoys the respect of a wide circle of friends. His words as quoted above are significant. It will be found, when the votes are counted, that there are many other electors of the same way of thinking.

MR. SODEN'S CIRCULAR

MR. SODEN addressed a circular letter to the voters of the riding, and a copy, falling into the hands of the Examiner, throws that journal into a pitiable case of hysterics. It is hard to see the occasion for this outbreak unless it be that the truths told in that circular are more than our contemporary can bear. One of the statements made by the Examiner, fighting like a cornered rat, is that Mr. Soden's appeal is an insult to the intelligence of the public.

Well, hardly, at least not so much of a jolt as the crepuscan editorial gush that appears in our contemporary, those gruesome products of unsophisticated journalistic adolescence. If the liquor interests are not working on behalf of the Liberals today, how does it come that the men engaged in the traffic moved heaven and earth to secure the election of Hartley Dewart in Toronto, to make him leader last summer over two temperance men who were candidates for the position? Why are the liquor men working now for the re-election of Mr. Dewart in his old constituency unless they regard him as their only hope?

No man, unless he is as dense as the Examiner itself, believes that there is unanimity in the Conservative party on the great issue. Neither is there among the Liberals themselves. But the main part is that Premier Hearst is in favor of prohibition, and The Review has faith enough in the electors to believe, unlike the Examiner, that their eyes are not holden nor yet is their vision obscured by partisan motes. There was anything but unanimity among the Liberals when Mr. Dewart was elected leader in a convention at which many of the present Liberal candidates were delegates. Why, then, be absurd, and claim that the party is a unit when it is not only at odds on this question, but has not yet healed the breach of 1917 on the war issue?

The Examiner has never lost an opportunity to discredit the Ontario Temperance Act. It did so one year ago when Hartley Dewart charged maladministration of the law by the License Commission, charges from which all concerned emerged with honor save Mr. Dewart himself. It is attempting to belittle the Act again when it accepts as gospel Mr. Dewart's recent allegations with regard to the Jewish church in Toronto, probably as great a slander as his boomerang of last winter. The Examiner could take the same stand against the Act now, with recent local revelations before it, except that it always avoids a fight at close quarters, but prefers the artillery style of warfare. There are violations of every law and questionable methods, often by those charged with its enforcement, but this cannot be held up as a reproach to those who gave that law effect. Five men convicted of murder are under sentence of death in the local jail. That is no reason to make light of the statute which is designed to protect human life.

PROVINCIAL PRESS ON THE CAMPAIGN

A Story of Harmony.
(Toronto Telegram.)

Peterboro Review says: "The local Conservative party goes into this campaign united as it never was before in its history." Same story comes from all over the province. U. F. O. and I. L. P. have not labored in vain, judging by signs of the times.

The Attitude of The Globe
(Belleville Intelligencer).

The Toronto Globe's political summary gives prominence to the statement of the Conservative paper in Peterborough, the Review, that if Mr. Gillespie the Liberal candidate there is beaten, "the reverse will not be due to his own demerits, but to his associations and the leadership under which it is his misfortune to serve." The Globe's heading over the item is "Likes candidate not the company he keeps." Editorially the Globe pays a tribute to Sir William Hearst's courage, and adds that "The Globe regrets greatly that equal courage has not been shown by Mr. Dewart in telling the electors what his personal attitude is towards the greatest issue before the people of Ontario," an act which it thniks puts all Liberal candidates at a disadvantage.

The Longest Course.
(Belleville Intelligencer)

Eletcors who mark their referendum ballots against the return of the bars can not consistently vote on the other ballot for a Dewart candidate. Sir Wm. Hearst and his Government bolished the bars, and the consistent lector who votes endorsation of that policy on the referendum ballot can not fail to back up that endorsation and make it effective by voting for a Hearst candidate.

A Great Record.
(Guelph Herald.)

Into this contest the Liberal-Conservative Government goes with a record brilliant in its display of progressive measures. It has lagged in nothing. It has to its credit policies that have made Ontario [illegible] national reputation. It has been democratic, even radical, in pursuit of the ideal in government. It has taken counsel with labor and capital to do justice to their mutual interests. It has promoted agricultural projects along the most modern lines. It has widened—and is widening—our school life by discarding old methods and adopting advanced ones based on sound knowledge of existing conditions.

Playing Safe.
(Owen Sound Sun-Times)

The situation is this. The Liberal party which has always claimed to be strongly in favor of the maximum possible restriction of the liquor traffic, finds itself lead by a man who is not a prohibitionist, and who will not even declare himself as in favor of retaining the measure of prohibition we have under the O. T. A. nor will he say which way he will vote on the referendum ballot.

Mr. Dewart's Charges.
(Kingston Standard)

Mr. Hartley Dewart has come out with the sensational charge that the Hearst Government has attempted to corrupt Jewish voters by allowing them to import thousands of bottles of "Vishnick," for use in the observance of Kiddush, and that the liquor is not what it is represented to be, but something very much stronger. But not only this; he claims that others than Jews have been allowed to obtain the liquor.

The charge is not at all likely to be proved true. In the first place the Jews would not stand for this sort of thing; they are a highly temperate race, obedient to the laws, good citizens in every way, and they would highly resent any such trick, anmore especially so when used in connection with their religion.

4	Are you in favor of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X

The above is a sample of the referendum ballot which will be submitted to the voters on October 20. Any person who is in favor of prohibition for Ontario will be well advised to mark the ballot as above. If this is done, there can be no question as to the intention of the elector.

To make it certain that your wishes in this respect will be given effect, that the Ontario Temperence Act as endorsed by the people, will be rigidly enforced when it comes to voting for one of the three candidates before the people, mark your ballot as shown in the following sample. Women voting for the first time should understand that they have a right to vote both on the referendum and for one candidate. To vote on the first alone, even when noes are recorded, would be a duty only half performed. Vote for the candidate who will support the Premier whose worth has been proved. Vote for R. J. Soden.

WORKING WOMEN WILL SUPPORT HEARST

"It doesn't matter how little the women know about politics," said a woman who is assisting in canvassing in connection with election day. "Every single woman knows about the referendum. And practically every woman has got it definately fixed in her mind which way she will vote on the referendum."

But it is amazing that you find some women who have the right to vote and have not yet grasped the fact that there is to be a general election throughout the province on October 20th., at the same time that the referendum is to be voted on.

If you believe all you hear, the big majority of the women are going to [illegible] ballot.

"Nobody could have called my husband a drunkard," said one hard working woman, but he did drink a lot. And I've noticed the difference the last three years. He's at home more, and he's better tempered, and he brings more money home."

Certain employers will tell you that before the Ontario Temperance Act was introduced, every week women would go to them appealing for an advance on the husband's salary. The man had got his pay, and spent it all on drink on Friday and Saturday. And now, say those employers, this condition practically does not exist. Merchants in the cities have no hesitation in telling of their observations. Before the Ontario Temperance Act was enacted certain women were constantly asking for credit in the stores, and their buying was confined to the barest necessities. Since the Act came into force the merchants say that those very women and their husbands go shopping together on Saturday nights, buying things that they never even looked at except with longing eyes before.

These are a very few of the results of the Ontario Temperance Act amongst the people who have been affected by it.

The Hearst Government duced the Ontario Temperance as a war time measure. At that the Prime Minister promised when the war was over, and soldiers were returned, the question of the liquor legislation would be submitted to the people. For the first time in the history Ontario, a political leader has faith on this great question.

CALEDONIAN CLUB RE-ORGANIZED

CLUB OF SCOTCHMEN ELECT OFFICERS AND MAKE PLANS FOR SEASON.

At a very enthusiastic and well attended meeting at the W. O. W. Hall, last evening the Caledonian Club of Scotchmen was reorganized.

The usual business was discussed and extensive plans made for a very profitable union this winter. The club is financially strong and the members and executive are determined to do everything in their power to make it feel like jolly old Scotland again.

A reception for the returned men will be held in the near future, and the war record shows that this club lived up to their noble descent in doing their part in fighting for their King and country. Sixty-four per cent of its members donned the khaki, nine of whom paid the supreme sacrifice.

A large number of new members were present last night and made welcome to the club, as will any other scotchman of the city who desire to join with their country-men, in having a good old country fashioned time.

The next meeting will be held on Friday, Oct. 24th, at 8 p. m., in the W. O. W. Hall.

The officers elected last night are as follows:

Hon. Pres., John Mayor; Pres., Edwrad Hardie; Vice Pres., Robert Hendry; Secretary, Thomas McArthur; Recording Secretary, John A. Dick, Robt. French, Thomas Smith Stroyan Leith.

Auditors: D. Stewart and J. Grusch.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF WESLEY CHURCH

YEARS OF OLDEST MEMBER OF CHURCH APPROACH THE CENTURY MARK.

An event which will be remembered by the citizens of North Smith, took place when the congregation of Wesley Church celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its building on Sunday, Oct. 5th., and the two days following.

The church which is a substantial brick structure situated three miles south of Buckhorn or Hall's Bridge, has provided for half a century, a meeting place in which it's pastors have ministered to the spiritual needs of the community. In preparation for the anniversary, the interior had been renovated and painted, and the tasteful decoration added much to the enjoyment of the worshippers.

At 10.30 in the morning of Sunday, Oct 5th., the door was opened by Mr. John Croft, the oldest resident of the vicinity, whose years approach the century mark. Service was then conducted by Rev. C. S. Deeprose, of Montreal, a former pastor, whose eloquent discourse on the subject of "World Building," was much appreciated by the large crowd attending.

In spite of unfavorable weather conditions an even greater crowd attended the evening service, in which the reverend gentleman discussed in a scholarly and yet practical manner, "The Saving Ministry of the Gospel."

Not less edifying was the historical evening, which was held on Monday, Oct 6th., in which Mr. Stephen Harrison, the recording steward, read an interesting and instructive account of the church and its pastors. It was, also, the privilege of the audience to listen to an address, "Our Paramount Aim," by Rev. C. S. Deeprose.

In the evening of Tuesday, Oct. 7, a very large crowd assembled to the tea-meeting, to enjoy the good things which the ladies of the congregation had prepared. The door receipts totalled over one hundred and fifty dollars. In the program following, Rev. Capt. Parry, recently returned from overseas, and Rev. S. F. Dixon, of Lakefield, each addressed a short earnest message to the audience, and the contributions of both local and outside talent were much enjoyed. The benediction pronounced by Rev. S. F. Dixon, after singing of the National Anthem, closed an evening which was pronounced by all, a great success.

NUT KRUST BREAD CO. STARTING HERE

MANUFACTURE BY ELECTRICITY AND IN FULL VIEW OF PUBLIC

The Nut Krust Bread Company have completed arrangements with the City Trust to take over the lease for the store now occupied by Spencer's Barber shop.

Mr. Williams, their representative was in the city recently completing arrangements and stated that they intended to commence work here by Nov 1st.

This company have three or four branches in the city of Toronto, and their bread has been so appreciated there, that they decided to extend their business to this city. They manufacture their bread solely by electricity and in full sight of the public. In Toronto they have one of their bakers operating in the window of their store, at all times, and undoubtedly they will adopt the same plan here.

This is a rather modern method of baking bread, but it has proved so efficient that it is spreading very rapidly. Peterborough is to be congratulated on receiving this company, and this store on the most central part of our business section will add considerably to the appearance of that section.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS INCREASED SERVICE

TRANSCONTINENTAL TRAIN

EVERY DAY IN THE WEEK

Toronto - Winnipeg - Vancouver - Victoria In Effect October 5th.

A daily Transcontinental service between Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria, is the principal feature announced in the Canadian National Railways Fall and Winter Time Table.

This train will leave Toronto 9:15 p.m. daily and will be equipped with up-to-date sleeping, dining, first-class day coach, tourist and colonist cars. Between Toronto and Winnipeg there will also be a compartment-observation library car.

A parlor car will be attached for the convenience of passengers, while travelling through the Rockies, so they may enjoy, in the utmost comfort, the magnificent scenery for which the Canadian National route is famous.

Further particulars can be obtained from Passenger Officers of Canada's National system of Railways.

When Tobacco Was Taboo.

In 1638 the Massachusetts general court ordered, a writer comments, "that no man shall take any tobacco within 20 poles of any house, or so near as may endanger the same." In 1708 an act was passed forbidding the carrying of fire through the streets except in a covered vessel, smoking, or having in one's possession "any lighted pipe or segar" in the streets or on the wharves. The penalty was $2. If the offender was in a ropewalk, the penalty was from $5 to $100. This prohibition of 1708 was not repealed until 1890.

Battleship Reading Room.

An interesting innovation will be made in the designing of the battleship New York, which is now under construction at the Brooklyn navy yard. This is a large and commodious room in a location very accessible to visitors, which is to be used as a library and reception room for the members of the crew. In this room is to be the crew's library, and the room is to be fitted with reading tables, writing desks, paper and magazine racks and chairs. Adjacent to this room are to be lavatory facilities for the use of guests of the crew. This provision is new in warship design.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Coughs.

Experience has shown that there are two distinct kinds of coughs: one proceeding from an affection of the lungs and air tubes, as in a simple cold, the other proceeding from offences in the stomach. The long cough is a symptom which necessarily requires attention lest serious consequences ensue. The stomach cough is a much more simple matter and may easily be got rid of. It is caused by the offensiveness of the food and drink which are put into the stomach. A knowledge of this fact ought to lead persons so affected to ponder a little on the nature of their ailment and the peculiarity of their digestive powers. Some stomachs agree best with alkalies, others with acids. One person likes a bitter substance, another a substance which is sour. The person who desires a satisfactory explanation of these circumstances will consult his own physician. Many stomach coughs arise from an undue love of sweets—sweet tea, sweet drinks, sweet cake, sweet custard and all kinds of confectionery. To some this love of sweets is in no way injurious, but to others it is exceedingly baneful.

FOCH MOURNS SON.

Commander Who Led Allies to Victory Lost Only Son in Battle.

The ending of the war does not mean the ending of the troubles of the generalissimo who conducted the operations during the last eventful summer. With the laurels of victory that a grateful world has bestowed on Marshal Foch there is also a legacy of deep sorrow. He is returning home a desolate father, to mourn the death of his only son, who died in battle.

Some of the facts concerning Foch's career, have just come to light. When he was about eighteen, he went to Metz to become a student at the College of Saint Clement. But the war with Prussia came. Storm broke where serenity had been, and he rushed away from college to join the army.

If anything very thrilling happened during those days of soldiering there is no record of it, and as soon as the fight was over he went back to school. But what a change had come over the town! Metz was no longer French, but German, and the Prussian eegle soared where once the tricolor had floated. Soldiers of William and Bismarck were quartered even in the college, and imperious German officers sneered at the students, who were compelled to salute them. It was bitter medicine for a French boy to swallow. Soon afterward, when he was not quite twenty, came word from Nancy that examinations were to be held for the Polytechnic of Paris, where youths were trained for service of the state. He passed with honor and went to the great seat of learning, where he found another boy from the Pyrenees country and one who loved it as much as he did. His name was Joseph Censire Joffre. Side by side these two worked in the classroom, and side by side, some forty years afterward, they worked for the salvation of France.

He was graduated with honor, and then was sent to Fontainebleau for further military training. From that day his life was a series of deserved successes. Steadily he advanced from a lieutenant through the various ranks of an army officer until he became a major, but there was nothing spectacular about his rise. No exploits on the red path of adventure took him to far corners of the world or caused him to be acclaimed at home as a conquering hero, for unlike Marshal Joffre, who had years in Indo-China and a brilliant victory over the Tuaregs in the marshes of Soudan, Major Foch was stationed at various posts in France. Thus twenty years passed and then we find him in Paris, a professor of military history, strategy and applied tactics in the Superior School of War. From there he was sent to the field again, and this move was followed by other changes of rank as well as location, for he was steadily promoted, until in 1913, he became a general and was assigned to the command of the Twentieth Corps and stationed at Nancy.

In a dozen other places he proved, as he had proved in Lorraine and at the Marne, that he was the greatest strategist in the world. So what was more natural than, when Gen. Joffre retired, that the Government's choice for his successor should have been Ferdinand Foch? But there were dark days ahead, for they faced a mighty and remorseless foe, and as the weeks dragged on and a crushing German offensive came, it was decided by the allied chiefs that one master mind must direct the allied operations, and all thoughts turned to the slender, blue-eyed commander, Ferdinand Foch.

"His own son was of that multitude of gallant Frenchmen who died on the field of honor, and, as one writer says, 'The laying down of arms meant to him not leisure to wear laurels, but the right of a broken-hearted old father to sit again by his hearth, desolate now, thinking back upon happy days and forward to a reassembled group in the house not made with hands.'"

Germany's Paper Yarn Industry.

The importance of the paper yarn industry, which has been greatly extended in Germany during the past year, is indicated by a statement in the Frankfurter Zeitung, quoted in Commerce Reports, to the effect that about 88,000,000 pounds are being manufactured annually. Manufacturing processes are constantly being improved and paper yarn can be used successfully in the manufacture of various fabrics and garments, excepting only body lined and the better sorts of overwear. Workmen's clothes, bed and table linen, curtains, sailcloth and imitation leather are among the articles that can now be made. In many fabrics, we read, the paper yarn is combined with wool, shoddy, cotton waste, etc., and the supply of fabrics for the clothing industry is thus enlarged. It is not to be supposed that all these articles will disappear in Germany upon the return of peace. The demands for them will continue undiminished for some time, and some of them may retain their places in the market permanently. The weaving mills are now likewise more active. Army orders, as well as civilian purchases, have been frequent, and the auxiliary industries, including paper cutting and the fitting of paper fabrics, are better employed."

The use of paper yarn for sewing thread is also increasing, owing chiefly to the scarcity of cotton and linen thread. The preparation, twisting, etc., have been improved to such an extent that the paper threads are strong and durable enough to be used in the manufacture of coarse clothing and sacks.—Current Opinion.

Sensitive Electrical Apparatus.

So sensitive is an electrical apparatus invented by a French scientist that it will detect the presence of one part of bicromate of potash in 200,000,000 parts of water.

In 1917 the production of coal in the United States is estimated to have amounted to 637,000,000 tons.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE WEST RIDING OF PETERBOROUGH

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having again received the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Convention of West Peterborough as a candidate for Parliamentary honors at the ensuing Provincial Election, to be held on October 20th, I desire to solicit your hearty support in favor of my election.

WAR WORK

Having represented you for the past five years (war years), I can safely say that during that period, while every effort was being made to win the war—my record is known to you all, and on that record I ask you to judge me on the position I have taken on all measures affecting the war work.

TEMPERANCE QUESTION

When I was elected in 1914 I stated my views on the Temperance question during that campaign; I pledged myself to vote for Temperance legislation on all occasions brought forward by whatever party, and the record in the House will show that I carried out that pledge.

The Referendum vote is to be taken on the same date as the Provincial election, October 20, and if I am again elected your representative I promise to give my whole-hearted support to the Government elected to carry out the will of the people as expressed by their votes on the Referendum ballot.

AGRICULTURAL LEGISLATION.

During the years preceding 1914 every one agreed that the Department of Agriculture was asleep. The very first opportunity offered in the House I introduced the question of a forward movement in Agriculture, and, along with other Liberal members of the House, have earnestly advocated a more strenuous progressive policy in Agriculture.

The shortage of production, the problem of farm help, and the numerous perplexing questions affecting the farmer, cannot be solved unless we seriously consider the cause and apply the remedy.

During the past few years of unrest in the country, due mainly to excessive living costs, I have advocated that demonstration farms be established in different counties, and increased attention be paid to the education to be received in our Agricultural College and Experimental Farms, and that the knowledge gained at the Agricultural College be put into practice on Demonstration Farms, where a profit and loss account could be kept, and the costs of producing 100 pounds of milk or a pound of pork, or any of the many products of the farm, could be ascertained and established, such information being sadly lacking today. By such a system of education the farm would be looked upon as a business manufacturing plant, that would attract the best brains to the development of the greatest asset in Canada today—the farm. Our production is unlimited. The markets of the world are calling for food, and our own citizens living from hand to mouth at tremendous prices, wondering what the next six months have in store for them.

PROVINCIAL HIGHWAYS

Our highways need much repair. Auto and truck traffic is becoming daily increased, and we must develop a road policy which will make for hauling our produce to market as cheaply as possible. To this matter I promise to give my best thought.

EDUCATION

Education, I am pleased to say, is in the hands of a new Minister, in whom we hope for great things. I believe in a separate education for the city and rural districts. An education in the rural districts to educate the boy and girl in the great lessons of Agriculture, making two blades of grass grow where one grew before, developing the average cow of Ontario today, which gives 5,000 pounds of milk in a milking period of 10,000 pounds, producing a pound of pork or beef at a lower cost, and giving to the world the blessing which we most need—a reduction in the high cost of living.

THE LABOR QUESTION

Regarding the important question of Labor, my own policy has been to treat Labor as I would wish to be treated myself. I have had a good deal of experience with labor of various kinds and conditions, and have never had any trouble along that line, and do not expect to have any.

OUR RETURNED HEROES

To me, the welfare of the returned soldiers and soldiers' wives is one of the most essential duties of our country. Therefore I promise that I will give my hearty support to every movement calculated to promote their very best interests. The soldiers who fought for me for five years deserve, and may expect to receive, my earnest consideration during the remaining years of my life.

THE WOMAN VOTE.

I am delighted to know that the women are to enjoy equal privileges with men in the use of the franchise at this election, and in the exercise of this privilege I have the greatest faith in their good judgment and purifying influence. Their power with the ballot on October 20, especially with the Prohibition and Labor problems, will, I feel certain, be of far-reaching effect. I will, therefore, consider the votes of the ladies counted in my favor at the approaching election to be instruction to take high grounds on all matters calculated to elevate the morals of this community as well as of the whole Dominion.

CONCLUSION

These questions I have dealt with are, to my mind, the outstanding questions of the day. If I am elected again as your representative, I promise to give the best of my ability, my mature judgment on all questions affecting the interests of the West Riding of Peterborough, the Province of Ontario, the Dominion of Canada, and the British Empire, of which we today are so justly proud.

Thanking you, ladies and gentlemen, for your support in the past, and soliciting your support again on the 20th day of October, I remain,

Your obedient servant,
GEO. A. GILLESPIE.

Vote "YES" to all Four Questions

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—a solid four Yes's will be your only guarantee that you will get that sane, fair and just compromise that is needed in Ontario—the sale of light, non-intoxicating beer and wine generally, and the sale of pure spirituous liquors through Government agencies only.

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—that is your only sure guarantee that you will get careful consideration to your vote on each question.

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—support to the limit the broad-minded men and women of the Citizens' Liberty League who conscientiously believe that the unsatisfactory Ontario Temperance Act must be repealed and new legislation enacted more in keeping with the demands of all sections of the people.

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—support the labor unions, soldier organizations and thousands of the rank and file of the citizens of this Province who want a more palatable yet absolutely non-intoxicating beer.

Don't Split Your Vote on October 20th—You can be assured that those in favor of the Ontario Temperance Act as it now stands will vote a solid "NO" to all four questions. The citizens of this Province who desire that changes should be made in the Ontario Temperance Act will actually kill one another's vote and so make ineffective their desire for a change, without they vote a solid "YES" on all four questions. If four voters who desire liquor in some form go to the polls and vote "YES" only to the particular question he or she favors, the following table will clearly show how these four voters will really be casting their vote in favor of retaining the Ontario Temperance Act, with a total of four Yes votes and twelve No votes.

KOREAN CIVILIZATION

NATIVES IN NORTH HAVE NEVER SEEN A WHITE MAN.

They Retain All Sorts of Strange Beliefs and Still Drink the Hot Blood of Wild Animals Under the Impression That It Gives Them Strength—Musan Is a Wonderful Ancient City.

BECAUSE of the widespread agitation concerning the future political status of Korea, and the charges of foreign persecution there, there will be special interest taken in the following facts concerning one corner of "the hermit kingdom."

"Although Korea has a civilization extending nearly 4,000 years in the past, many of the natives in the north have never seen a white man, says Roy C. Andrews.

"They are living among the hills to-day much as did their ancestors centuries ago, worshipping mythical gods in the rocks and trees on every mountain top, keeping their women in semi-slavery and dying in ignorance that beyond the narrow confines of their own peninsula lies a world replete with undreamed-of wonders.

"Wrapped in the mantle of Oriental seclusion, for centuries Korea successfully guarded the secrets of her mountains and her people; but at last the clamor of foreigners at her doors could no longer be stilled and she yielded reluctantly, inch by inch, although realizing that the foundations of her weak Government were crumbling beneath her.

"It was in 1882 that the first treaty with Korea was signed, and foreigners took up their residence with official sanction at Chemulpo, the seaport of the capital, Seoul. Even with this foothold in the new country, the unwelcome visitors pushed their way but slowly into other parts of the kingdom, and as late as 1897 only a relatively small portion had been visited by white men.

"After the Russian-Japanese War of 1904, however, when the country was freely open to foreigners and its railway had been completed, the exploration of the northern part progressed by leaps and bounds, until the only extensive unknown area lay along the north central boundary between the Tumen and Yalu rivers.

"This was said to be a region of treacherous swamps, densely forested streams and gloomy canons. A vast [illegible], the ghostly peak of the Long White Mountain, wonderfully beautiful in its robes of glistening pumice. The secret of its summit, where the 'Dragon Prince's Pool' lies far down in the ancient crater, had been learned as early as 1709 by two Jesuit missionaries, coming from the north through Manchuria, but the approaches to its base from the south and west in Korea had never been traversed by a white man.

"Musan was a revelation. Here, on the very edge of Korea, lies this wonderful ancient city, its grim old walls bearing five centuries of history. It was like stepping backward to another world, into a story of the Arabian Nights.

"Few white men have been fortunate enough to wander inland to the gates of this ancient city. During the Russo-Japanese War several Russians took refuge there, and since then a half-dozen foreigners have discovered it; but, except for these stragglers, Musan lies unknown to the Western world. The great central palace, or reception hall, remains intact, and close by, in partial ruins, is the temple guest-house. The smaller public buildings, the gates, the watch towers and, most of all, the walls themselves, each one has its own peculiar fascination, telling its own story or adding a chapter to that of its neighbor.

"We spent nearly three weeks hunting there. These northern tigers are splendid animals, more beautiful than their relatives of India or the Malay Peninsula, and range among the bitterly cold mountains of China, Korea and Manchuria, far up into Siberia.

"On the first day's hunt at Hosando a deer was shot. The bullet, passing through both lungs, filled the thorax with clotted blood, and as soon as the animal was opened, Paik, my Korean gun-bearer, plunged his face into the half-liquid mass, drinking and eating until the last drop was gone; then removing the steaming red liver, he cut it into slices, swallowing them as fast as possible.

"I was tremendously surprised, but learned afterward that the Koreans believe the blood of a deer or any wild animal, if drunk when warm, to be a splendid tonic. Tigers' claws, whiskers, bones and teeth are especially valuable, and preparations made from these materials were often given to soldiers before a battle or any especially hazardous enterprise, since they were believed to indicate great bravery."

Spiders Walk Straight.

Spiders have so many legs that it does not seem to matter which way they walk, writes Marion E. Bailey, in Boys and Girls Ask-at-Home-Questions," but most of them really do walk straight ahead in the direction of their eyes. If it is necessary they will take a quick side step, and some of them can jump, but they can get over the ground pretty fast just by walking straight ahead, and that is what most of them do.

First Private English Telephone.

The first telephone ever placed in a private English residence is still to be seen at Marlborough House. It was made in 1878, on board the warship Thunderer, and was subsequently set up between the schoolroom and the boudoir of the Princess of Wales.

She Knew.

"Madam," announced the new maid, "your husband is lying unconscious in the reception hall, with a large box beside him and crushing a paper in his hand."

"Ah," cried her mistress, in ecstasy, "my new hat has come!"

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Raw Meat Juice Cure.

Professor Charles Richet, to whom the Nobel prize for medicine was awarded last year, declares that if a person suffering with tuberculosis will go to a slaughter house daily and drink the fresh juice extracted from eight or ten pounds of raw beef he will be cured within three years.

FREEZING HOT.

Where Ice Has Been Used to Warm Things Up a Bit.

Keeping things warm with ice sounds absurd, but it is now becoming an established practice. Eggs and other perishable goods that would be ruined by freezing during shipment in the winter—are often kept good during cold snaps by placing ice with them in refrigerator cars. Why it works in this manner no one positively knows. At the last congress on refrigeration this queer freak was brought up for discussion and a few theories were offered.

One man told of shipping two carloads of eggs last winter on the same day by the same route to the same destination and in similar cars. One car was packed thoroughly with straw to keep the eggs from freezing and ice was placed in the other car with no straw. There was severe cold weather during the railroad trip, and when the destination was reached it was found that none of the iced eggs had frozen, but most of the eggs protected by straw were spoiled by the cold.

An Ohio engineer offered the opinion that, with ice in a car, the air mixes less with the outside freezing air through crannies and so keeps a low—but not too low—temperature fairly constant.

Though ice never gets above 32 degrees in temperature and hence can have no direct heating effect, he suggested that the peculiar qualities of ice may cause it to absorb surrounding cold in a sense. Another opinion offered was that, with ice in a car, the air inside the car circulates freely, much more freely than without ice, and that freezing is hindered in moving air.—Saturday Evening Post.

TRAVELS OF COLUMBUS.

His Record Dead May in Time Outdo His Record Alive.

The proposal to take the body of Christopher Columbus to Panama for exhibition recalls to mind that this would be the pioneer's sixth resting place since he died in 1506. He is more traveled in death than in life.

Columbus was buried in Valladolid, Spain, his body being exhumed a few years later and recommitted to earth at the Chartreuse convent, Seville. Here it was only allowed to rest a very short period, being taken across the Atlantic—then, of course, many months' journey—in 1536 and buried for the third time in the cathedral of Santo Domingo.

After a lapse of 250 years, in 1795, part of the island passed to France, so once again the patriotic Spaniard interrupted the national hero's rest to rebury him at Santiago. Then when Cuba was lost to Spain the body was taken back to Seville, where it now lies in the cathedral.

If Columbus is taken across to Panama this year he will have beaten his own Atlantic record in life.—Madrid Cor. New York World.

The Use of Slang.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler declares that the widespread use of slang is threatening the purity of English speech. The president of Columbia university has uttered a timely warning that all thinking persons should heed. Slang springs from the uneducated classes and, like disease and other unwholesome things, is contagious. Evil communications corrupt speech as well as manners. It is only by reading good literature and associating with the cultivated classes that we can become masters of good English. Our citizens should labor for the maintenance of the highest standards of diction in order that the English language may be preserved pure and undefiled.—New York Herald.

FEMALE BOOKBINDERS.

Beautiful Volumes Appeal to Many Collectors.

Women are taking up work as bookbinders.

There are more women than men doing fine profession work in binding, illuminating, etc., presumably because it is chiefly the leisure class that interests itself in the work and America can number but few men in that class. Women in England and in France have taken up the work seriously, too, but there are no signs there that men mean to relinquish their hold on it such as we see here. In the Guild of Bookworkers, a New York society, there are eighty women members, more than half the entire membership.

In England the enemies of fine books are considered to be "firewater, bookworms and women craftsmen," and here, too, the same trade union rules prevail to keep a woman from apprenticing herself to a binder in order to perfect herself in the various steps that lead to complete mastery of the art.

Some persons see in the high price of leather no more deprivation than fewer shoes—or perhaps none. There are more esthetic issues involved. What of levant morocco, of niger, of oases, dearer to the heart of the binder than any sole leather for her heels? Such leathers have gone up to four times their pre-war value.

Women are making books for men to buy, for as book collectors women do not figure in the market at all nowadays. It is easy enough to fancy the collection of Du Barry, whose coat of arms adorn many a famous volume. La Pompadour made books herself, and there is in existence a collection of her drawings—or ornaments, vases, etc.—bound in olive morocco in exquisite taste, the whole made by her own hand for Louis XV.

But the only English queen who was a genuine collector and a real book lover was Queen Charlotte, who actually kept a servant trained especially to pick up first editions on old stalls. One of her famous books, richly bound, is "A Plan for Female Education."

There is still work for calligraphers among the makers of editions de luxes and women still do it professionally. There was once an Esther Inglis who wrote marvelous little manuscripts, miniatures, in fact, for royalty. She lived in the fifteenth century and to have her sign her manuscript, no matter if it were the Psalms of David, and sometimes add her picture to the illuminations was evidently acceptable to her princely patrons.

A love of the beautiful book was never easy to gratify except for royal persons or royal fortunes. That may explain why women of average means possessed of that love are taking up the art of bookmaking to-day.

Japan Seeing a Great Light.

As the news comes out of the East, circumstances are apparently moving toward a distinct change of Japanese policy in Korea. A cartoon in the Jiji-shimpo undoubtedly reflects a wider opinion than that of the readers of this one Tokio journal; it shows a Japanese in military uniform trying to quiet a crying infant, and the perpendicular Japanese caption, translated into English, frankly admits that "Grandpa Japan can never quiet Baby Korea till he takes off that rattling sabre." The Jiji-shimpo, incidentally, is credited with being an authority on the Korean question, and is regarded as a conservative journal. All over the nation people are questioning the wisdom of trying to quiet Baby Korea without discarding the sabre, and expressing in various ways their agreement with the article by Prof. Fukudu of the Tokio College of Commerce, printed in the Tokio Asahi. "Korean discontent," he says, "is deep-rooted and widespread. It cannot be dispelled without removing the fundamental cause of our Korean failure. The fundamental cause is the militaristic character of our administration." One may hope, indeed, that Japan officially is on the way to agree, as so many of her citizens and editors evidently agree already, with the Korean Declaration of Independence when it said: "To-day Korean independence would mean not only life and happiness for us, but also it would mean Japan's departure, from an evil way and exaltation to the place of true protector of the East, so that too, China, even in her dreams, would put all fear of Japan aside. This thought," added the Korean declaration, "comes from no minor resentment, but from a large hope for the future."

Five Minutes To Eleven has not yet come for those who stayed at home

The last lap of the war for those men was indeed a smashing, glorious finish!

While the fighting ended at five minutes to eleven on the morning of the eleventh of November last year, the war has not yet ended for those of us who stayed at home.

Our "Five Minutes to Eleven" has not yet come. There is a great deal more for us to do, before our war job is finished.

There are still heavy demobilization expenses to clean up. In a few short months we have brought home the troops that were transported overseas during four years of war---four years' transportation expenses crowded into a few months.

Many millions are still required to complete payment of demobilization and for other purely military expenditures.

The Victory Loan 1919 which is necessary to meet these war obligations is the great objective in the last lap for those who stayed at home

The Canadian Corps, during the war, never lost a gun,—never once retreated and never failed to take an objective

Keeping that glorious record in our minds, and carrying that "no surrender" fighting spirit into the new Victory Loan campaign, there can be only one result :—Success, overwhelming and triumphant

When the figures for the Victory Loan 1919 are totalled up, the result will show the world that those of us who stayed at home have taken another glorious objective on the road to our "Five Minutes to Eleven."

Victory Loan 1919

CONVENTION OF TEACHERS ENDS

PRESIDENT DOWNEY DEPLORES WASTED EFFORT IN OUR EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

SOCIAL UNREST AND SCHOOLS

SUBJECT OF INTERESTING ADDRESS BY PRINCIPAL KENNER OF COLLEGIATE

The teachers of the City and County Institutes who are holding their annual conventions in the city, met in a joint session in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, Friday morning, at 9 o'clock

Mr. R. F. Downey, President of the city association, occupied the chair. The programme which was to have occupied the day was completed at noon, owing to the absence of Dr. Daudeno, the Education Department's representative who was to have spoken both morning and afternoon.

President's Address.

The opening number on the program was an address from the President, Mr Downey, who took for his subject, "Waste in Education." Of the many factors which are responsible for such a condition, the speaker dealt, with a few of the most potent, viz:

The course of study as hitherto outlined. The need of Consolidated Schools in rural districts with their larger grounds, better equipment, libraries, assembly halls, etc.

The multiplicity of authority in rural sections. Meaning the constant changing of trustees, many of whom have little interest in educational matters beyond the securing of a teacher who must be obtained at the lowest possible salary.

Poor attendance is a constant worry to both teacher and pupil.

Lack of permanence in the teaching profession, numbers of teachers are leaving the profession for more remunerative employment.

Poor organization. Many of our prominent educators advocate a public school course, that may end when a child is at the age of twelve.

An instrumental duet was given by Misses Morrow and Caldwell. Miss Shearer gave a pleasing vocal solo.

Social Unrest Discussed.

"Social Unrest and the School," was the subject on which Mr. H. H. Kenner was asked to speak. So able and comprehensive a nature was the address, that a motion was passed to the effect that it be published in the city press and it is the hope of the Institute that Mr. Kenner may be prevailed upon to accede to their wishes. The problems touched upon were such as should be of keen interest to the public at large and to all bodies having connection with educational matters.

Some thoughts brought out were, that the storm and trials of the war years, the relaxation brought about by peace, the general tendency to laxity in the home, the social life in which the immature are allowed to mingle without requisite supervision are problems confronting the parent the teachers of Sunday Schools and of even the higher forms of our Public Schools. The teacher finds themselves struggling with difficulties connected with ordinary living. Feeling the responsibility of their work they hesitate to use the means employed by other bodies of workers to assert their just rights, and the people are slow in recognizing their responsibility in this regard.

The Labor Problem.

Capt. J. E. R. Munroe dealt with the "Labor Problem Past and Present." Trade Unions of modern times are certainly responsible for the elimination of the unfortunate conditions under which life was made miserable for the working classes. He said the time must come when false power must be swept away, when all might not be rich, but none be poor.

A Trio rendered by Misses Armstrong, Fusee and McKay, was much enjoyed. Miss Cecil Caldwell was the accompanist for all the musical numbers.

Benefits of Reading.

The closing paper of the Convention was one on Composition by Mr. Gould, of King Edward School. This subject has shown great improvement in the last generation, due to the fact that children read a great deal more than heretofore. Public and School libraries are the crying need of the day and children should be encouraged to read a great deal, under proper supervision.

LINE UP AND FISH.

Quaint Method of Organized Fishing Still Prevails

Three hundred anglers stand or sit on the bank of the canal in the glare of the summer sun. They are in "extended order," and stretch nearly two miles. A whistle is blown. Three hundred rods are lifted up, 300 lines swish through the air, and 300 baited hooks fall lightly on the water. The fishing contest has begun.

This is a common sight in the rural parts of England, says the London Mail. In Yorkshire and Lancashire there are thousands of fishing clubs, and every club has its match. Indeed, the match is sometimes the cause of the club's existence, for men who are not anglers will promote a club solely for the sake of the day in the country the match provides.

The affair is worked on carefully regulated lines. A weekly payment is made into the club. Prizes are bought, ranging from a case of pipes to half a suite of furniture, and always including the favored copper kettle. There are so many pipes that every competitor may get one, even if he does not attend the match; and sometimes, if the prizes are given out in money, members may actually receive more than they have paid in.

The day of the contest a two-mile length of the canal is pegged out and numbered. Competitors draw their numbers out of a bag and proceed to their stations. No man knows where he will fish till he has drawn his numbered ticket. After putting the tackle together they study the rules while waiting the starting signal. Each man must stick to his peg and not encroach on his neighbor's lengths. Scouts patrol the lines to see that all is fair and square.

When the match is over rods are taken down and luckless anglers depart for the village inn, while those with fish stay at their pegs till the weighers-in come down the line with scales and book and catches in terms of weight and numbers. These are announced later at the inn.

Do not jump to the conclusion that these affairs lack sport or interest. No two matches are alike. Sometimes a hundred contestants may not catch a dozen pounds of fish among them, and a prize of a half a ton of coal may go to a man with an ounce of fish. Another time the catch may be reckoned nearly in hundredweights, and the winner may have ten or fifteen pounds of fish to his credit.

Comical Cure-Alls.

"Faith and foolishness will cure any disease," says the Cynic, and judging by some of the miraculous wholesale cures, there seems to be some ground for the assertion.

There is the historical episode of the Prince of Orange, for instance, who during one of his campaigns, cured those of his soldiers who were dying of scurvy by a piece of quackery.

With his doctors, who were in the secret, he said he had procured a medicine — really a decoction of camomile, wormwood and camphor— of the greatest rarity and value from the east. It was so strong that two or three drops would impart a healing virtue to a gallon of water. The men took the medicine with faith and cheerful faces, and, so historians tell us, grew well rapidly.

The most amazing cures are claimed to have been brought about by magnetism, the originator of the idea being a Jesuit priest, who invented steel plates of a peculiar form, which he applied to the naked body as a sure for several diseases.

His idea was copied by many other mesmerists and magnetizers. An American, practicing as a surgeon in Leicester Square, invented and took out a patent for the celebrated "Metallic Tractors" — two small pieces of metal so strongly magnetized that they would cure gout, rheumatism, palsy, and, in fact, almost every disease the human frame is subject to, if applied externally to the affected part. He gained a respectable fortune from thousands of deluded clients, until he was exposed.—Tit-Bits.

St. Helena the Good.

St. Helena according to a colonial report, appears to have no real criminals. Stone-throwing by night was for a short period the most serious offense. Last year no person was committed for trial; 104 out of 210 summary cases came under the education, road tax, and poor law ordinances and 77 trivial cases were dealt with by the police without bringing them to court. Three instances of flogging are recorded, under the juvenile smoking ordinance.

HUNTING SEASON THIS AUTUMN DOES NOT OPEN UNTIL NOVEMBER FIFTH

Every Nimrod Will Be Allowed to Kill Only One Deer Instead of Two as in 1919—Partridge Must not Be Shot

Despite the fact that M. H. C. o'Living is still with us, the Ontario Government has decided that this year the dear hunters will have to go back to the old rule of the hunter one deer. Last year, as a "war measure" and to ensure the public a little meat in Ontario, the law was changed to allow two deer per hunter.

There have been reports that there was a large slaughter of deer last year, but many an old hunter will tell you that last year was the first of many that he didn't get his count and many didn't even get one deer. This was accounted for because the wolves were bad in the northern hunting grounds of Ontario, and the deer were chased down to southern portions of the hunter's paradise. Those who hunted their got their count as a rule.

Date is Changed.

Another change that has been made this year is that deer hunting does not start until November 5th, instead of November 1st. Many hunters are rather opposed to this, but the majority are satisfied. They can have their fifteen days' shooting just the same, as the season does not close to November 20th.

The season for moose, reindeer and caribou, south of the C. P. R., is set for the same date — November 5th to 20th — but north of the C.P.R. line shooting has already begun, for the first day was October 1st and the last day is November 30th. Again only one of these can be taken, but no cow moose, young moose, reindeer or caribou under one year of age may be shot.

No Partridge This Year.

Partridge hunters must wait another year before they can shoot this game, as there is no open season this year, but ducks, squirrels, rabbits and hares are ready for the hunter's trusty shotgun.

Wild turkeys may be shot; that is to say, if any can be found in Ontario, but the Review is reliably informed that a real wild turkey is almost as scarce in Ontario now as hen's teeth. It may be well to state that the Government has fixed the hours for shooting game, and hunters are forbidden to use their rifles between sunset and sunrise.

Every hunter, whether a resident in Ontario or not, must take out a license before he can go after deer. Non-resident licenses for deer and moose are $25, while resident licenses are $3 for deer and $5 for moose.

Don't Waste Meat

There was a time when dealers could sell wild duck and wild fowl, but new ergulations have been made during the past two years which forbid this sale. The bag allowed for a duck hunter is 200 ducks a season before they take this amount that there is a game law which says: "No person, but huntesr must remember beson who has taken or killed any bird or animal suitable for food shall allow the flesh thereof to be destroyed or spoiled."

When there is work to be done the buzz saw is always ready to take a hand.

ABOUT THE VICTORY LOAN

Kill two birds with one stone—Help your country to clean up the war situation and keep the wheels of commerce running at full speed.

A rolling stone gathers no moss—Why hunt around when Canada's best investment is the 1919 Victory Loan.

A stitch in time saves nine—Now is the time to help your country to re-establish the men disabled in the war in renumerative occupations and to make them again feel the pride of being wage earners.

It is more blessed to give than to receive—Like the quality of mercy the 1919 Victory Loan is twice blessed—It blesses the disabled soldiers who are anxious about their future and it blesses no less richly all who subscribe to it.

Victory Bonds Bought

Those who may desire to sell Victory Bonds should come to my office or communicate with me. I buy Victory or War Bonds of all maturities, in any amount, and I am prepared to pay the best price.

The BOYHOOD of NELSON

September 29th. 1758 — October 21st. 1805

"I thank God for this great opportunity of doing my duty."
—Horatio, Lord Nelson, at Trafalgar.

Aims of the NAVY LEAGUE OF CANADA

To emphasize Canada's opportunities and responsibilities on the sea.

To raise funds for the relief of our merchant seamen, injured in the war, and for dependents of those who were killed.

To maintain sailors' homes in our ports.

To train boys and young men for our merchant ships by the organization of Boys' Naval Brigades.

H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES

COMMODORE
ADRIAN JARVIS

Do you realize that you can satisfy some lad's yearning for the sea?

The boy Nelson longed to follow in his uncle's footsteps, and in giving the boy his chance Captain Suckling gave to the Empire its greatest naval hero. Far from robust at the age of twelve, Nelson rose early to rank, and it is of special interest to Canadians to note that as a young officer he served in Quebec and was familiar with that great highway, the St. Lawrence. In giving his life for his country at Trafalgar, Nelson, by his famous victory, assured Britain's supremacy on the sea.

Some boy in Canada awaits YOUR assistance. You may never see or know him, but your contribution to the Nelson Day Campaign for $500,000 will be the means of his joining a Boys' Naval Brigade at one of the eight branches now in operation or at others to be formed.

He will learn the elements of seamanship. He will take a summer cruise. He may get a year at sea. He will be a better citizen, and when the time comes that he is needed to help to man a Canadian merchant ship to carry Canadian goods to the markets of the world, he will be READY.

Should the day come when Canada and the Empire will again need defenders on the sea, let us have our own men trained and prepared. Let us have a body of our fellow countrymen ready to emulate the glorious example of our sea heroes from the time of Nelson to those of the last war.

So long as we are dependent on foreign sailors to man our merchant ships, there is no force to draw upon in case of an emergency such as confronted us in 1914.

The Navy League of Canada points out the possibility for service to every Canadian. Let us realize the opportunity by contributing liberally to the Nelson Day Campaign. May we all be able to say, as did Nelson with his dying breath:

"Thank God I have done my duty!"

PUBLIC SCHOOL SPORTS SUCCESS

FIRST ANNUAL FIELD DAY FOR CHILDREN GREATLY APPRECIATED BY THEM.

MEMBERS OF BOARD PRESENT

AID TEACHERS, INSPECTOR AND Y.M.C.A. OFFICIALS IN MAKING THE DAY INTERESTING

The Public School Sports were held at the Exhibition grounds, on the afternoon of Wednesday, Oct. 8th.

The following members of the School Board were present, and in conjunction with Inspector Mowat, assisted in the carrying out of the programme:

Mr. R. Denne, chairman, and Messrs A. C. Fowler, T. O. Cameron, J. M. Worth, J. M. Greene and H. Thompson.

The teachers also wish hereby to thank Messrs. T. Roper and D. Loomes, of the Y. M. C. A., for their services in acting as starters, and Mr. R. Denne and other members of the Agricultural Society for their kindness in placing the grounds at our service; also to the Police Force for sending a man to assist in keeping things straight.

At the close of the events the prizes were distributed by Mr. A. C Fowler and Inspector Mowat

Played No Favorites.

A gentleman was staying in a provincial town when he heard that Mr. Moneyboy, his partner in business, was at another hotel on the telephone.

"Is Mr. Moneyboy there?" he inquired.

"No; he is not," came the response.

"Well, has he engaged rooms?"

"No. We don't reserve rooms here. First come, first served, is our rule," came the sharp and somewhat airy reply.

He was rather taken back at the lofty independence they seemed to revel in in that town.

"Can you tell me," he asked, "if he will stay with you when he reaches the town?"

"It's possible he may. But we can't say."

"Look here," roared the irate gentleman, "you're the most impudent jack in office that ever spoilt his master's business! Go away and tell some one who knows more about the business of the hotel to come and speak to me."

There was a chuckle at the other end of the wire.

"This isn't a hotel; it's the town jail," said the voice.

NELSON DAY DRIVE FOR NAVY LEAGUE

The Movement Interests All Classes and Should Be Supported.

Ships and men to man them are the big need of the Empire to-day. Canada is called upon to do her share in meeting the necessity

Shipyards are busy and new boats are being turned out as quickly as possible to fill the great gaps made in the Merchant Marine Service, through the dastardly work of the Hun submarines during the bitter years of the war.

Ships and more ships mean much to Canada, for this Nation must have a great export trade for its surplus products if prosperity is to become permanent. Qualified sailors in great number will be required to man these ships. Canada must provide as many of these men as possible, and must have them ready as the ships are ready. To this end the Navy League of Canada is doing wonderful work through the medium of its naval brigades. For the continuance and extension of this valuable mission and for the establishment and maintenance of Sailors' Homes in Canadian ports, the League is now calling upon the Citizens of the Dominion to subscribe half a million dollars. That is the object of the Nelson Day Campaign, which is to be short and sharp. The actual drive will last for three days, October 21, 22, 23, and the duty devolves upon every Canadian to make it a success.

Those who have found relief are the people who want all sufferers to know what they gained from their experience.

Mrs. B. Walters, of Savona, B.C., writes, praising Gin Pills for the immediate relief given by these splendid Pills. Mrs. Walters says:—

"I advise people who have not used Gin Pills to try them. I have been troubled for years with weak kidneys, and one box of Gin Pills cured me. I recommend them as an absolute and reliable cure."

Derangement of kidneys or bladder is so very serious that, at the first sign of pain in side or back, treatment with Gin Pills should begin. The duty of the kidneys is to cleanse the blood. If sick or inactive, uric acid and other poisons and waste are forced to the joints and muscles causing inflammation, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, constant headaches, dizziness, floating specks before the eyes, gravel or stone in the bladder, general debility and hesitancy. If you have any of these symptoms, get Gin Pills at once. Free sample on request. At druggists or dealers, 50c a box. Money refunded if not relieved.

The Way to say "No"

Mark Your Ballot with an X after Each Question under the word "No."

		YES	NO
1	Are you in favour of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?—		X
2	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
3	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure in standard hotels in local municipalities that by a majority vote favour such sale and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
4	Are you in favour of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X

Above is an exact reproduction of the Referendum ballot, showing the correct way to Vote in order to sustain the Ontario Temperance Act as it stands.

Everybody should study the four questions and realize exactly what they mean. Do not be misled by the insidious demand for "light" beer.

The beer of the ballot is 118% stronger than the Ontario Temperance Act now allows, and over five times as strong as the limit allowed for beer defined as non-intoxicating in Great Britain and the United States.

Must Answer Each Question

1. Unless you vote on every question your ballot is spoiled.
2. You must mark your answer to each question with an "X" only. Anything else would spoil your ballot.
3. Unless a majority vote "No" on question 1 the bars will be restored and the sale of all kinds of intoxicants permitted.
4. Unless a majority vote "No" on questions 2, 3 and 4 the Ontario Temperance Act will become almost worthless.
5. The only SAFE course is to mark your ballot as shown above.

"No!"—Four Times—"No!"

No repeal; No government beer shops; No beer saloons; No government whiskey shops.—Four X's, each under the word "No."

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by MANSFIELD F. HOUSE

(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

Are Night Displays Really Necessary?

The majority of retailers consider it essential to have their windows brilliantly illuminated, especially during the holiday season when there are large numbers of people on the streets. Hazleton, Pa., is likely to be rather dim this year, however, for merchants there have discovered that the coins which formerly went into electric meters can be invested more profitably in the purchase of newspaper advertising space.

The discovery was made when the Harwood Electric Company recently insisted on raising its rates for electric signs and window lighting. The merchants complained, but they were informed that they could take the curtailment at the higher figures or leave it, just as they pleased. So the majority of them decided to leave it.

Windows are now lighted only for a short time after the stores close, as well as during the regular business hours when lack of daylight demands it. The other money is invested in additional newspaper space.

The new policy has not injured business in the least. In fact, the Hazleton stores report that trade has picked up considerably since the change went into effect.

Paper Patterns for Furniture Buyers

Because a number of visitors to the furniture department of a store in Kansas City frequently declined to make purchases as they were not sure that the articles at which they looked would fit the size of their rooms, the store in question has worked out a plan whereby the sale becomes practically automatic.

When a customer makes this objection the salesman secures a sheet of tough wrapping paper, specially prepared for this purpose, places the chair or table or desk upon it, traces the pattern and then cuts the paper out it out and hands it to the customer with the request that they measure the piece by it when they return home.

A report is then made to the advertising department of the store and the pattern is followed up a day or two later by a personal call from a furniture salesman, who is often able to suggest some other piece in stock which will exactly fit the space.

In this matter the store has been able to secure sales from 90 per cent of the prospects who took home these patterns.

Not Enough for All

A large portion of the mail of a retailer in a small Illinois town was the writing of recommendation for young men of the town who had left to secure positions in the larger cities. It was never known if he refused to write a letter for any boy. Good record or bad, the boy knew that an appeal to "B. J." would bring the letter that would open the way to a job.

"Now, look here, 'B. J.'" an acquaintance said one day when the business man mentioned that another of the town's worthless and jobless had appealed to him for a letter of recommendation. "I would like to know how you can write a letter for every fellow. You must have to stretch things for some of them."

"No. I've got a simple plan that I follow. If the fellow is not bright or industrious; I can usually say that he is honest. And if the fellow is tricky or not just exactly honest, why I usually say that he is very energetic."

A Quiet Book Shop

In "Sunwise Turn"

To look at this bookshop from the outside you never would imagine that you were in the heart of New York's busiest shopping district. Thirty-first street, right off Fifth avenue. It's more like a quaint old corner of London, years ago—perhaps in Dickens' time.

To look at the bookshop from the inside as well, Sunwise Turn isn't really a bookshop in the conventional sense. It's a great big cozy living room, with a sunny, gay curtained window seat, an open fireplace, cozy wicker chairs and tables, with just a few inviting books lying carelessly on them.

Inside or out—Sunwise Turn is different—that's why New York regards it proudly as one of its most unique shops.

Even the name—Sunwise Turn—has an original background. It's from a Gaelic word meaning luck—for there's an old superstitution among these folk that if you follow the sun you'll have luck.

The Sunwise Turn Bookshop is run by two women — both writers themselves—who really know the meaning of the personal bookshop, not entirely obscured by commercial considerations. Miss Madge Jenison and Mrs. Bowbray-Clarke, who run Sunwise Turn, have founded their bookshop on one idea: To promote more original creative work among those in the arts and crafts by supplying them with the proper tools—books that inspire them to originality rather than encourage them to imitate others.

Aside from its regular plan of selling books, Sunwise Turn has a unique "Membership Bookselling Plan," designed for professional men and women interested in the world of letters and too busy to follow it closely; for country houses and other places too remote from the centers where ideas pass current.

To subscribers they send no lists but first ascertain the subjects in which the person is most interested. Then the subscriber pays a certain sum—$10, $20, $50 or $100. In return, Sunwise Turn sends at intervals, as it comes across works on the subject in which the subscriber is interested, packages of books. These packages are laid automatically on a subscriber's table monthly, or twice or four times a year. The subscription price covers professional services in carefully choosing the best books, cost of books and expressage. Sunwise Turn carries many subscriptions in this way for children's reading.

The Sunwise Turn secret of popularity is in selecting the right books for the right person. Customers come in, lay down a specified sum of money, tell their favorite subjects and let either Miss Jenison or Mr. Clarke do the selecting.

Mrs. Clarke and Miss Jenison have one definate idea behind their successful bookshop. Instead of selling books as merchandise they attract booklovers and collectors of libraries by knowing their stock, being familiar with the contents of each and every book and selling intelligently.

They have attracted a worth-while clientele to Sunwise Turn by "book evenings"—at which persons gather and discuss their particular hobbies. Galsworthy, John Masefield and others equally prominent meet frequently at these Sunwise Turn book evenings, and the publicity incident to the idea hasn't hurt sales a bit!

NAPOLEON CULT DIES.

Military "Geniuses" Did Not Prosper in the War.

The truth is about to be unmuzzled. For four years and a half she has been in quarantine. The public has been spoon-fed with an official diet, prepared sometimes to deceive the enemy, sometimes to deceive ourselves, sometimes to protect a reputation, sometimes to destroy a reputation, rarely without an ulterior purpose of some sort altogether unrelated to the fact, says an editorial in the London Daily News. Now the truth is about to come out into the daylight and open her lips. She will be very unlike what we thought her to be—very unlike the fiction that has flaunted itself in the public eye. She will have some surprising revelations to make, and as they hurt a good many people and reverse a good many judgments we must expect to see desperate effort made to silence her or discredit her beforehand.

Among the illusions that will go are the illusions about that foul and filthy thing called war. The idea that it is "God's medicine" will not survive the tremendous balance sheet of loss and gain—the record of the sacrifice of the flower of the world's youth, the material ruin, the spiritual desolation, the opening of the flood gates of hate, the carnival of passion, the perversion of all the human values, the lowering of the whole standard of human nature, the wolfish rapacity and uncontrolled lust, the submergence of every humane and kindly emotion and of every instinct of truth and justice under the torrent of greed and vengeance exploiting themselves as patriotism. War is not "God's medicine," but the devil's poison.

And if the truth about the war end the fictions about war, it will also end the Napoleonic cult. The age of the demi-god of war is done, and there is nothing cheaper in the world to-day than military reputations. War has become too vast and cosmic a thing for the inspiration of a single genius. It is the sum of infinite forces, and if we want to find the source of its judgments we have to trace it to men sitting in offices as well as to generals sitting in camps, to scientists in their laboratories and manufacturers in their factories, to civil servants controlling transport and keeping famine at bay, to the inventors of poison gas and all the artifices of death, to the courage of merchant seamen, and a thousand other springs all contributing to the great sum of the decision.

The war has not left one great military reputation intact on either side. The failure of Von Kluck at the beginning—perhaps the crucial failure of the war—struck the keynote. Moltke, Hindenburg, Falkenhayn, Mackensen, Ludendorff — one after another they rose like giants and set in failure. And the history of the Allies is hardly less strewn with the wreckage of reputations. Sir Douglas Haig survived the test, not by Napoleonic qualities, but by his plain virtues of honesty, steadfastness, good temper and sound sense. Marshal Foch comes nearest to a supreme reputation, but he had the good fortune to "arrive" late, when the struggle had reached its climax, after Joffre had been succeeded by Nivelle and Nivelle by Petain, and when the hour for reaping the harvest of four years of effort had come. Had he had the supreme command at the beginning can we be quite sure that he would have escaped the fate of the others?

Chinese Abhor Blue Eyes.

The Chinese do not like blue eyes, or blue-eyed people, and they never will. The prejudice against blue-eyed people sprang up years ago, and there is no indication that it will ever be overcome. It was due to the blue-eyed Dutch traders who early began trading in China, and since those ancient times blue eyes in China have aroused suspicion and distrust.

The cry of the Chinese, "Down with the foreign devils," which one hears every time there is a riot in the country, is not correct, however, according to Liang Chi Chao, Chinese representative at the Paris conference. He says the term used has not been properly translated. It means "blue-eyed ghosts of the sea," and not "foreign devils," and it has reference to these same Dutch traders of the early days whom the Chinese believed to come up out of the sea.

The Treaty of Peace isn't going to do anything to allay the prejudice against blue-eyed people in China. There were a lot of blue-eyed people among the Germans who took the province away from them, and it was largely blue-eyed people who gave it to Japan. So the "blue-eyed ghosts of the sea" are still operating to China's disadvantage.

Two Discredited Prophets.

Among other nineteenth-century false prophets might be mentioned the ex-naval officer, Richard Brothers, who predicted that he would be king of Jerusalem, and Private James White, who founded a religious sect known as the Jezreelites.

WORKIRG WOMEN

schools might be improved in building, might be increased, and so that the schools might be improved in building and equipment.

Teachers appreciate the pension fund which was established by the Government, and which is maintained by the teachers and the province. This naturally stimulates the desire of young people to enter the teaching profession.

Teachers know that still more progressive legislation is assured for the province when such a man as Dr. Cody is Minister of Education. Knowing the type of man, his high sense of honor, his keen interest in the education of the children of the province, and the high respect in which he holds the teaching profession, they would regard it nothing short of a calamity that such a man should be removed from his present sphere of usefulness.

Teachers are thinking women and appreciate perhaps more than any other women and girls, the privilege of voting, and they recognize that the privilege has come to them through the enactment of the Ontario Government. Deeds not words are what count.

Prince of Wales in the Navy

THE visit of the Prince of Wales to the North American continent marks another epoch in the annals of Britain's sailor princes. It is nearly thirty years ago since his father, King George V., visited American waters in command of a gunboat, and nearly sixty since his grandfather, King Edward VII., made a memorable tour through some of the principal cities of this continent. These three notable events will not fail to give rise to some curious and interesting reflections.

There is a quaint flavor at the present time about the reason why Queen Victoria instructed King Edward, in 1860, to travel incognito through the United States as Lord Renfrew, instead of in his proper person as Prince of Wales and heir apparent to the British throne, "because he was the descendant of George III." Necessarily, therefore, he appeared only in civilian costume, and, indeed, as contemporary accounts state, he wore a white hat with a black band. The Prince of Wales, on the contrary, as his father did in 1890, has made his appearance in uniform. But whereas King George, on the occasion of his visit, was a lieutenant in the navy, his son has recently been advanced to the rank of captain in that service.

Nor can it be overlooked that these three royal progresses mark in a very distinct manner the changes and development in naval architecture and material during the intervening half century. King Edward VII., crossed the Atlantic in the Hero, a 90-gun line-of-battle ship, with auxiliary steam power, which on the return journey was insufficient to enable her to make headway against the Atlantic sea, and obliged a great part of the passage to be made close-hauled under treble-reefed topsails. The voyage occupied no less than twenty-four days, and the delay is reported to have caused Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort such anxiety that two frigates were despatched to look for the missing vessel. King George's command was a gunboat, the Thrush, a vessel entirely driven by steam. Her displacement was 505 tons, and she had engines capable of developing 1,200 horsepower and giving her a speed of thirteen knots, while her coal capacity was sufficient for her to steam 2,000 knots at the economical speed of ten knots. No comparison whatever could be made between the gun power of either the old line-of-battle ship or the Victorian gunboat and that of the huge battle cruiser, the outcome of Lord Fisher's genius for putting war purpose into ship design, in which the prince is traveling on this visit.

It was only on July 8 that the promotion of the Prince of Wales to captain was announced. It was probably made in view of his forthcoming visit to America, for he is but twenty-five years of age, or two and one-half years younger than was King George when he obtained his captaincy. Yet it is not altogether a courtesy title for the young prince, since he has had the education and training of sailor like his father, although not to the same extent. He passed the usual test for a naval cadetship in February, 1907, and three months later entered the Royal Naval College at Osborne, Isle of Wight, being then in his thirteenth year. Completing the usual two years here, he passed on in May, 1909, to the college at Dartmouth, where more practical instruction is given. He was only half way through his term at Dartmouth when the untimely death of King Edward brought him a step nearer the throne of England, and on his sixteenth birthday he succeeded his father as Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester. By the wish of the King, however, who knew by experience the value of a sea training, the prince completed his course at Dartmouth, and by a happy coincidence he has qualified to be rated a midshipman in the navy on the day of his father's coronation, June 22, 1911.

In accordance with service routine the prince now had a spell of active duty with the fleet. He was appointed to the battleship Hindustan, commanded by Capt. H. H. Campbell, who had been shipmate with his father in the '90's. The Hindustan was a unit of the Home Fleet, and although the prince joined her at Portland she later proceeded to Scottish ports, where he had his first acquaintance with the northern mists, now so well known to many hundreds of Canadian seamen. When he left the Hindustan Capt. Campbell stated that the prince had taken part in every duty appertaining to the working of a great battleship and had cheerfully and efficiently discharged the less pleasing as well as the more agreeable of his tasks.

The prince obviously liked the life on board ship, and it must have been a source of regret to him when, in view of his future responsibilities, he had to relinquish duty afloat in order to pursue his studies in other fields of knowledge. He did not serve in the rank of sub-lieutenant, but on March 17, 1913, was promoted direct to lieutenant, the advancement being made on the eve of his departure on a visit to Germany. In the war, as is well known, his service was with the army as an officer in the Grenadier Guards. Thus it was that he was never a commander, R. N., but was promoted from lieutenant to captain, as already mentioned, on July 8.

Purpose in Life.

Have a purpose in living. Aim to be somebody and to do something, and to know just what it is you mean to be and do. Some people pity those who fall short of their ideals—the inventor who fails, the statesman who is so far in advance of his constituents that he receives censure instead of praise. But these are not the ones who need your sympathy. Save your pity for those who are drifting through life without a goal, who are living without a purpose.

Best Work at Seventy.

Rosa Bonheur finished at seventy her "Horses Threshing Corn," the largest animal picture ever painted, and which was sold for $50,000. In 1896, on her seventy-fourth birthday, she finished a painting representing the historical combat between two stallions to which Lord Godolphin invited his friends in 1734.

For Mending China.

Mix a teaspoonful of alum and a tablespoonful of water and place in a hot oven until it is quite transparent. Wash the broken pieces in hot water and, while warm, coat the broken edges thinly and quickly, as it sticks instantly. Your china thus mended will bear hot water and ordinary usage.

MR. O'CONNELL ADMITS

Then Mr. O'Connell referred to the direct contradictory evidence between Mr. Stewart and members of the police force. These statements are not based on what men like Hamilton saw but on what Mr. Stewart himself saw.

"I don't think the court would come to the conclusion that Stewart was deliberately perjuring himself. But on the other hand you have the emphatic evidence of Mr. Stewart and the equally emphatic denial of the Chief."

"I cannot explain these things," declared Mr. O'Connell.

With this address Mr. O'Connell concluded.

Mr. Hall's Argument.

Mr. Hall referred to Mr. O'Connell's address as a defense and a sort of an apology for Mr. Stewart for making the charges rather than to argue that the charges were substantial and correct.

He refered to the system by which the fines prosecuted by one party goes to the Government and by the other goes to the city. Mr. Hall could readily understand how this could lead to difficulties and possibly not understand how a person with any idea of fairness and justice, and not with his mind crowded with hateful, vengeful, vindictive feelings, could ever accept such a statement as true.

Mr. Hall went on to show by illustrations how a man's mind might be clouded by a feeling of revenge and hate. He considered that this was the condition which Mr. Stewart had worked himself to.

Mr. Hall submitted that there was not a question of doubt in the Hamilton statement against the honesty of Detective Newhall and he considered that Mr. Stewart should publicly apologize at this court and avoid standing before the public as a libeller.

Mr. O'Connell objected at this stage and Judge Huycke was given the opportunity of adding a few words. He considered that if the liquor laws were to be successfully administered there must be more co-operation between the two departments and it was his own personal opinion that Inspector Stewart should make the first approach.

The Judge made the remark to Mr. Hall that the only person who stands for the truth of the stories was the one "creature" Dunford and as far as the Judge was concerned Mr. Hall need not worry himself about what weight would be placed on that.

"To show the statement to the Magistrate between the hearing and verdict of the Sullivan case. Mr. Stewart acted very unjustly and it showed where his zeal carried him beyond the course mapped out by common sense and justice," continued Mr. Hall.

"Mr. Stewart refused to make definite charges but hid behind the hedge," declared Mr. Hall.

"Mr. Stewart must have dreamt about the liquor being taken away from the station and by nursing his revenge has finally become to regard his dream as true."

Mr. Hall pointed out that every evidence that had been given against the police had been given by ex-convicts that had been prosecuted by the police.

Mr. Hall concluded by an appeal to Mr. Stewart to stand on his feet and publicly apologize for the libellous remarks he had made against the force.

Mr. O'Connell objected to the manner in which Mr. Hall had gone out of his way to show that Mr. Stewart was responsible for the charges when he in no way brought about the investigation.

Decision Deferred.

The Judge announced that the report of the Board would be deferred until the return of Magistrate Dumble and thanked the gentlemen who had given their assistance in the investigation.

A Womans' Warning

Why will women continue to drag around in misery, suffering with the ailments peculiar to their sex, that drag them down to misery and despair, with backache, nervousness, the blues, derangements and irregularities, when there is a proved remedy for just such conditions?

For more than forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been overcoming these ailments until it is now recognized everywhere as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

For Twenty Years the Friend of This Woman

Akron, Ohio.—"I am fifty-one years old and going through the Change of Life, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is doing me lots of good. I felt run-down and weak but since taking the Vegetable Compound I am much stronger and better. I can eat and sleep, am gaining flesh and can do more work than I have for some time. Twenty years ago your Vegetable Compound helped me during childbirth. I wish you would print this in your paper so that other women may read it. There is nothing better for the relief of suffering womanhood than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It does away with sickness and nervousness which is very often responsible for the lack of perfect harmony in the home."

FOUND GUILTY OF NEGLECT

THREE YEARS' PUNISHMENT FOR MAN WHO ALLOWED A SERIOUS SITUATION TO DEVELOP.

Failure to take proper precautions has been responsible for many deaths, and is the cause of much suffering and hardship to-day.

Take the case of Wm. Dunn, 813 Gerrard St. East, Toronto, Ont. Mr. Dunn was a chronic rheumatic sufferer for ten years. Three years of that ten he spent in bed suffering indescribable torture. Picture the joy of this man on finding that Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules were restoring him to normal health again. Here are a few extracts from his letter to us: "During the past ten years I have been laid up with Rheumatism. One attack confined me to my bed for a year, and a second attack left me helpless for over two years. After I had tried almost everything, a friend got me a box of T.R.C.'s, and a few doses convinced me that I had at last found the proper remedy for my trouble. T.R.C.'s improved my condition rapidly, and I feel that had it not been for T.R.C.'s I should have been laid up for years."

T.R.C.'s are certainly wonder workers. Try them

Ask your Druggist or write us for our new booklet, it is interesting and costs you nothing (Templetons, 142 King West, Toronto). We mail T.R.C.'s anywhere on receipt of $1.06.

Her Heavenly Program.

Aunt Callie was a very religious negro woman—of the shouting variety. She was telling the children about heaven, and what she expected to do when she got there. "When I gits dar, honeys, I gwine take a crown what a angel gwine gimme, an' put it on my head. Den I gwine git out my lil' ole hahp an' play some of dem heben chunes on it. Den I gwine stretch my lil' white wings an' fly fum cherry beam to cherry beam."

Had Right Idea, Anyway.

My youngest daughter is quite a peachy little person and it is quite amusing at times to hear her air her views. The day after Christmas several children from the neighborhood came in to see her gifts and to play with her. When exhibiting her presents she said in her best peachy manner: "I gived away a lot of things and I 'joyed my Christmas so much 'cause it's nicer to be a giver than a taker."—Chicago Tribune.

Magnificent Royal Residence.

The most notable architectural feature of Buckingham palace is the grand staircase of white marble, which leads to the state apartments. These magnificent suites are filled with priceless objects of art and historical interest presented to the British monarchs by the royal visitors of many generations.

What She Was.

Dorothy was boasting to her younger sister about where she had been when she was a year old. Margaret, naturally, anxious to know how this concerned her, inquired: "Where was I then?" Dorothy's reply was crushing. "When I was a year old, you were nothing—you were a piece of sky!"

Creatures That Weep.

Among the creatures that weep most easily are the ruminants. All hunters know that the stag weeps, and it is asserted that the bear sheds tears when severely wounded. The giraffe is not less sensitive and regards with tearful eyes the hunter who has wounded it.

"Bully."

The word "bully" as a familiar term of address was employed in the time of Shakespeare and no doubt was old even then. In the sense of praiseworthy, excellent as, "That was a bully dinner," it is used both by Americans and by British subjects.

Children's Logic.

"Do you know," said a little fellow of four years of age, "what I thought dark was? A great, huge live thing, the color of black, with mouth and eyes." Another assured his teacher that the wind was alive, for he heard it whistling in the night.

Arab Consideration.

There is a story told of an Arab who possessed a beautiful and valuable steed. His companions were ready to start their journey and wanted to know why he had not saddled his horse. "Because I am angry," was his reply.

Some Jests of the Ancients

It would be difficult to state which age saw the birth of the first joke. No doubt man had some sense of humor even during his struggling cave-dwelling days, expressed, most likely, in rough-and-tumble horseplay or in practical jokes rather than in keen jest and witty repartee.

Very likely the first jocular utterance had origin in the form of criticism on the personal appearance, dress, manners or customs of others. A sort of corrective censure, one might say, on those who dared to depart from the accepted rules of the community.

The works of the ancient Greek and Roman authors abound in jests. A great number are severely personal, of a cutting and sneering kind. Others are mere puns and verbal jests, incapable, of course, of being translated. But in many the fun depends entirely on the sense—or rather nonsense—of the thing. As we read them the antiquity of many of our present-day jokes is brought to light. In spite of their age, the humor in these classical jokes is as keen as ever. For instance, this quip from ancient Greece is appropriate and full of meaning to all ages:

Archelaus, asked by a talkative barber how he would like to be shaved, replied: "In silence."

And this, surely, we have heard before:

Gnathene, of Athens, was offered some rather poor wine. When told that its age was sixteen years, he dryly remarked: "It's pretty weak for its age."

A similar jest is related of Cicero. When told at a banquet that the wine he was drinking was forty-year-old Falernian, he said: "By my faith! It bears its age well."

And here is the classical form of the woman's age joke:

Cicero, hearing the wife of a Roman patrician say that she was but thirty years old, said: "No doubt it is true, for it is twenty years now that I have heard you say it."

The painter Apelles, who flourished in the time of Alexander, was shown a picture by an inferior artist who boasted of having sketched it out in an exceedingly short space of time. "Yes, I can see that very well," said Apelles, "but I am surprised that you did not make several other pictures exactly like this in the same time."

According to tradition, we are indebted to this same Apelles for one of our common phrases. The painter had listened with patience and profit to a cobbler's criticism of the sandals in a picture. But when the cobbler began to enlarge the fields of his criticism to other parts of the painting he received this rebuke from Apelles: "Sho maker, stick to your last!"

In the expression "where the shoe pinches" the ancient rendering took this form:

There was general disapproval of the actions of a Roman citizen who had divorced his chaste, rich and beautiful wife. "But," said he, pointing to his foot, "here is a shoe, well made and brand new; no one but myself knows where it pinches."

In the days gone by, as at present, the doctors were made the target of the jester's darts. Pausanias, the Spartan general, when asked by a physician how it was that he was never ill, exultingly replied: "Because I never consult you."

At another time Pausanias said that the best physician was the one who despatched his patients with the least possible suffering.

Pausanias, strongly disapproving of a certain physician and his methods and berating him in no mild terms, was asked by a friend how, as he had never consulted that particular doctor, could he be so sure of his statements. Pausanias answered, "Well, had I consulted him would I be living to-day?"

A Scythian king, seeing a man during a snowstorm entirely nude, asked him if he were not cold. "And you," responded the man, "is your face cold?" "No," answered the king. "Well, I am face all over," was the naked man's rejoinder.

Of law and the law's delays these tales are recorded:

A woman, vainly pleading her case many times before Philip of Macedonia, received at every refusal the reply that he "had not the time." At last her patience became exhausted, and she said to him: "Then cease to reign." The monarch, feeling that he had deserved this rebuke, immediately gave ear to her and rendered the justice that her case merited.

Anacharsis, the Scythian philosopher, speaking of the laws of Solon, said: "They were like the web of a spider—very good for holding the weak, but allowing the strong to escape."

A petty thief was being led to prison. Diogenes said to him: "Fool, why didn't you rob on a grand scale? Then it would have been you that would be sending others to prison."

The absurd sight of a person clothed or equipped with something out of all proportion to his size always gives rise to a smile, if not to some jocose remark. One commonplace jest is the one about the small boy wearing a very large hat: "Hey, bat! Where are you going with that boy?" With the orator Cicero the jest took this form:

One day, seeing his short-statured son-in-law, wearing a long sword, he cried out: "Who, I ask, has attached my son-in-law to that sword?"

At a call to arms in Sparta, Androclides, who was lame, offered himself as a recruit. When refused on account of his crippled legs, he exclaimed: "I though you were looking for men to fight, not to run away!"

Give It a Name.

A screwless corkscrew has been invented, a pointed shaft carrying a piece of metal on a pivot so that it falls at the right angle beneath a cork that it has been thrust through.

POPULAR SALESMAN IS CONGRATULATED

THIS TRAVELLING MAN'S CUSTOMERS ALL HAVE NOTICED HIS GREAT IMPROVEMENT.

"Many of my customers on the road have congratulated me on my great improvement since I started taking Tanlac," said William Goulding, a well-known travelling salesman residing at 175 Macdonell street, Toronto, Ontario.

"My stomach had been giving me trouble for a long time," he continued, "and I was greatly distressed with gas on my stomach. I had a tight, uncomfortable feeling after eating and would suffer from awful dizzy spells. My nerves were shattered and I was unable to rest well at all and I finally felt so miserable that I just had to stop work and go away for a rest.

"While I was visiting my sister at Galt, she persuaded me to try Tanlac and the way it has helped me is simply wonderful. I feel better today than I have in years. I am never troubled with indigestion and that tired, fagged out feeling is all gone. Tanlac has ended my stomach trouble and put my nerves in good shape, my appetite is fine, I sleep well and have considerable more energy than I had before taking Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

BURRIED WITH PARROT

Sawtelle, Ca.—Carrying out the last wish of Philander D. Freeman, a civil war veteran, who died at his home here, the stuffed skin of his pet parrot was buried in the same casket with his body. The parrot died in 1912, and the veteran had the bird stuffed and placed in a glass case to await his own demise.

CHRISTIAN'S DUTY TO VOTE FOUR NOES

SO ADVISES REV. J. A. MacKENZIE IN REFERRING TO REFERENDUM.

The Ingathering services at Knox Church on Sunday last were well attended. Two excellent sermons were preached by the Rev. J. A. MacKenzie.

In the evening Mr. MacKenzie stated his position with regard to the four questions submitted in the referendum. He took as his text Romans XV:1, "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves." The matter was treated thoroughly in a fashion, arguments for and against being dealt with and no uncertainty left as to what the speaker believed the duty of every Christian and well-wisher of his fellowman to be. That duty was clearly shown to be to mark the ballot with four X's in the "No" column.

The choir under the able leadership of Mr F. E. Walden did their part to make both services pleasing and profitable. In the eevning Mrs. T. Hughes kindly assisted the choir and her voice was heard to good advantage in a duet with Mr. Walden. Other pleasing numbers in addition to the anthems were selections on the cello both morning and evening by Mr Tom Smith, and a quartette by Misses Pearson and Williamson, and Messrs John Anderson and Tom Smith with the choir taking the chorus part. Mr. Walden and the choir are to be congratulated on the excellent music rendered by them throughout the day.

VOTE FOR THOMPSON

JAMES THOMPSON,

1 It means a vote for clean, progressive government.

2 It means a vote for a good roads policy which will bring good roads to all the people.

3 It means a vote for a Government that has given and will continue to give the people real temperance.

4 It means a vote for a Hydro-Electric policy that will bring power and light to every farm at a low cost, the Government sharing the cost of installation.

5 It means a vote for a Compensation Law that provides compensation without cost to the workman.

6 It means an advanced educational policy with liberal grants.

Appeal for Volunteers by Citizens' Liberty League for Election Day

CONVEYANCES and scrutineers are urgently needed to assist Citizens' Liberty League on Election Day, Monday, October, 20th. The League is a purely voluntary organization and it trusts that all who are in favor of the work it is doing will come forward and volunteer assistance.

Volunteer scrutineers are needed to represent the League at each polling booth. Volunteers of motor cars and carriages are needed to carry voters to and from the polling booths.

If you are in accord with the representative men and women of the Citizens' Liberty League, and are willing to give the practical assistance needed, please communicate with the undersigned, or the Secretary of the League in your district.

EDITOR'S MAIL

THE REFERENDUM BALLOT

Editor Review: It seems almost incredible that in view of the continuous explanations of the ballot by the press of the city, that any one should be in a quandary regarding any of the four questions of the referendum ballot.

I am sure prohibitionists esteem very highly the public service The Review has rendered in this respect.

Our workers report more misconception of question four than of any of the others.

First, let us state question four has no reference whatever either directly or indirectly to a place for obtaining liquor as a medicine or a place where prescriptions are filled.

Second. If you vote yes on question four you are actually voting for a Government "grog shop" that will sell all kinds of booze, whiskey, gin, brandy, ale, etc., to any one who would apply for it.

Third. We would have the same sad spectacle of four years ago—women and even children with their bottles, taking the stuff home to do its deadly work. Incapacity for work with its consequent squalor and degradation, lower social standing, a damming array of losses we do not wish to incur, and can only avoid by voting "no" on this question. Make no mistake—happy prosperous homes are at stake on this question four.

Five years ago by actual count arranged for, to give definite information to the Ontario license commissioners over 600 people entered the liquor stores of Peterborough during five hours. "No" should be our emphatic reply to a question that would bring back this curse to our homes.

Another popular error is the fear that if you vote four "no's" you will not be able to procure liquor for medical purposes.

The Government is taking special precautions that liquor for medical purposes shall be obtainable under adequate safeguard, both as to quality and price.

At the last session of the legislature provision was made to take the sale of liquor for this purpose out of private hands. If the referendum receives the four "no" majority a Government agency for medical purposes will be established in Peterborough, where both quality and price will be fixed by the Government, and the purchaser protected from fraud, both in quality and price.

A four "no" vote is the only safe course and insures protection at all points.

A. B. CUNNINGHAM.

REPLY TO MR. SODEN

Editor Review: With regards to Mr. Soden's circular letter making statements about temperance and his opponents being supported by finance from the liquor traffic. There is as great a need for temperance of action and statements as in liquor, so I hope Mr. Soden will try, if possible, to act up to the moral standard of his opponents and so conduct an honorable election.

Labor stands for plain justice. As we have no official organ to express labor opinions on these matters, I ask you to publish this refutation of Mr Soden's remarks so far as the Labor candidate is concerned. We represent no interests, but the interests of the producer and working people of this province who are themselves financing this campaign.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY

City Police Accompany County Constable Moore to Make Arrest.

As the result of too high festivities on Thanksgiving Day three men were fined for being under the influence of intoxicating beverages. Late last night the police received a complaint that there were some drunken men just outside the city limits. They immediately informed High County Constable Moore and accompanied him to make the arrest.

It appeared that the men had had some kind of trouble as one of them had a badly swollen and bruised face. He was the man who admitted having obtained the "booze" He, according to his story met a man on McDonald street who engaged in a conversation with him and after some inducement sold him a bottle of "home brew," for $5. If someone would only recognize this man who goes around inducing others to buy liquor a great deal less trouble would be caused by intoxicants. The man with the liquor was fined $20 and costs and each of his companions $10.

WOMEN VOTERS' LEAGUE

The executive of the Women Voters' League endeavored to secure Mrs. Ralph Smith, member of Parliament for Vancouver, B.C., to address an open meeting this month. Mrs. Smith, however, was obliged to curtail her time in the east, so it was impossible to secure this interesting speaker.

There will, therefore, be no meeting of the league this month.

Early in November the attention of the league will be turned to municipal affairs.

LATEST TYPE OF TOURIST CARS

ONE OF THE FEATURES IN CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS' DAILY SERVICE, TORONTO-WINNIPEG-VANCOUVER.

The Canadian National daily transcontinental train, Toronto-Winnipeg-Vancouver made its initial trip from Toronto, with one of the very latest type of steel tourist cars as part of its equipment, the first of an order of twenty such cars in whose construction every point has been considered for the safety and comfort of passengers. This modern type of tourist car, with anti-telescopic device is of similar design to the standard sleeping coach, the exception being they are upholstered in leather instead of plush.

Electrically lighted throughout, all berths, upper and lower, are provided with berth lamps. A new feature for this class of car is that lamps have been installed under the seats in the aisles of the car, so that when the ceiling lamps are turned out for the night light may be provided under berth curtains, a great convenience for passengers when going through the car.

Phosphorous push buttons can be readily seen in the dark, should the passenger require to switch on the light or ring the bell, when the berth is in darkness.

A safety feature introduced is a device for holding down the upper berth which precludes any possibility of the upper berth closing when in use. Separate berth curtains are provided so that passengers in the upper berths will not disturb passengers in the lower.

The kitchen has the latest steel range facilities for washing dishes, and lockers enable passengers to store their food. Lavatories have received special attention, and provide greater conveniences than the older type. An electric thermostatic heating control can be so adjusted as to regulate the temperature of the car, thus preventing overheating.

Thus with the introduction of the daily service of the Canadian National liner between Toronto-Winnipeg-Vancouver, is the added convenience of the very latest type of tourist cars for second-class passengers who can enjoy a transcontinental trip in every comfort at minimum expense.

KINNEY, SECOND FARMER CANDIDATE TO BE NOMINATED IN MANITOULIN

Leaders of all Parties Have Coats off for a Tremendous Campaign—Scores of Meetings Arrangee For.

Toronto, Oct. 14.— Additional news today that the new man from Manitoulin, Beniah Bowman, leader of the United Farmers' Party, would have to fight for his seat, the Ontario Provincial election and Referendum campaign today, entered its last week which, promises to be a lively one in all corners of the province.

Not Eligible?

Mr. Bowman of Manitoulin, sat in the last Legislature and it was thought in some quarters that he would get an acclamation from the rugged island in Northern Lake Huron. Such was the news from that isolated constituency when this morning's newspapers closed their lists of nominations, but Canadian Press despatches this morning indicated that another farmer, John W. Kinney, of Georgian Bay has been nominated to run as a Conservative. Despite Mr. Bowman's protests that Mr. Kinney, having acted as chief enumerator, was not eligible to sit in the Legislature.

Tremendous Campaign.

Sir William Hearst, Premier Hartley Dewart, leader of the Liberals, and leaders of various Labor, soldiers and many other organizations, who have nominated men for the Legislature, have arranged scores of meetings this week. In addition, the leaders of opposing sides on the referendum question have prepared for a tremendous campaign this week.

TWO ACCLAMATIONS FOR GOVERNMENT

AND TWO PRIVATE MEMBERS OF LEGISLATURE ELECTED UNOPPOSED.

Conservatives elected by acclamation—Hon. Dr. H. J. Cody, Minister of Education, North-East Toronto; Brig.-Gen. Hon. A. E. Ross, Kingston; W. D. Black, Addington; Robt. J. Cooke, North Hastings.

Conservatives nominated	105
Liberals nominated	69
United Farmers nominated	70
Laborites nominated	22

Conservatives are running in all but five ridings. In East Hamilton Conservative support is going to Lieut. Samuel Landers, the Soldier-Labor candidate. In Centre Huron William Proudfoot, former Liberal leader, now an Independent, is left a clear field in his fight with the machine Liberals and the U.F.O. In East Kent the U.F.O. nominee, hitherto a well-known Conservative will have Conservative support. In Glengarry and North Bruce the Conservatives are also leaving the fight to the Liberals and the U.F.O.

In addition to the 22 straight Laborites nominated, the Independent Labor party has endorsed U.F.O. candidates in many ridings.

Four Acclamations in All.

The Hearst Government will go to the country Monday next with four of its supporters already elected by acclamations, and with candidates in all but five of the ridings for which members have to be chosen. Nominations were held throughout the Province yesterday, and though there were surprises in a few ridings, in the main the candidates nominated by the various conventions filed their papers and squared away for the final week of the campaign. The fact that the Government has four acclamations to its credit was unexpected. It was taken for granted that Hon. Dr. Cody and the new Minister, Brig.-General Ross, would not have opposition, and within the past two or three days it was reported that the Liberals and farmers would not attempt to displace Black in Addington. The Walk-over for Cook, the North Hastings member, was a distinct surprise, however.

AUTO ACCIDENT SATURDAY

Auto Damaged and Horse and Driver Injured as Result of Smash-up.

An extraordinary automobile accident occurred about 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the corner of Charlotte and Rubidge streets. A car driven by John Edwards left Dr. Frederick's office and proceeded to turn around at the corner. Just then Mr. E. G. Patterson and Boorman's bread wagon came along from opposite directions and the former in his attempt to avoid the car that was turning around failed to notice the presence of the bread rig. He endeavored to squeeze between them but hit the front of Edward's car driving it completely around. He also hit the bread wagon knocking the horse over with such violence as to inflict a severe wound upon its flank. The driver of the wagon was hurled to the pavement and received serious injuries. He was removed to Dr. Frederick's office and later taken to his home in an ambulance.

Successful theatrical managers should thank their stars.

"OH, BOY" BRILLIANT N. Y. COMEDY SUCCESS

DON'T MISS THIS IRRESISTIBLE STORY OF AN EASY-GOING YOUNG MAN.

"Oh, Boy," the smart and brilliant New York Princess Theatre musical comedy success under the management of F. Ray Comstock and William Elliott, will be the coming attraction at the Grand Theatre, Thursday, October 16th.

The book and lyrics of "Oh, Boy" are by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse and the music is by Jerome Kern. The narrative of "Oh, Boy" revolves around one George Budd, an easy going young man who has married Lou Ellen Carter without telling her parents of the ceremony.

Unknown to George Budd, his friend, Jim Marvin, gathers around him some gay girls to celebrate a polo victory, and they enter Budd's apartment by the fire-escape unannounced, and hide in an adjoining room as Budd enters the same way with the bride.

A telegram arrives for Budd from his Quaker aunt, who is his guardian, and as such is opposed to his marrying. Reading the telegram the bride decides to go to her parents' home for the night just as Jim Marvin and the girls rush on the scene. George prevails on Jim and his guests to go to another room while he sees his bride home.

Jackie Sampson, who plays "Modesty in "Experience," dashes in the open window. Here she meets Jim Marvin and tells him she was with a party in a restaurant and during some trouble hit an officer in the eye.

Jim Marvin suggests that she stay in Budd's apartment and even introduces her to the battered officer as Mrs. Budd. The arrival of the bride's father and mother and Budd's Quaker aunt complicate matters which leads to no end of trouble for the newly married couple, but with the timely assistance of Jim Marvin, George smooths out the difficulties and all ends well.

The music is tuneful and clever comedy, with sparkling tunes and melodies "Oh, Boy" is charming.

"Oh, Boy" was an entire season at the Princess Theatre, New York, and then continued its run at the Casino in New York.

"THE DUMBELLS"

FAMOUS CANADIAN SOLDIER ENTERTAINMENT ORGANIZATION A WODERFUL SUCCESS IN FRANCE

The famous Canadian soldier entertainment organization, known in France as the "Dumbells," has been brought intact to this country for a limited tour of the larger cities, in order to give the people at home an idea of the really wonderful theatricals which were staged in France by and for our boys. The members of this company all soldier actors, having served on an average of sixteen months on active service before being chosen by Capt. M. W. Plunkett for service in the entertainment corps. The "Dumbells" gave over five hundred performances in France, many of them immediately behind the front lines, where bursting shells played an important part in the "lighting effects." For this tour they are offering their original overseas revue, "Biff, Bing, Bang," which will be staged as nearly as possible in the manner in which it was given over here, excepting the matter of bursting shells, poison gas and cooties.

"Biff, Bing, Bang" will be the offering at the Grand Opera for Saturday, October 25th, matinee and evening.

SPECIAL MUSIC FOR "THE UNPARDONABLE SIN"

Special music has been secured to properly present the master photoplay, "The Unpardonable Sin," which will be shown for a limited engagement only at the Allen at popular prices. This Feature has been shown throughout the United States and Canada at from fifty cents to a dollar and a half; but the local manager, Mr. Rosenthal, is adhering to his policy of presenting the best features at popular prices, and no advance will be charged to see "The Unpardonable Sin" even though it cost the management more money than any other two features.

An overture will be played by the Allen Theatre Orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Leader, the well known Peterboro musician. The stage will be decorated with ferns and palms, and the boxes as well, making an attractive picture. Before opening the picture, a prologue will be rendered. This is an unusual innovation in the presentation of motion pictures, and the novelty of it will no doubt be appreciated by all those who have the fortune of seeing this masterpiece. To arrange for everyone wishing to see "The Unpardonable Sin," the management has arranged to give two performances nightly, commencing at 6.15, and the second showing at 9.30. This will enable the late comers to secure a seat, although everyone is advised to come early, as no reservations can be made. In addition to this stupendous 9 reel Feature, the "Great Gamble" will be shown so that those following this serial will have the opportunity of keeping up with each episode. In addition the Allen will show the Harold Lloyd Comedy, making a bill of twelve reels in all. The biggest and best show yet presented to local patrons by any Theatre at Popular prices.

ATLANTIC FLIER AT THE GRAND OCT. 23RD

SIR HENRY WILLEN BROWN HAS BEEN BOOKED FOR ENGAGEMENT.

With characteristic enterprise in securing the best available attractions, Manager Dahn of the Grand Opera House has booked for Thursday, October 23rd, no less a celebrity than Sir Henry Witten Brown, the dauntless aviator who first flew the Atlantic and for his daring feat not only won the Lord Northcliffe prize of fifty thousand pounds, but was knighted by King George. Sir Henry will lecture on his famous flight and will show on the screen some of the scenes of his trip. It will be a rare opportunity to see and hear the most famous aviator on earth today.

COAL MINE EXPLOSIONS.

They May Have a Connection With Seismic Disturbances.

Not a few notable examples of danger periods in coal mines have occurred simultaneously with periods of seismic unrest. As examples of such coincidences in recent years may be cited the Mont Pelee period, 1902, marked by the loss of 350 lives in four mine explosions; the Formosa, Japan, 1906, costing several thousand lives and $15,000,000 property loss, marked by the terrible Courrieres explosion, in which 1,200 lives were sacrificed; the Fukushima explosion, 307 lives, and a number of less fatal explosions in West Virginia and Colorado, which were almost immediately followed by the San Francisco disaster, that destroyed $400,000,000 worth of property and over 2,000 lives. The entire period covered less than two months and was followed four months later by the destructive Valparaiso earthquake, with a property loss of $250,000,000 and 7,000 lives, which was almost immediately followed by a remarkable series of mine explosions at Bluefield, W. Va., thirty lives; Raton, N. M., fifteen lives; Windsute, England, twenty-five lives; Pocahontas, Va., thirty-five lives, etc.

This was followed, again, by the Kingston, Jamaica, disaster, January, 1907, with a $10,000,000 property loss and 1,000 lives, which was coincident with the renewed activity of Mount Etna and earthquake in Sumatra, costing 1,500 lives. Simultaneous with this outbreak was the loss, in mine explosions, of twenty-four lives at Primero, Colo.; 250 at Essen, Germany; twelve at Lorents mine; eighty-four at Stuart, and twenty-five at Thomas, W. Va., and numerous others in other states. The remarkable concomitance of these periods of seismic unrest and danger in mines due to prevalence of gas point to the consideration of the globe as a unit, sensitive in a varying degree to the physical changes in its crust.—Coal Age.

A SUPERB MUSICAL TREAT FOR THIS CITY

TWO BEAUTIFUL OPERAS BY SAN CARLO GRAND OPERA COMPANY FOR THE GRAND

Owners of victrolas, graphophones, pianolas and other mechanical musical machines, are busy these days in an endeavor to more thoroughly familiarize themselves with the melodies of the two beautiful operas, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I'Pagliacci," to be sung Wednesday evening of next week by the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, at the Grand. Montreal is at present revealing in a series of sixteen peformances by this greatest of all touring organizations, and the exchanges are telling in glowing and convincing terms of the splendor or the performances, the fine symphony orchestra, the large and brilliant chorus and the individual achievements of the more than twenty leading stars.

Peterboro gets this superb musical treat through the fact that the San Carlo managers cancelled their first engagement in London, Ont., on the date mentioned, in order that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales might hold a reception in the Grand Theatre there. And so, what is London's loss, artistically speaking, is Peterboro's gain. The news is most welcome to music-lovers of this community and environs and those who love grandeur and beauty in musical art will do well to place a red ring around the date of Wednesday, Oct. 22., and set aside an appropriation to cover the cost of as many seats as the family exchequer will stand.

Ottawa is to hear the San Carlo stars for two days immediately following the Montreal engagement which ends next Saturday night. The hundred members will come from the capital city here, and after the local affair will journey by special train through to Detroit, where the annual grand opera season in the Michigan metropolis will be held.

Prima donas and tenors are almost as numerous in the San Carlo Company as flowers are in May-time, and a perusal of the list of stars will prove interesting to lovers of music-drama. The roster of leading singers is as follows:

Roster of Principals.

Soprani—Mmes. Queena Mario, the sensational Greek-American coloratura; Haru Onuki, the rich-voiced Japanese prima donna; Rosina Zotti, late of the Coliseo, Buenos Ayres; Sofia Charlebois, lyric star; Bula Ray Shull, dramatic artist.

Mezzo Soprani—Mmes. Stella DeMette, formerly Montreal and Metropolitan Opera star; Ada Louise Armstrong, of San Francisco; Alice Homer, Frances Morosini.

Tenori—Messrs. Manuel Salazar, the eminent Spanish artist; Giuseppe Agostini, versatile Italian star; Franco DeGregorio, late of the Quinlan Opera forces, London, Eng.; Luciano Rossini.

Bassi—Messrs. Pietro DeBlasi, late of the Boston Theatre Co.; Natale Cervi, leading basso buffo from the original Montreal Opera; Antonio Canova.

The casts in detail will be given out in a later edition of this paper, and San Carlo representatives, in the city yesterday, stated they would be made up from the foremost singers of the organization, and the production staged upon the same plans of metropolitan excellence as they have been this week in Montreal. Hotel reservations for the leading stars and other details were attended by the San Carlo agents, and now Peterboro's opera enthusiasts will be pleased to know they can send in mail orders for tickets prior to next Friday, and these will be filled in strict order of their arrival at the Grand Opera House box office. On Friday morning at 9 o'clock, the public seat sale will open.

"THE UNPARDONABLE SIN"

"Man shall be educated for war and woman for recreation of the warrior. Every thing else is folly." — Nietzsche.

You won't believe it until you see it—and when you see it, you'll want to fight—any red-blooded human would. A powerful story of the Brutality and Injustice of Man toward Woman—unbelievable, unthinkable. Its dramatic thrills will hold you riveted to your seat. MUSICAL PLAY THAT ARRESTS AND HOLDS

What has proven the real success of the present season standing out above all the new musical plays that have been produced in months is "My Soldier Girl," a musical spectacle which will be presented at the Grand, Saturday, matinee and evening. Many names of clever artists well known to lovers of musical plays are to be found in the cast of this remarkable success, including Maude Baxter, Dorothy Garrigue, Leslie Jones, Billy Moore, James, Baber, Billy Murphy and many others. The chorus is composed of the most attractive lot of girls ever gotten together in one organization. The production is gorgeous, whether in the first act, showing Colonel Stone's home at Miami, Fla., during a lawn fete in honor of friends from "over-seas," or the grand stage settings for the Follies production on the roof of a New York theatre, showing the city illuminated in the distance. Many new and novel dances are introduced by the bewitching chorus offering spicy moments of amusement and wholesome entertainment. The score is melodious and the many song hits include "My Soldier Girl," "Just For You," "Jasper's Ragtime Band," "Won't You Be My Beau," "That Dixie Wedding Tune" and "Wrap Me Up in a Bundle of Love."

"OH, BOY" AT THE GRAND THURSDAY EVENING.

CAPACITY HOUSES FOR MICKEY AT THE GRAND

FASCINATING STOREY OF A COUNTRY TOMBOY IS GREAT RECORD BREAKER.

"Mickey," that wonderful picture which has delighted Toronto audiences all summer and which, by the way, established a record run for pictures, began a return engagement at the Grand yesterday. When seen here last spring "Mickey" made a tremendous hit and was greeted with capacity houses. Yesterday's crowds were even greater than those at the former presentation and all appeared to be delighted with the work of that stellar actress, Mabel Normand.

The story is of a young girl who was brought up by a roman parent in the country and allowed to become quite a tomboy. Her aunt in the city, who had heard that Mickey was the owner of a valuable mine, invites her to the city, but when she finds that the mine was a flivver, she sends her to the kitchen as a maid.

In the city she again meets the young chap who had been her sweetheart in the country and after several exciting adventures, including a horse race and a very realistic fight, she marries him. Her mine turns out to be a paying one and everything ends as it should.

Which blade is yours?

Shaving causes the edge to become saw-like, and the blade becomes dull. Stropping re-aligns the edge and brings the blade back to its original keenness. That's why the AutoStrop Razor has such a large sale. Because men realize that no razor can do good work without constant stropping.

Drop in at the nearest dealer's and ask to [illegible] AutoStrop Razor. There is no obligation to buy; and no obligation to keep an AutoStrop Razor if it doesn't please you. Everywhere — razor, strop and 12 blades, complete, $5.00.

EACH MEMBER OF CINCINNATI TEAM RECEIVES $5,207.01—EACH CUB GETS $3,254.36

Chicago, Oct. 9—The players on the Cincinnati team, capturing the series, will receive $117,157.68, which, divided into 22 half shares, will net each player $5,207.01.

The White Sox will draw down $78,104.40, or one-tenth of the total receipts of $722,414 taken in, exclusive of war tax on all eight games.

The totals for eight games follows:

Attendance, 236,928.

Receipts (exclusive of war-tax), $722,414.

Players' share, $260,349.70.

Clubs' share, $389,823.90.

Commission's share, $72,241 40.

Total for Cincinnati Nationals, $117,157 68.

Total for Chicago Americans, $78,104.70.

Each player (24 shares), $3,254 36.

Second teams of leagues:—(New York Nationals and Cleveland Americans), each $19,526.21.

Third teams o fleagues:—(Chicago Nationals and New York Americans), each $13,017.45.

While there are 24 players on the Reds team, three were allotted only a half shar eby a vote of the entire team, thereby cutting the total shares to 22 halves.

CHINA NOT LAND OF HUSTLE

Traveler in That Country Must Possess a Generous Amount of Patience and Tact.

Sooner or later, writes E. H. Wilson in "A Naturalist in Western China," the traveler in China must dispense with the comforts and luxuries of modern occidental methods of travel and adapt himself to those more primitive and decidedly less comfortable of the oriental.

In the regions with which we have to deal there is nothing in the nature of wheeled vehicular traffic save only the rude wheelbarrows in use on the Chengtu plain. There are no mule caravans, and scarcely a riding pony to be found. For overland travel there is the native sedan-chair and one's own legs; for river travel the native boat.

Patience, tact and abundance of time are necessary and the would-be traveler lacking any of these essentials should seek lands where less primitive methods obtain. Endowed with the virtues mentioned, and having unlimited time at his disposal, he may travel anywhere and everywhere in China in safety, with considerable pleasure and abundant profit in knowledge. With her industrious toiling millions, her old, old civilization, her enormous natural wealth and wondrous scenery, China alternately charms and fascinates, irritates and plunges into despair, all who sojourn long within her borders.

THRONE HER PRIZE

Lucky Swimmer Ruler of Ancient City for Year.

Every Girl in Byblos, Syria, Had Opportunity to Compete in Aquatic Contest, Held Annually.

The ivory throne of the high priestess or oracle in the temple of Byblos might be won by any girl in the ancient city, no matter how wealthy or how poor her parents. The position was open to the society queen and the fisher alike, and once seated, she was in reality the ruler of that Syrian city for a year.

In the old days the city of Byblos or Gubal, was famous for the art of its stone cutters, and in the Book of Kings these Gibilites are mentioned as the stone "squarers" employed by King Solomon upon the temple. But it was mainly for the annual festivities held at Byblos and known as the Mysteries of Adonis, that the city was most famed. There was located there a splendid temple to Adonis, and in the spring of each year hundreds of persons from all parts of Syria and the adjacent lands journeyed to the city to witness the celebration of the mysteries.

[illegible] and on the land at the headwaters of the river. For [illegible] the spring rains began to fall in the hills the water of the river became red. The priests said Adonis had been slain. The myth was variously told but briefly it narrated the story of Adonis being killed while hunting and his restoration to life by Jupiter at the prayer of Venus.

When the water of the river became red the people began to lament the death of Adonis. Streets and houses were draped with mourning and the people went about weeping and lamenting. This lasted a week. Then a great funeral procession formed and a wooden image of the god was carried to the river, where it was set adrift to float out to sea.

Then began the unique and interesting part of the ceremonies. The young women of the city assembled along the seashore and all day gazed out over the waves. Sometimes several days were consumed in this part of the ceremony for the watch must be kept until an expected message was received from the waves.

Finally, far out, one might behold an object bobbing up and down on the rollers. As soon as it was discovered a great shout went up from the girls and all plunged into the sea, each striving to be the first to reach and recover the object, an earthen jar in which the message that the god lived again was supposed to come.

Several hundred young women, wildly swimming out at sea, was the unusual sight, for to the first girl to grasp the jar fell the honor of being the high priestess or oracle of the god during the coming year.

The lucky swimmer, on returning to the shore, was grasped by the hands of the crowd and borne in state upon an ivory throne to the great temple, where she was seated with solemn ceremony before the image of the god.

This swimmer might be the daughter of the wealthiest merchant and the leader of society, or might have spent all of her life in the hut of a poor fisherman. No matter what her former social position may have been, from the moment she recovered the jar with its message until another took her place at the close of the year, this girl was consulted about all matters of importance that were of interest to the people. Once seated upon the ivory throne the daughters of the rich came to consult her "mystic wisdom" and merchants planning voyages to lands of which she had never heard would appear with choice gifts. Nothing could occur without her sanction and her words were final.

Then, at the close of the year, another was seated in her place. When the water of the river began to turn red the ivory throne was vacated. She, who for a year had ruled supreme and spoken the words of the god became a common attendant in the great temple and stood quietly in the great assembly, amid the ascending clouds of incense before the image of the god, to see another seated on the prophetic, ivory throne.

Elephants' Picnic.

An act not down on the program was given without charge the other day in the old seaport town of Marblehead, Mass., when four elephants of a small circus, named with fine allied patriotism General Foch, General Pershing, General Haig and Princess Pat, jumped a stone wall, escaped the circus and took to the woods. The personnel of the circus, acrobats, riders, clowns and canvasmen, followed, and so did many of the townspeople and half a dozen policemen, but the elephants made the woods first, and there they spent the day with "a large and appreciative audience" watching on the outskirts. Peanuts and bananas, usually a temptation to elephants, failed to entice them from their New England jungle; but as twilight fell, and habit suggested feeding time, the big beasts came peacefully out of the woods and allowed the trainer and his assistants to lead them back to the circus grounds. And all Marblehead went home to belated suppers.

Germany Seeks Wool Substitutes.

Search for wool substitutes will doubtless continue in Germany, where sheep rearing is not likely to increase materially. Dogs' hair and even human hair have been tried, as felt material of limited supply, and the long hair of women found military use during the war. A possible new industry is to be based on the white, silken-haired rabbit. The hair may be spun into very fine soft threads, suitable for weaving certain fabrics, and plans are said to have been made for breeding several millions of the animals.

Oil in Mexico.

Recent investigations which have been made on the Pacific coast of Mexico reveal the existence of rich deposits of petroleum. These discoveries are of great importance, because they will ultimately serve to intensify maritime traffic and seem to presage for some of the western ports of Mexico a future as promising as that of Tampico or Tuxpam.

THE NAME GOETHALS.

It Means "Stiff Necked" and Dates From the Crusaders.

The soldier and administrative military man have been bred in George Washington Goethals for three generations. He is claimed now by many cities and states, but he is a "Brooklyn boy," although his ancestry is Swiss and of the military Swiss at that. His grandfather was a surgeon in the French army and was with Napoleon at Austerlitz. His own father, John Goethals, was born in Switzerland and moved to Amsterdam in his early boyhood. In 1848 he came to this country, making his home in Brooklyn, where in 1858 Colonel Goethals was born.

The origin of the family name is interesting. In good Dutch it is the equivalent of the English "stiff necked" and was conferred on the first of the present line, who was one of the crusaders, by an early king of Flanders. This man was fighting side by side with his king when a foe struck him a mighty blow. The sword was turned aside by the armor, and the man kept on fighting. A second blow was struck, but still the man kept on fighting before the eyes of his king until the battle was won. After the conflict the king called the warrior to his side and commended him for his prowess.

"Sire," said the soldier, "I break before I bend."

"Henceforth," said the king, "thy name is Goetbals, the stiff necked." The name "stuck," and for centuries the family motto has been, "We break before we bend."—New York Herald.

An Old London Church.

London is to lose another of its historical churches. The parishioners of St. Alphage, London Wall, have dropped to thirty-five, and the church will now be amalgamated with the parish of St. Mary the Virgin, and the building will be razed.

In 1013 the citizens of London built a church to the memory of St. Alphage next to the Roman wall. This church became dilapidated, and was pulled down in 1537, and the Priory Church of the Elsynge Hospital became the parish church until it also decayed. In 1777 a new St. Alphage was built on the other side of the street, and so at the moment the curious sight is seen of a church on one side and its churchyard on the other.

Fortunately the loss, so far as architecture is concerned, will be negligible when St. Alphage disappears. It is built in the worst Georgian fashion. The beautiful Saxon work, a relic of the old priory, is to be preserved, and this has been turned into a delightful little chapel of ease, always open to those persons in London who care to go in and forget the rush of modern life in the contemplation of an ancient arch.

A WELCOME VISITOR.

Rev. A. H. Brace of Grayenhurst conducted Thanksgiving services at [illegible] and he met many Peterborough friends of twelve years ago when in charge of this congregation. The reverend gentleman delivered two forceful sermons, but did not touch on the referendum question. At the evening service he said that, as the congregation would on the 20th be called on to vote on Prohibition he felt like "pitching in," but realised that his duty was to preach the gospel.

A bill poster knows his place and there sticks.

Proposed Housing Operations
Information Wanted

Under the provisions of the Ontario Housing Act, the City Council is desirous of being informed if there are citizens ready to enter into arrangements to have dwellings built under conditions of payment as specified in the said Act.

Houses of moderate cost, say from $2500.00 to $3500.00, including cost of lot.

Names may be forwarded, by letter, to the City Clerk, giving brief particulars as to locality desired within the city limits, and cost, not to exceed above amounts. Applications to be in by Saturday, 18th inst.

Replies will enable Council to determine as to the advisability of taking up the proposition.

SAYS MR. SODEN IF ELECTED WILL BE A CREDIT TO WEST PETERBORO

Mr. V. J. McElderry Addresses Meeting at Buckhorn in Interests of Conservative Candidate—Mr. Soden Discusses Platform—Encouraging Reception by the Electors.

Mr. R. J. Soden, the Conservative candidate, is meeting with a flattering reception in his swing around the circle in the rural sections. His meetings are well attended as political meetings go these days. There is no manifest opposition to his candidature, to his party or to his platform. The rural voters have faith in Sir William Hearst and are behind the candidate who is pledged to support the Premier in all his policies. There is no mistaking the temperance sentiment of the people in the townships. The Ontario Temperance Act will be sustained beyond all doubt, and the voters of West Peterborough will follow up their work in this regard by supporting the candidate who will be in a position to help render that Act effective. Local option has been in successful operation for years in the rural municipalities. Now the opportunity comes to make prohibiton permanent and general.

The best meeting yet held by Mr. Soden was that at Buckhorn last night, when he and Mr. V. J. McElderry discussed the issues of the day, both gentlemen devoting a considerable portion of their remarks to dealing with the question of prohibition. Mr. Samuel Wood occupied the chair.

Mr. McElderry also dealt with the labor record of the Ontario Government and explained the operation of the Workmen's Compensation Act, the most advanced labor legislation in the world today.

Speaking of women and the franchise Mr. McElderry said that good things are expected of the new voters, and he has no doubt that they will elevate the political standard of the province. The time is coming, too, when the women will have their own representatives in the Legislature.

In a personal reference to the Conservative candidate, Mr. McElderry said that the voters of West Peterborough now have an excellent opportunity to elect a man of integrity who will not only faithfully watch the interests of the riding but will be a credit to the district that sends him to the Legislature. His attitude on the temperance question is no secret. For that and by reason of his own sterling qualities he is entitled to support.

Mr. Soden for over an hour discussed the leading issues of the day in his usual lucid and interesting manner, and received the closest attention. There was no mistaking the sentiment of the audience, who applauded eloquently when Mr. Soden announced that he would vote tousnoss on the referendum ballot.

Mr. Soden remained at Buckhorn last night and will spend the day among the voters of that district. This evening he will address a meeting in Ventress school house.

TAX EXEMPTION FOR WAR VETS

DEPUTATION OF G.W.V.A. WAITS ON THE COUNCIL TO THIS END

President Staunton, Secretary Whatley, R. E. and W. S. Finlay were a deputation from the G. W. V. A. to the City Council last night to press for exemption from taxes, except for schools and local improvements, on property owned and occupied by returned soldiers.

Council was meeting in Committee of the Whole and sent this request to the legal committee.

Mr. G. N. Gordon presented the case for the veterans, and suggested that young men who did not go overseas might in reason shoulder whatever deficit to the city's treasury would result from such exemption of taxes to those who responded to the Empire's call. He also asked for the remission of poll tax for single returned soldiers, and pointed out that many of the returned men are not yet placed in positions, while others have yet to complete their trade apprenticeship or training in whatever avocation they left to enlist. There are also men whose appeal to the pension board has been disappointing because they are not permanently disabled, while others whose earning power is now less than those who did not go overseas can offer to the pension board no affirmative proof that their present ailments are the result of the war. These facts, Mr. Gordon submitted, should be taken into consideration by the Council in the way of remission of the taxes asked for.

Housing Scheme.

Mr. W. E. Layfield took the opportunity to notify Council that there are twenty-five or thirty veterans who submitted to the G. W. V. A their names last spring as willing to participate in the Government's housing scheme, and he thought that now the city has taken the initiative in this project these men might be glad to build by means of municipal loans.

There were present Mayor Duncan, Aldermen Gainey, Turner, Garside, Morrison, Crowe and Edgar.

CLOSE PORTION OF BETHUNE ST.

WORK ON NEW BRIDGE OVER CREEK TO COMMENCE AT ONCE

Bethune street between Brock and Murray streets is to be closed for eight or ten days to permit of work on the new Grand Trunk railway and public highway bridge at this point. The railway company have their machinery here ready to begin work, and Council passed an order last night to the above effect, the company to assume all responsibility connected with closing this street, and to leave access to Fitzgerald's coal sheds.

Re-Engage Man.

The returned soldier recently discharged from his duty of directing traffic at the scene of the new bridge, is to be re-engaged, and the lay-off is to be applied to some man not a veteran.

Ald. Morrison was authorized by Council in committee to install a punch register in connection with the new electric alarm system at the fireball. The cost is $280.

Von Der Goltz Resigns.

Berlin.—Gen. Von Der Goltz has resigned from the German army as a result of the latest Entente note

ALFRED McDONALD LUMBER CO. TO BUILD NEW FACTORY AND EXTEND OPERATIONS

Manager Dick and Alfred McDonald of the Alfred McDonald Lumber Co., Limited, asked the City Council last night to permanently transfer to the company that strip of land at their mills from the southern line of Rink street and extending south half way to Perry street. This request was granted, the company to pay $25 to cover bylaw and transferrence costs.

This land is mainly created by sawdust filling around a small knoll or island, and includes that portion of Crescent street at present absorbed by the company's yard, and is of no use for public purposes. Rink street will not be closed.

With this concession from the city the company will at once erect a new box factory, employing fifteen additional men, and they also contemplate considerable development of their sash, door and planing business generally.

ALL-RUSSIAN ARMY CAPTURES AREL WITH MANY PRISONERS, AND MATERIAL

Soviet Government of Russia Facing a Crisis—General Denikine Within Striking Distance of Petrograd—Bolshevik Army Smashed on a Wide Front and Russians Break Through—Bolshevists Everywhere in a Panic—Gen. Zudenitch's Offensive Continuing.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 15.—General Denikine's anti-Bolshevik army has captured the important city of Orel, together with thousands of prisoners and enormous quantities of material, it was announced in advances received here today.

Gets Secure Hold.

Two batteries of Bolshevik artillery fell into General Denikine's hands. While Orel is 238 miles south of Moscow, possession of the city will give General Denikine's secure hold on vast stretches of territory in old Russia as the place is one of the most important railway centres south of the present Russian capital.

Crashed Through Lines.

With General Denikine's Cosack army advancing from south and north-western Russia his forces almost within striking distance of Petrograd, the Soviet Government of Russia appears to be facing a crisis.

Bolsheviki headquarters at Petrograd were closed last Thursday, according to a despatch to The Daily Mail from Reval. The north-western Russian army has apparently crashed through the Bolshevik lines over the wide front.

Success Complete.

London, Wednesday, Oct. 15. — "The success of Gen. Yudenitch against the Bolsheviki is so complete as to be almost staggering," says the Daily Mail's Reval correspondent, telegraphing Monday. "His advance guard took Koloshova, 50 miles from Petrograd, Sunday, and his army recovered almost the advanced point of the Jugo offensive. Athousand prisoners, thirteen machine guns and an armored train were captured yesterday.

"A force detached from the northward seized Goonontova and 600 prisoners. Pakov was retaken this morning. The Russians also are close to the important station of Luga, which probably already has fallen."

"The Bolshevists everywhere are in panic. The Bolshevik Ministrie in Petrograd are said to have been closed Thursday.

"Gen. Yudenitch's offensive is continuing under a wave of patriotic enthusiasm on a front of 100 miles."

C. P. R. OFFICIALS IN CONFERENCE

THE REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING OF THE DISTRICT TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE.

The district transportation committee convened this morning at 9 o'clock in the Board of Trade chambers.

A welcome was extended to the meeting by His Worship the Mayor and by President J. J. Turner of the Board of Trade, who hoped that this occasion would not be the last conference to be held in Peterborough.

The conference lasting about two hours, the officials were then entertained by the city and the Board of Trade, viewing the city.

The Visitors.

The conference was attended by the following officials:

Allan Purvis, general superintendent, Toronto; H. J. Humphrey, superintendent, Toronto; R. W. Scott, superintendent, Toronto; M. H. Brown, divisional freight agent, Toronto; W. B. Banford, district freight agent, Toronto; W. J. Grant, D. F. A., Hamilton; C. S. Morse, D. F. A., London; J. A. Morrice, agent, foreign freight, Toronto; T. H. Horan travelling car service agent, Montreal; W. T. Howard, district passenger agent, Toronto; W. S. Dodd agent, Peterborough; W. Coulter, agent, Toronto; J. W. Anderson, agent, Lindsay; O. Burns, agent, Oshawa; W. A. Walsh, agent, Belleville; J. G. Skinner, city ticket agent, Peterborough; D. Saulter, agent, Parkdale; C. J. W. Whitney, agent, Galt; E. J. Skelly, supervisor, West Toronto; S. Rosenthal, secretary to the general superintendent, West Toronto.

LABOR NOMINEE

THOMAS TOOMS

Campaign Notes

Mr. Tooms, the Labor candidate, addressed two meetings last night, one at Young's Point and the other at Selwyn. Other speakers were J. Lane and T. McMurray at Young's Point, and F. Asta, who spoke at the Selwyn gathering. Mr. Tooms will hold a meeting at Buckhorn tonight.

Perhaps the people are not getting excited over the election, but watch West Peterborough poll the biggest vote in its history.

Again, women voters are reminded that they can vote for a candidate as well as on the referendum.

The deputy returning officer will hand every person who goes into the booth two ballots. This should remind the new women voters that they are expected to vote for men as well as for measures.

A vote for Soden means a vote for Hearst, and Sir William Hearst is a friend of prohibition.

MINERS WILL STRIKE

Order Calling for Bituminous Men to cease Work Oct. 31st.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Indianapolis, Oct. 14.— A strike order has been issued, calling on all bituminous miners in the United States to cease the production of coal on October 31st.

LONG SHOREMEN RETURN TO WORK

BACK OF BIG STRIKE BROKEN BY ACCEPTANCE OF GOVERNMENT COMPROMISE.

FOOD SHORTAGE THREATENED

PARALYZED PORT ACTIVITIES SERIOUSLY AFFECTED NEW YORK'S FOOD SITUATION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Oct. 15.- The strike of workers, which has paralyzed port activities here for several days, and threatened a serious food shortage, was broken today when Ferry workers returned to work and fifteen thousand of eighty thousand longshoremen resumed their labors.

Unexpected Decision

Union leaders predicted that by Friday all of the longshoremen would be at work. The ferrymen at midnight unexpectedly decided to return immediately, accepting with reservation the Government's compromise wage increase offer.

Crew and Mail.

The Chicago also carries fifteen officers and 140 men of the crew of the Venezia and 169 sacks of mail She is due to dock here on Saturday

CANADIAN TRADE

Shows Decrease of $32,575,418 the Past Six Months.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Oct. 15.—A decrease of $32,575,418 in the grand total of Canadian trade for six months of the fiscal year ending Sept 30, as compared with the same period in 1918, is shown by the monthly trade statement issued through the Customs Department.

Copenhagen. Latest Advices from Riga state that fire is raging in many parts of the city. German and Russian troops practically surround the city.

MRS. DAVID LLOYD GEORGE TAKES PART IN TEMPERANCE CAMPAIGN

Appeals to Scotch Women to Help Victims of Alcoholism at Home, as They Aided Victims of Prussianism in Belgium—All Eyes Focussed on Scotland.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 15.— Mrs David Lloyd George, wife of the British Premier, is taking a prominent part in the prohibition campaign, addressing a meeting of two thousand women at Glasgow yesterday.

Women's Duty to Help.

Despatches received here quote Mrs. Lloyd George as saying that the success of the campaign depended upon women.

"It is the duty of women to help the victims of alcoholism at home, as it was their duty to help victims of Prussianism in Belgium five years ago."

A Great Campaign.

Mrs. Lloyd George is reported to have said: "Scotland is on the eve of a great campaign and next year the eyes of temperance reformers throughout the world will be focussed on Scotland. If Scotland is won that victory will be a great stimulus to the world to do likewise."

MRS. ROGERS RE-ELECTED PRES. OF PROTESTANT HOME BOARD

Excellent Reports of Year's Work at Annual Meeting of Board of Directors.

The annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Protestant Home was held at the Home yesterday afternoon, and everyone present appeared interested and enthusiastic in their work. Mr. Rollins opened the meeting with Bible reading and prayer, after which the secretary's report, which shows the wonderful work of the Home and which follows later, was read and adopted.

In seconding the motion for the adoption of this report, Mayor Duncan congratulated the Protestant Home Board on their splendid showing financially, and every other way. He also spoke of the benefit of such an institution as the Protestant Home to the city. It provides a home for the unfortunate and aged that otherwise would be a great care for someone not capable of bearing it. And this Home, he felt sure, was a real Home, for in talking to the inmates, he heard them all speak very highly to the excellent and patient work of Miss Lancaster as superintendent. Mr. Duncan felt that the work of looking after the Home was a real duty in the performance of which we are doing service to those who most need it.

Miss Lancaster in her report showed that it was somewhat difficult to always get along perfectly peaceable with such inmates as they have but she thought for the most part they were doing it. She called attention to the number with infirmities that must have special care, four are blind, four are unfortunately going blind and have lost all hope of recovering their sight, five are crippled, three are almost stone deaf and four are what might be termed mentally deficient, but she was ready and anxious to carry on her work because people have expressed to her how much they appreciated the blessing the Home afforded and also she was able to carry on on account of the splendid support she always received from the Board during her term of seven years as superintendent.

Mr Hamilton gave a splendid report in connection with the garden and general repairs, etc. He reported that he had raised sufficient garden produce to keep the Home supplied for the coming year and had 65 bags of potatoes in the cellar.

Several of the directors expressed their entire satisfaction of Mr. Hamilton's services.

Canon Davidson spoke a few words stating that he thought the Board should feel greatly strengthened by the grateful expressions of all those who feel so satisfied with the splendid work that is being accomplished. He also praised Mrs. Lancaster for her patient, untiring work in caring for the aged and infirm as very few could care for them.

R. N. SLUMAN DESIRES TO LOCATE HIS BROTHER AND SISTER

Anyone Who Knows the Whereabouts of George Sluman or Mrs. Terry Should Infor Chief Thompson.

The folowing letter was received by Chief Thompson this morning:

Consular Agent,

Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir:— Would it be possible for you to give me any information in regards to the whereabouts of George Sluman or Mrs. William Terry. There are brother and sister to me and used to live in Peterborough find them. I am quite sure they are some years ago, but I have lost track of them and it seems impossible to find them. I am quite sure they are in Canada some where. Any information you can give me would be greatly appreciated.

Yours respectfully,

R. N. SLUMAN.

MISS BOOTH KNOCKED DOWN AFTER GETTING OFF STREET CAR

Auto Driven by Bruce Fitzgerald Ran Into Her at Corner.

Miss Loretta Boothe was knocked down and injured at the corner of Dublin and George streets at noon today. She stepped off the car at the corner and as she stepped toward the sidewalk, after the car had commenced to move, it appears a car driven by Mr. Bruce Fitzgerald came along and the fender hit Miss Boothe, hurling her to the pavement. She was taken to the store on the corner and a doctor summoned, who stated that he did not consider her injuries very serious although she was suffering greatly from fright. She was then removed in an automobile to her home on Water street.

If anyone can assist the Chief in locating these parties their information will be gratefully received.

LIBERAL MEMBERS IN CAUCUS TO-DAY OPPOSE PURCHASE OF GRAND TRUNK

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—Liberal members of the Commons met in caucus here today and decided to strongly oppose Grand Trunk legislation on the ground that it was unfair to the country to propose such legislation at the present time.

Mackenzie King Present.

The caucus was presided over by J. C. Ethier, M.P. for Two Mountains. Leader Mackenzie King attended the gathering.

Statements of Sir Thomas White regarding the financial condition of Canada were freely quoted and opinion expressed that such legislation as the Grand Trunk purchase should not be put through at the present time.

Debate All Week.

Liberal members declared that the debate on the question in Commons would last all week and well into next unless closure is applied by the Government. Liberal Senators present also promised a stiff fight in the upper chamber.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1919.

MR. GILLESPIE'S BUSINESS.

THE EXAMINER says that Mr. Gillespie's business is his own affair, and that no one has a right to attempt to pry into it, even during a campaign in which Mr. Gillespie is a candidate for the Legislature.

Mr. Soden at the Bridgenorth meeting addressed a few questions to Mr. Gillespie. He believed that the consumers are entitled to know how it is that Mr. Gillespie pays the farmer a fraction over six cents a quart for milk and retails it at twelve to the city resident Another query had to do with the fact that condensed milk made for the Armour Company by Mr. Gillespie sells for less than the brand which carries Mr. Gillespie's own trade mark, although the material used and the quantity is the same.

The Examiner should not be so inconsistent. It likes to poke its own nose into the business affairs of every concern in the country suspected of keeping up the high cost of living. Only the other day it protested vigorously at the price of pie sold in local restaurants. Why fight the cost of luxuries while the price of staples is to be left uncriticized?

Any restaurant keeper in Peterborough can charge what he chooses for pie and other articles on his bill-of-fare and get away with it, so far as the Examiner is concerned, by the simple method of becoming a political candidate on our contemporary's platform.

THE ARTFUL DODGER AGAIN.

"HOW ARE YOU going to vote on the referendum?" asked an elector of Mr. Hartley Dewart at the nomination meeting in Southwest Toronto on Monday. As usual, when this rather delicate matter is referred to, Mr. Dewart sidestepped by replying that he was going to vote by ballot, just as his questioner was. In other words, Mr. Dewart seems to regard that matter as peculiarly his own affair.

This would be true beyond all question if Mr. Dewart were a private citizen. Every man has a right to vote as his conscience dictates, and the secret ballot has been devised to safeguard this right. But Mr. Dewart is the leader of a party, a candidate for the Premiership of Ontario, and temperance is the leading issue in the campaign. But for his prominence in politics he would be justified in resenting any queries as to his intentions made by a belligerent stranger.

What faith can the temperance voters of Ontario place in a leader who refuses to declare himself on an issue so vital? What confidence can they repose in any legislative candidate who runs for office under Mr. Dewart's leadership?

Mr. Dewart's position is not hard to understand. He desires to stand as well as possible with both sides. But the Prohibitionists of Ontario would have greater respect for Mr. Dewart if he had the courage to declare that he would vote yes on every question on the referendum ballot, even if he pledged himself to still carry out the wishes of the people in the event of his election to the Premiership. The late Sir Wilfrid Laurier was personally opposed to the idea of conscription and he did not hesitate to say so. He promised, however, if returned to power to take a plebiscite on this issue and be guided by the result, an illustrious example that Mr. Dewart would do well to follow.

Provincial Treasurer McGarry at his nomination meeting at Renfrew was asked the same question which drove Mr. Dewart to light repartee. Without hesitation he declared that he would vote "no" on all four questions on the temperance ballot.

Our contemporary, always beset by foolish misgivings is not satisfied with Premier Hearst's personal pledge to vote no. What bothers it is how the members of the Cabinet will vote. Our contemporary can rest assured that when the Ontario Temperance Act, if endorsed by the people, comes before the Cabinet for final disposition, all the members will vote with the Premier or resign office.

A MASTER OF FINANCE.

PREMIER HEARST is personally popular and strong with the voters of Ontario. Besides this, he will be aided in the election next Monday by the strength and popularity of his associates in the Cabinet, every one of whom can point to a record of efficiency and progress. Ontario is in better shape today than in any period of provincial history.

One of the ablest members of the Hearst Cabinet is the Hon. T. W. McGarry, who holds the important position of provincial treasurer. He is regarded as the most efficient official who has ever discharged the duties of that office, a statement not likely to be controverted by any one with the possible exception of our contemporary. Figures never deceive, and Mr. McGarry can produce a long array of these silent witnesses to testify to his competency.

The financial expansion of Ontario has been nothing short of marvellous during the past fourteen years, and Mr. McGarry has kept pace with this advancement and has risen equal to every occasion since he has acted as treasurer, a position which he has filled for the past six years. The provincial income has since 1904 increased five fold. The subsidy received from the Dominion has been more than doubled. This is one source of the increase referred to in the revenue. The rest has been secured by careful methods which imposed few direct burdens upon the people. There has been an advance in the tax levied upon corporations. Succession duties are higher. Motor vehicles have been taxed, and the receipts from this source have been used in the construction of improved highways.

The Hearst Government, with larger financial sources at its command, has been able to increase the public grants for useful purposes. The legislative aid to the schools of the Province has been raised in the same proportion as the growth of the revenue. Here in Peterborough County the High and Public schools receive today five times the amount from the State than was paid in 1904.

Mr. McGarry has maintained the financial record of the Province at a high standard, and Ontario's credit is excellent with the financiers of Wall Street. The Province is not on the verge of bankruptcy, as some reckless campaign orators are alleging.

Mr. McGarry has been a member of the Legislature for South Renfrew since 1905, the year the late Sir James Whitney became Premier. Five years ago he was returned unopposed, and there is no question of his success next Monday. He is an excellent speaker, a man in every sense well equipped for the career which he has chosen.

STRANGE POLITICAL BED-FELLOWS.

HISTORY RECORDS how a certain king, whose country was invaded by a foreign foe, was taken prisoner and forced by his captors to go before his own army and advise them to lay down their arms, which they did, believing in the divine right of their sovereign. But when the manacled monarch, under instructions from his victors, went on to laud the invaders as a beneficent people and to declare that a change of government would make for the general welfare, it was too much for the native warriors. Picking up their arms again they renewed the attack and their deposed king was one of the first to fall in the ensuing carnage.

History certainly does persevere in the habit of repeating itself. Mr. Joseph Wearing is campaigning for Mr. Gillespie. When he praises the integrity of the candidate, no one has any protests to make. Exalting Hartley Dewart as the white hope of the temperance party is another matter and is apt to have similar effect as the made-to-order utterances of the king in captivity.

The Liberal campaign in this riding has developed strange bed-fellows. Mr. R. R. Hall is another of Mr. Gillespie's active champions, and is touring the townships with him. Evidently Mr. Hall has forgotten Mr. Gillespie's desertion of his own cause in 1917. But if Mr. Hall has buried the hatchet, it is safe to assume that he can locate the cemetery on short notice. The Prohibitionists of West Peterborough will be ready to welcome the new recruit to their ranks.

But there is a point beyond which even the most daring politician does not care to go. Hartley Dewart has not been brought to this riding to speak for Mr. Gillespie, the party leaders not being disposed to destroy their candidate's last chance for success.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

WHO IS GOING to make the future history of Ontario, Sir William Hearst or Hartley Dewart?

• • • • •

ONTARIO HAS already decided to be prosperous, happy and righteous without a Liberal Administration.

• • • • •

EVEN IF THE DOLLAR has lost considerable of its purchasing power, the merry chase for it continues as ever.

• • • • •

A CONTEMPORARY editor should not grieve over the cost of pie. What really concerns him is the selling price of fish.

• • • • •

• • • • •

MR. GILLESPIE has not yet told the electors whether he would support Mr. Dewart for Premier, if the opportunity should arise.

• • • • •

WHAT DID Hartley Dewart do in the war? Waive that question for a moment to consider what he did for and to his party in 1917.

• • • • •

THE HEARST Government has provided ways and means by which every municipality may build homes for its working population.

• • • • •

WHAT A PITY it is that they cannot candle Mr. Dewart, as they do suspected eggs, to ascertain his real sentiments on the temperance issue.

• • • • •

TO SAVE THEMSELVES from an old age of poverty the teachers of Ontario will vote for the Administration of which Hon. Dr. Cody is a member.

• • • • •

MESSRS. GILLESPIE, Wearing and Hall may occupy the same political couch, but the coverlets must be painfully inadequate for such an aggregation.

• • • • •

WHAT, AS A RULE, happens to a political candidate who refuses to declare himself on the paramount issue, but watches intently for the feline's spring?

• • • • •

COUNT THAT DAY at least half lost if the sun sets next Monday evening and you have not voted for a candidate as well as for the Ontario Temperance Act.

• • • • •

POKING ITS proboscis through a modest opening in the door leading to a gathering of temperance workers, the Examiner, on behalf of the Liberals, remarks modestly, "Codlin's the friend, not Short."

• • • • •

THE VOTERS of Ontario in 1911 helped save Canada from being made a mere commercial adjunct of the United States. They can save their own Province now from becoming the bar-room of the American republic.

• • • • •

J. Wearing, a barrister of Peterborough, spoke at some length in Col. O'Flynn's interest extolling the Grit policy, but forgot to mention any of the misdeeds perpetrated by the Liberals when in power in Ontario.—Belleville Intelligencer.

WHY NOT BE FAIR to Mr. Wearing? How could the Intelligencer expect him, with the limited time at his disposal, to deal with a subject so extensive?

A WORD TO NEW VOTERS

Some women are confused about their voting privileges for election day, October 20. A few facts stated may make it clearer in their minds.

Women now have votes on exactly the same basis as men, and it is not only their right but their duty to cast those votes on election day.

Women have a vote for the parliamentary candidate in their riding, and they have another entirely separate vote on the referendum. Some think they have a vote on the latter but not on the former. This is, of course, a mistake. You have a vote on each. Each woman will have two ballots to cast. These are separate slips of paper, and one has no effect on the other.

To the right of the name of the Conservative candidate place a X. That is the only mark to be made on this ballot paper. If you put anything but the one X it will destroy your vote.

The other ballot paper is for your vote on the referendum. On this you will find the four questions dealing with prohibition. To the right of the four questions are two narrow columns, one headed "Yes" and the other "No." Each of the four questions has to be answered separately. If your answer is "yes" to a question, put a X in the "Yes" column to the right of the question. If your answer is "no," put a X in the "No" column after that particular question. All four questions on the referendum ballot must be answered with a X in either one or other column opposite the question. Or your ballot will be spoiled. It is not enough to answer only one or two of the questions.

This referendum ballot has nothing to do with the provincial elections, either one side or the other. The ballot paper will be placed in a separate ballot box altogether.

Voting on Wash Day.

An amusing little incident is told of a certain Toronto woman who [illegible] the just-passed election.

"Remember, we will call for you on Monday (which it will be remembered was the day of the week when ballots were cast) and take you down to the polling booth," said one of the canvassers who had been endeavoring to get all the women to use their vote.

"Monday," exclaimed the prospective voter; "well, you see, Monday is wash day, so I couldn't go then, but I'd like fine to go on Tuesday or Wednesday."

Again this time election day falls on Monday—October 20. Women are gently reminded that the washing could be delayed for half an hour while the worker goes out to cast her vote, and Tuesday or Wednesday would be too late to vote. Your vote is important to the Province—too important to neglect. Woman's duties to Canada did not cease with the armistice. There is peace work as well as war work to be done. Part of the peace work is to help elect to Parliament the men who will have the country's best interests at heart. The Ontario Government did not fail in its responsibilities in war time, and the same Government can be relied upon to give just as fine a record of public service in times of peace.

HOW TO MARK YOUR BALLOT

Do not write your name or any other word, letter or sign on ballot, but make four X's under the four Noes.

Go to polls next Monday as early as possible after 9 a.m. Ladies are requested to vote in forenoon.

Everybody who can walk to polls or go by own rig, please go early as possible. This will aid workers very much.

Never before were there so many votes to be polled in one day. Go early or you may fail to record yours.

Your vote is wanted. Let nothing but sickness or death prevent you from recording your vote on Monday in favor of temperance.

Men hasten to accept the mute standing invitation of a pretty girl who enters a crowded street car.

HOUSING ACCOMODATION

Attention is drawn to the advertisement inserted in the local press by authority of the Mayor, asking that citizens who would entertain the idea of having dwellings erected for their use, under the Ontario Housing Act, advise of such intention and give assent. Replies in very brief form, to be sent to the City Clerk, who will receive and hold for further action.

Members of Council have been pressed to revive the project of building under auspices of the Act. Quite rightly, Council wishes to know, before going to any expense, indeed before appointing a Housing Commission, if there may be enough in number to warrant such action. If there be a sufficient number to warrant further careful inquiry into the bona fides of the proposition, well and good. If not then the matter can, and will be set aside. It is for citizens to say.

Those who are interested and who apply will, it is understood, be called together and all details fully explained as to loans, probable costs, plans and properties. This can be done verbally and will avoid explanation to each in detail. All enquiries should be in by evening of 18th inst.

Look at the Situation.

In the meantime it will do no harm to look at the situation now present in this community with regard to lack of housing accommodation, prospect of additional building, claims out forward why building may not be undertaken, chances of such being brought forward by private enterprise, the bearing that the lack of housing has, and will have on the matter of rental amounts, and the situation as it affects the city as a city, both for itself and in the eye of the Province and country. Discussion of these points may seem a large order, but it need not be prolix and dreary.

As to the Municipality.

We hope that our city will grow and expand. We hope to induce additional industries to here locate, where they will furnish employment, and for themselves, to make money. If they do not make money then they will likely cease to operate and employment cease. One thing bears on the other.

New industries will bring people with them. They will induce others to come and live here. Both classes must be housed. It is admitted there is a scarcity of houses, and little to offer the new man coming in. The Manufacturers Committee of Council is struggling with this proposition, presented on behalf of every projected addition to our number of industries "what can you offer to house our men." City Clerk Armstrong, who is indefatigible in good work in the direction of bringing in new propositions, finds this a very pertinent point in negotiations. There is no better fact to present to the enquiring manufacurer than the statement that Peterborough has at disposal a reasonable number of dwellings at a not unreasonable rental cost. It is often the determining factor.

This city has to grow. It is the only way out of excessive municipal rates and exactions. Additions to the assessed value of the city, as a whole, has not in the past four years been anything like up to pre-war standards. True the reasons have been apparent, and need not here be discussed. If the assessment remains moderately stationary, does not expand by growth, by additional real property which to assess, we will have a tax rate that will discourage location here. When the full force of the taxes additions consequent on financing the bridge, the new school, the sewage disposal plant, the water filtration plant develop you will have a rate that will, so to speak, put your eye out. Better try and get ready for the infliction while there be time.

If we do not have a substantial increase in the assessed value of the city the burden will go over to the property owenr, and by him paid, or if a landlord, passed on to the tenant. For if the tenant enjoy the privileges of the bridge, school, clearer water, and sewage safety he should pay for it. Whether he wishes to or not he will. There should be no illusion on the part of any one in the community that these additional charges can be dodged. Next to death, there is nothing surer than taxes. The property has to bear it. And those using pay.

Cost of Building.

Now as to the situation as it affects the cost of erecting houses, of a class. Moderate class, let us add.

There is a field of thought, and expectation, that hopes the blessed day is coming when the costs of building will fall. Drop to within reasonable distance of pre-war prices. Why should there be a drop? Let us reason this thing out. We may come on some distasteful facts, probably will do so. Shutting our eyes to the situation will not help. Better face the proposition and try to meet it, if we are to live, be fairly housed, work and be reasonably comfortable. To gain this the other fellow has to do a lot of things for us, but he has to be paid. Paid what he thinks is fair, viewing the cost of living.

It is inferred that we have about reached the peak of advance. Also the peak of labor and manufacturing disputes over wages advances. Presently we shall enter on the counter proposition against reduction of wages. From the man who, for instance, fells the trees in the forest to the manufacturer who turns out the matched flooring, each and every one will fight to hold what he has. Perfectly natural. And in the hope that in some mysterious way the cost of living will fall and he will ultimately find himself better off and retaining his high wage. Don't run away with the idea that employers will be ready and anxious for higher pro-rata percentages. See the case of the shoe jobbers in Toronto, that made $800,000 in three years.

So if wages do not fall, and they will not, the lumber, brick, glass, shingles, plaster and cement work will stand just where it is. Excavation, carting, painting, etc., will claim all a share, to say little of the plumber. Get out of your mind the idea, if you have it, that any product making firm, or any trade or occupation, is lying awake nights trying to reduce the cost to you of building a house. It's troublesome, but friends in this city, that have not been raised in this city, that have not been raised, and for which the Canadian dollar still buys one dollar's worth, as before the war, postage stamps, water

MARKING THE BALLOT

		YES	NO
1	Are you in favor of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?		X
2	Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one hundredths per cent. alcohol, weight measure, through Government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
3	Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one hundredths per cent. alcohol, weight measure, in standard hotels in local municipalities that by a majority vote favor such sale, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
4	Are you in favor of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X

The above is a sample of the referendum ballot which will be submitted to the voters on October 20. Any person who is in favor of prohibition for Ontario will be well advised to mark the ballot as above. If this is done, there can be no question as to the intention of the elector.

To make it certain that your wishes in this respect will be given effect, that the Ontario Temperance Act as endorsed by the people, will be rigidly enforced when it comes to voting for one of the three candidates before the people, mark your ballot as shown in the following sample. Women voting for the first time should understand that they have a right to vote both on the referendum and for one candidate. To vote on the first alone, even when noes are recorded, would be a duty only half performed. Vote for the candidate who will support the Premier whose worth has been proved. Vote for R. J. Soden.

WHY DO WOMEN SUFFER

When There is Such a Remedy for Their Ills as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

Mishawaka, Ind.—"I had such a severe female weakness that I could not do my work and I could not get anything to relieve me. A physician treated me, but it did no good. I had been in this condition for three months when I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound (tablet form) and it cured me. I keep house and am able to do my work now. I certainly praise your medicine."—Mrs. SUDA OLDFATHER, 548 West Second Street, Mishawaka, Ind.

Women who suffer from such ailments should not continue to drag around and do their work under such conditions, but profit by the experience of Mrs. Oldfather and thousands of others who have tried this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and found relief from such suffering. If complications exist write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years' experience in advising women on this subject is at your service.

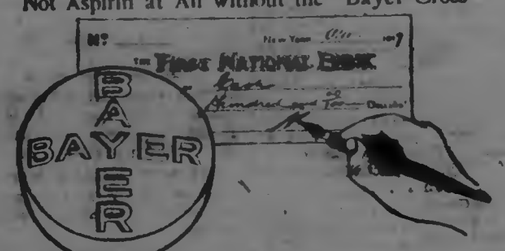
ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"



Aspirin, to be genuine, must be marked with the "Bayer Cross," just like your check must have your signature. Look for the "Bayer Cross." Then you are getting the only genuine Aspirin—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and made in Canada.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally.

The boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Larger "Bayer" packages.

and electric light. And this city has reason to be thankful to the Government and proud of its Utilities Commission.

(Cheaper to Buy).

There is a further field of Christian Endeavor that holds to the belief that it is cheaper to buy a house now, erected some time ago than build. Quite so, and very consoling, if there were houses enough of a class to go around. But necessarily that sort or exchange finds its level. It is useless to tell the workman that he can get a good house for $4000.00, he hasn't the money, and interest charges are high. Or to tell him he can get a dwelling for $150.00. He might, but he wouldn't live in it. Possibly people going out of that house, or to be turned out, won't live in it any longer. One house is too high, the other away too low. The workman needs something in between. It is the field and endeavor, this time, Practical Endeavor, to try and supply him, if he will extend himself to help. If he ever expects to own his own house he must help himself, and practice the very virtues that gave to people now owning their own homes, the houses they live in.

If Constipated, Bilious or Headachy, take "Cascarets"

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, or sour, gassy stomach—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep.

ART OF STORY TELLING

Under Auspices Y.W.C.A. Will Commence Friday Evening This Week.

The course on the art of Story-telling, which theYoung Women's Christian Association is offering this year, will commence on Friday night October 17th., at 8 o'clock. The series will include the following talks:

1. Introduction. Early history and forms etc. of short story.
2. What a story really is.
3 and 4. How to tell a story.
5. Story-telling in the Sunday School.

Beginning Sunday, October 26th, Vesper services are to be held at the Association, every Sunday at 4.30, especially for girls who cannot or do not go to Sunday School. After the service, tea will be served and there will be an hour of music until church time.

The hour for the ladies' gymnasium class which was scheduled for Thursday mornings, has been changed to Friday evenings, at 8:30. All planning to take the morning class are asked to note this and be on hand next Friday night.

The Girls' Council, made up of representatives from the Sunday Schools of the different churches in the city, decided at its last meeting to put on a six weeks training course for those who might be leaders in the work of the Canadian Girls in Training. The four standards corresponding to the fourfold aim of the C. G. I. T. will be explained and the problems of Sunday School teachers of teen-age girls will be discussed. All interested in work among teen-age girls are invited to attend. The first meeting will be held at the Young Women's Christian Association, on Wednesday evening, Oct. 15th., at seven o'clock. It is expected that Miss M. Trotter, a Girls' Work Secretary, who has had much experience, will be present to take charge of his meeting.

PROGRESS—PERFORMANCE—PROMISE

IF we have given worthy service during the trying time of war, may we not be relied upon to serve the nation faithfully and well in hastening the time of still greater prosperity and happiness? As we have begun, so we will continue, fearless in the discharge of duty and ever alert in the service to the people. Conscious of our shortcomings, and grateful for the opportunities we have to serve our Province, we submit our record with confidence to the electors for their consideration and approval, and ask from a united people a mandate to carry on the Government of this Province.

FINANCE

In 1904 the income of Ontario was $4,464,000; in 1913 it was $11,188,302; in 1918 it was $19,270,123. This has been accomplished without resorting to direct taxation—apart from the war tax, which has been repealed. Out of this revenue the Government has returned to the people in larger grants, $3,807,000 for Education; $1,676,235 for Agriculture. The public services have been enlarged and ample grants have enabled important public duties to be undertaken.

AGRICULTURE

The Agricultural industry in Ontario is in a prosperous and thriving condition. Appropriations in 1904 amounted to $475,000; in 1919, $1,675,000. Last year the value of the farm products of Ontario was $350,000,000, and the value of the combined farm assets was one and a half billion dollars. Within the last three years ten thousand farm mortgages have been paid off. Encouragement has been extended to every branch of the industry, education has been fostered, and social conditions have been improved. Agriculture has received the 'earnest and unremitting attention of the Government."

HYDRO-ELECTRIC

Hydro is to-day the most extensive public-ownership enterprise of its kind in the world. Since its inception Hydro-Electric has saved to the consumers of electric power in Ontario over fifty millions of dollars. Hydro displaces annually 5,000,000 tons of coal. Hydro develops and distributes 350,000 horse power to over 230 municipalities, 175,000 domestic consumers and 6,000 customers for power. The Queenston Chippewa undertaking will provide an economical development of 400,000 horse power, and the prospective ultimate development in the whole Province is over 1,000,000 horse power.

EDUCATION

Ontario's educational system is designed to provide the most efficient training possible for the boys and girls who are to become the future citizens of the state. Under the leadership of the Minister of Education no worthy expenditure has been denied to accomplish this purpose. Generous grants have been made for agricultural, technical and vocational training; returned soldiers are encouraged to enter the teaching profession; teachers' salaries have been raised and a superannuation scheme inaugurated. This year nearly $4,000,000 will be spent on education in Ontario.

LABOR

Ontario's industrial leadership in Canada has been maintained by broad and effective labor laws. Under the Workmen's Compensation Act $10,000,000 has been paid out in awards. Special safeguards have been provided for female and child labor. A minimum wage in Ontario is assured, and a direct representative of Labor will sit in the Cabinet. Free employment agencies have been established, and technical education has been encouraged.

HEALTH

Ontario's public health service is not excelled on the continent. Public health education, child welfare, sanitary engineering service, and the free distribution of antitoxins and serums, have conserved life and prevented epidemic. A scheme of pensions for mothers is to be established. The Provincial Board of Health supplied all the typhoid vaccine used by the Canadian troops in the war. This feature of the work has brought about a saving of over $100,000 a year to the people of the Province.

HIGHWAYS

Good roads add wealth and comfort to rural life. The highway improvement programme of the Ontario Government is applied to both urban and rural districts. A complete system of roads, including provincial roads, provincial county roads, county roads and township roads, with a mileage of 12,500 miles, has been worked out and will be constructed. The entire motor license revenue, with a large amount added, will be spent annually on this work.

WAR WORK

Ontario gave in men 232,895; in contributions $54,532,183; to Victory loans $540,465,550. Ontario provided 50 per cent. of Canada's war effort. The Ontario Government spent in war work over $10,000,000; maintained in England the most efficient military hospital in Europe; furnished club houses for the soldiers in London and Paris; made gifts of food and guns to the Mother Country; made large grants to the British Red Cross, Belgium, Serbian relief and other worthy patriotic objects. Ontario's war effort has made the name of Ontario resound in every corner of the world.

As a war measure the Ontario Temperance Act was passed, suspending for the duration of the war the retail sale of liquor. The promise was given that as soon as the war was over the whole question of the character of the liquor legislation of Ontario would be submitted to the people by Referendum, and the will of the people would prevail. This promise is now being fulfilled.

PROMISE:

Greatest possible assistance to Agriculture—Faithful enforcement of the Referendum—Support of Hydro-Electric; cheap light and power for the farmer—Convert railway branch lines into Hydro radials—Good roads in every part of Ontario—State pension fund for mothers—Direct representation of Labor in the Cabinet—A minimum wage—Housing accommodation—Legislation implementing the findings of the National Industrial Conference—Consideration to returned soldiers with Cabinet representation—Educational progress, technical and agricultural instruction—Improved transportation in Northern Ontario—Timber conservation—Encouragement in mining development—Enlargement of Ontario's free public health service.

CHILDREN'S TAG DAY

On behalf of the Board of the Children's Shelter, I wish to extend my hearty thanks and gratitude to the ladies who so nobly assisted on Saturday and to the young girls a special vote of thanks for the great energy they exhibited in this cause, also to those who so kindly loaned their cars, the street railway, the press and not forgetting the Union Bank staff who were so affable in lending their assistance to help on the good work. A special vote of thanks is tendered the managers of the Allen and Empire and the Strand Theatres, for their generous co-operation. The proceeds amounted to $1,333.

THANKSGIVING SERVICES AT GEORGE ST. METHODIST CHURCH

Decorations, Music and Sermon Expressive of Great Thankfullness For the Many Blessings.

The services at George street Methodist church on Sunday were full of thanksgiving and praise for the great joy and happiness the Lord has given to His people. The pulpit was suitably decorated with fruits, vegetables and grain. The music of the whole day was wonderful. The evening service was largely musical, and the choir rendered anthems, quartets, duets and solos that were of that quality that bring great delight and joy to all those who are fortunate enough to hear them. The choir leader of this church should be highly congratulated on this magnificent programme of spiritual music that was full of praise and thanksgiving.

The pastor delivered a thanksgiving address, taking for his text the 37th and 38th verses of the 15th chapter of Numbers: "And the Lord spake unto Moses saying, speak unto the children of Israel, and bid them that they make them fringes in the borders of their garments, throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the border a ribbon of blue."

These ancient people wore this sign as a reminder to grow to observe the law of the Lord. There is a great tendency to forget laws and commandments and therefore it is necessary to have customs to use as reminders of the greatness of the Eternal God. We are under no obligation to observe this custom as described to the people of Israel through their leader Moses, but it is essential for us to observe the law of the Lord. The Lord requires something from everyone. If the rich young man was right when he declared that he had always obeyed all the laws of God all the time, then he was the only man in history that has done so., continued Mr Thomas.

This ancient symbol was also an evidence of the glory of God and reminded them of their deliverance from the Egyptians and the many other great miracles God has accomplished for their benefit. But we too, have, every reason to remember the Grace of God. We are the recipients of countless blessings, everything we have comes from God. Let us start to enumerate the blessings of God, and to forget the dark things, and we will hardly realize how many and how great they are.

And on this national Thanksgiving Day we should feel especially grateful for our temporal blessings. Nature has not failed to yield us a sufficient store of the necessities of life. A land without a harvest brings famine, suffering and death. But plenty brings strength and endurance and lifts a whole nation to greater prosperity. We are so accustomed to the yield of nature that we fail to realize the awful tragedy if nature should fail and we are inclined to forget that God is the giver of all our temporal blessings.

God has been behind all the workings of nature and we ought to give gratitude to God for all His goodness.

Some do not believe in a Great Unknown God and some query the existence of an unseen Spiritual Being God. These people do not have Thanksgiving. They are always ready to receive but not so ready to give. And some have no thanksgiving on account of sorrow. They place all the blame upon God but all unworthily. Ingratitude is the result of careless disregard of blessings. It is low and base," declared the speaker. We should be forever watchful that we don't forget Him to whom we owe all our happiness. We should express our gratitude by public praise. The sanctuary should afford a great opportunity for rendering praise unto God and there should be greater rallying on every Sunday for praise. There are too many empty pews in the churches of today. Would it not be a great surprise if it were heard that people were turned away from every church on a Sabbath evening. But that is how it should be as the churches of this city afford accommodation for only half of the people. And this is not the failure of the church but due to the spirit of the people. We are becoming increasingly prosperous and with it increasingly materialistic. We have no regard for God and things spiritual and eternal. If God were given His proper place, people would throng to the sanctuary for public praise. Another way of expressing our gratitude is by personal obedience. But that is not sufficient, God expects us to express our appreciation in obeying His will.

Let us give thanks to God with all our hearts and live with everlasting praise, concluded Mr. Thomas.

DOUBLE BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

"Danderine" creates mass of thick, gleamy waves

In a few moments you can transform your plain, dull, flat hair. You can have it abundant, soft, glossy and full of life. Just get at any drug or toilet counter a small bottle of "Danderine" for a few cents. Then moisten a soft cloth with the "Danderine" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Instantly, yes, immediately, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will be a mass, so soft, lustrous and so easy to do up. All dust, dirt and excessive oil is removed.

Let Danderine put more life, color, vigor, and brightness in your hair. This stimulating tonic will freshen your scalp, check dandruff and falling hair and help your hair to grow long, thick, strong and beautiful.

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

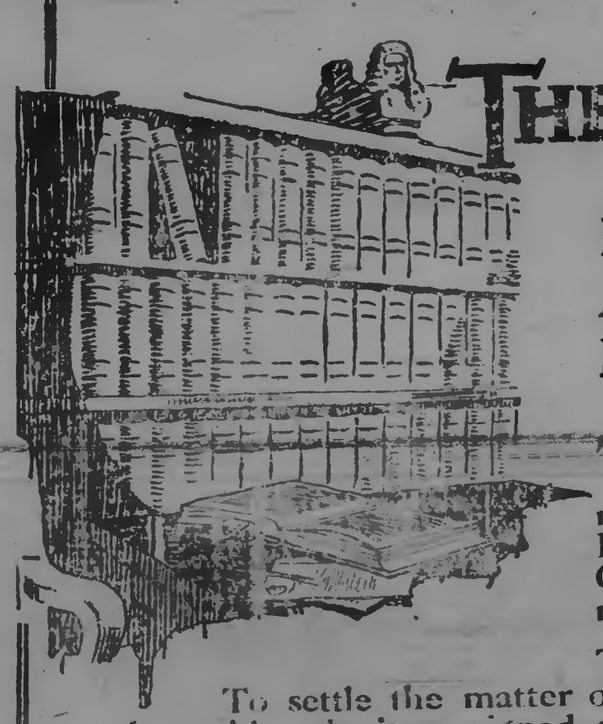
If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is aching, if what you eat sours and forms acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before eating more food.

To feel like young folks feel: like you felt before your blood and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate, which is inexpensive and almost tasteless.

Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast.



THE AUTHORITY OF LAW

Repeal of Ontario Temperance Act Does Not Necessarily Mean a Return to the Old License System

THE Citizens' Liberty League contend that the unsatisfactory Ontario Temperance Act must be repealed and new legislation enacted. Further, they declare that the repeal of The Ontario Temperance Act does not necessarily mean the return of the Old License System.

The Referendum Committee contend differently.

To settle the matter once and for all, the Citizens' Liberty League herewith submits a signed statement by I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., of the law firm of Hellmuth, Cattanach & Meredith, Toronto, and by D.L. McCarthy, K.C., Toronto, son of the late Dalton McCarthy, and member of the legal firm of McCarthy & McCarthy, Toronto. Mr. Hellmuth and Mr. McCarthy are two of the outstanding King's Counsel of Ontario.

"Our opinion is asked as to whether a majority vote of 'YES' to question One of the Referendum, necessarily repeals the Ontario Temperance Act now in force and at the same time brings into effect the Liquor License Act which was in force prior to the passing of the Ontario Temperance Act, and our answer is unhesitatingly No.

"It is true that in case of such affirmative answer, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council can, by proclamation, bring into effect the prior Liquor License Act, but until this is done the present Ontario Temperance Act continues in force. It is not obligatory on the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to issue any such proclamation within any fixed or definite time, and there is no reason to suppose any action in this respect will be taken until after the meeting of the Legislature.

"Notwithstanding, therefore, an affirmative majority vote to question One of the Referendum, the prior Liquor License Act will not necessarily be in force when the Legislature meets, and the Legislature can, at the next session, pass such legislation as it deems proper in regard to the whole question. It can bring into effect any Act that the majority of the members of the Legislature approve of, irrespective of any laws in force up to that time.

"There is nothing in the Constitution as laid down by the British North America Act which prevents the Legislature from validly enacting a law which would be a compromise between the Liquor License Act and the present Ontario Temperance Act and any such Act being entirely within the competence of the Legislature would, when passed, supersede any prior laws."

I. F. Hellmuth

DON'T PAMPER YOUR STOMACH

Fear of Dyspepsia Robs the Entire System of Necessary Nutriment. Eat a Diversified Meal and With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets You Will Avoid the Distress of Indigestion.

Just because the stomach sours with gassiness, heartburn, water brash and such distresses after eating, is no a good reason for depriving the system of nourishment.

Instead of indigestible and innutritious bran and skim milk try the better plan of eating what you like and follow your meals with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They digest food, they assist the stomach to secrete juices that keep the stomach sweet, active and with the alkaline effect, just as when the stomach is in perfect health. Nor is it necessary to discriminate. You may eat freely of onions, sausage mince pie and baked beans, or other dishes, such as the average dyspeptic views with horror, and suffer no distress if you follow with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. There is thus no need to fear any kind of food at any time or place for with these tablets you may prevent those distresses that formerly made you pamper your stomach as if it were a tender infant. You can get Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in any drug store at 50 cents a box.

MRS. ROGERS RE-ELECTED

The following retiring directors were unanimously re-elected to the Board:—Mrs. Roger, Mr. Rush, Miss Archer and Mrs. Ellis.

Mr. Rollins, in closing the meeting, called attention to the way the old people, many of whom have been forced to lead lives of hardship and privation, appreciate small kindnesses and attentions, and spoke of the many ways the people could serve by performing these little acts for the unfortunate inmates of the Home.

Secretary's Report.

In presenting the annual report of the Home for 1918-19, I should like to state that the admissions have not been so numerous as last year, 39 being admitted, 22 men and 17 women, 10 being discharged for various reasons. The average stay in the Home per inmate is 281 days, with a total number of 10965 days. The number remaining in the Home September 30, 1919, 29, 16 men and 13 women.

The Board of Directors have had 18 meetings, with an average attendance of eight.

The Christmas season brought its usual donations and gifts to the old people. At the entertainment and Christmas tree, on December 24th, Canon Davison addressed the old people in his customary cheerful manner. Mr. John Allan, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Parks, Miss Muriel Harvey and Master and Miss Collins adding greatly to the program. On account of the epidemic last autumn, the fruit and linen shower was not held until later in the year, it was very well responded to. The old ladies having pieced a great many quilts during the previous year. The members of the Board and church representatives spent a busy but delightful afternoon quilting. The members of the Board are commencing to think that the lovely automobile drive and dinner at South Beach is an annual pleasure, as about twenty-five inmates. A number of the Board were again taken there in July. The committee of the Royal Arthur Lodge of Mason's having the afternoon in charge are to be congratulated on their efforts of giving everyone a good time. We, as a Board, owe them a hearty vote of thanks for the pleasure afforded the old people.

You will observe from the treasurer's report that all our indebtedness has been met this year. It is due to the hearty response of the City Council in granting an additional allowance per week for their inmates which was rendered necessary by the high cost of all commodities. The Board wish to express their appreciation of Miss Lancaster's untiring efforts to make the Home "a Home in deed as well as in name." They are most fortunate in possessing a person of such wide range of sympathy and efficiency. Not only does she fulfil her duties most capably, but her heart is in everything she does.

You will notice by the treasurer's report, the small sum expended on garden produce. This is owing to Mr Hamilton's able management of the garden, and although it has not been so productive this season, still he secured several prizes at the exhibition. The Board appreciates his services, and know they have a devoted and loyal manager.

In spite of the fact that the health of our beloved president, Mrs. Roger, has caused considerable anxiety to her many friends for more than a year past, her unselfish interest in the affairs of the Home has never wavered. What this Board owes to her faithful and wise council cannot be measured in words.

The thanks of the Board are extended to the following:

The clergymen of the city, who on Sunday morning make it possible for the inmates to have a service, who otherwise would not be able to attend a regular church service.

The doctors of the staff who give us freely of their time and skill.

The gentleman who act as auditors.

The press, who are always so courteous.

The many friends of the Home who by their donations show their kindly feeling towards the Home.

FLORA H. DAVIDSON,
Secretary.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

IF YOUR BACK HURTS OR BLADDER BOTHERS YOU, DRINK LOTS OF WATER

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

STOMACH O. K.

Indigestion, Acidity, Sourness and Gases ended with "Pape's Diapepsin"

Millions of people know that if is needless to be bothered with indigestion, dyspepsia or a disordered stomach. A few tablets of Pape's Diapepsin neutralize acidity and give relief at once.

When your meals don't fit and you feel uncomfortable, when you belch gases, acids or raise sour, undigested food. When you feel lumps of indigestion pain, heartburn or headache, from acidity, just eat a tablet of Pape's Diapepsin and the stomach distress is gone.

The cost is so little. The benefits so great. You, too, will be a Diapepsin enthusiast afterwards.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Blewett, and Mr. Harry Blewett who have spent the summer at Burleigh Falls, have returned to the village for the winter.

Miss V. Johnston, who has been attending the Lindsay convent, is spending her vacation at her home in the village.

ASK FOR CHEAPER RY. RATES ON COAL

RELIEVE TRAFFIC CONGESTION AT BUFFALO AND NIAGARA BY BELLEVILLE ROUTE

Ald. Edgar, W. E. Taylor, J. E. Greyson (the latter coal dealers) and W. S. Campbell, of Peterborough's Board of Trade, interviewed in Belleville yesterday members of the Railway and Municipal Board, in regard to an adjustment of freight rates to allow of coal being laid down in Peterborough shipped via Oswego and Belleville, at a price which would allow of completion with coal shipped here via Buffalo. The latter route is invariably so conjested that a car of coal takes about three weeks to make the journey from the mines to this city while if shipped via Lake Ontario to Belleville and thence by rail to Peterborough, prompt delivery would be assured.

Under present G.T.R. rates coal shipped from the mines via the Belleville route to Peterborough would cost $4.80 a net ton for transportation, against $4.05 via Buffalo. The railroad rate from Buffalo to Peterborough—200 miles—is $1.80 the ton, the rate from Belleville to Peterborough—64 miles—is $1.50 a ton, and it is this disproportionate mileage charge that yesterday's deputation is in hope of having adjusted on an equitable basis.

Other municipalities represented were Lindsay, Campbellford, Madoc Sterling, Trenton. Mr. Gus Porter, M.P., Belleville, present the municipalities' case in a very able manner and Ald. Edgar last night was exceedingly optimistic of a satisfactory outcome of the interview.

COLLEGIATE FIELD DAY

The field day sports of the Collegiate Institute which were postponed from last week on account of rain are being held this afternoon at the Exhibition Grounds. The School Board grant was increased this year and with perfect weather everything looked favorable for a record day of sports for the Collegiate pupils.

Some roses are known by the cheeks they decorate.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE WEST RIDING OF PETERBOROUGH

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having again received the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Convention of West Peterborough as a candidate for Parliamentary honors at the ensuing Provincial Election, to be held on October 20th, I desire to solicit your hearty support in favor of my election.

WAR WORK

Having represented you for the past five years (war years), I can safely say that during that period, while every effort was being made to win the war—my record is known to you all, and on that record I ask you to judge me on the position I have taken on all measures affecting the war work.

TEMPERANCE QUESTION

When I was elected in 1914 I stated my views on the Temperance question during that campaign; I pledged myself to vote for Temperance legislation on all occasions brought forward by whatever party, and the record in the House will show that I carried out that pledge.

The Referendum vote is to be taken on the same date as the Provincial election, October 20, and if I am again elected your representative I promise to give my whole-hearted support to the Government elected to carry out the will of the people as expressed by their votes on the Referendum ballot.

AGRICULTURAL LEGISLATION.

During the years preceding 1914 every one agreed that the Department of Agriculture was asleep. The very first opportunity offered in the House I introduced the question of a forward movement in Agriculture, and, along with other Liberal members of the House, have earnestly advocated a more strenuous progressive policy in Agriculture.

The shortage of production, the problem of farm help, and the numerous perplexing questions affecting the farmer, cannot be solved unless we seriously consider the cause and apply the remedy.

During the past few years of unrest in the country, due mainly to excessive living costs, I have advocated that demonstration farms be established in different counties, and increased attention be paid to the education to be received in our Agricultural College and Experimental Farms, and that the knowledge gained at the Agricultural College be put into practice on Demonstration Farms, where a profit and loss account could be kept, and the costs of producing 100 pounds of milk or a pound of pork, or any of the many products of the farm, could be ascertained and established, such information being sadly lacking today. By such a system of education the farm would be looked upon as a business manufacturing plant, that would attract the best brains to the development of the greatest asset in Canada today—the farm. Our production is unlimited. The markets of the world are calling for food, and our own citizens living from hand to mouth at tremendous prices, wondering what the next six months have in store for them.

PROVINCIAL HIGHWAYS

Our highways need much repair. Auto and truck traffic is becoming daily increased, and we must develop a road policy which will make for hauling our produce to market as cheaply as possible. To this matter I promise to give my best thought.

EDUCATION

Education, I am pleased to say, is in the hands of a new Minister, in whom we hope for great things. I believe in a separate education for the city and rural districts. An education in the rural districts to educate the boy and girl in the great lessons of Agriculture, making two blades of grass grow where one grew before, developing the average cow of Ontario today, which gives 5,000 pounds of milk in a milking period of 10,000 pounds, producing a pound of pork or beef at a lower cost, and giving to the world the blessing which we most need—a reduction in the high cost of living.

THE LABOR QUESTION

Regarding the important question of Labor, my own policy has been to treat Labor as I would wish to be treated myself. I have had a good deal of experience with labor of various kinds and conditions, and have never had any trouble along that line, and do not expect to have any.

OUR RETURNED HEROES

To me, the welfare of the returned soldiers and soldiers' wives is one of the most essential duties of our country. Therefore I promise that I will give my hearty support to every movement calculated to promote their very best interests. The soldiers who fought for me for five years deserve, and may expect to receive, my earnest consideration during the remaining years of my life.

THE WOMAN VOTE

I am delighted to know that the women are to enjoy equal privileges with men in the use of the franchise at this election, and in the exercise of this privilege I have the greatest faith in their good judgment and purifying influence. Their power with the ballot on October 20, especially with the Prohibition and Labor problems, will, I feel certain, be of far-reaching effect. I will, therefore, consider the votes of the ladies counted in my favor at the approaching election to be instruction to take high grounds on all matters calculated to elevate the morals of this community as well as of the whole Dominion.

CONCLUSION

These questions I have dealt with are, to my mind, the outstanding questions of the day. If I am elected again as your representative, I promise to give the best of my ability, my mature judgment on all questions affecting the interests of the West Riding of Peterborough, the Province of Ontario, the Dominion of Canada, and the British Empire, of which we today are so justly proud.

Thanking you, ladies and gentlemen, for your support in the past, and soliciting your support again on the 20th day of October, I remain,

Your obedient servant,

GEO. A. GILLESPIE.

CONFERENCE ON STEEL STRIKE

Washington, Oct. 15.— Demands that organized Labor's proposal for arbitration of the steel strike be made an immediate issue in the National Industrial Conference was made today by the capital group through Chairman Harry A. Wheeler.

Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the public group, has proposed that action on the steel resolution be postponed until Thursday.

A soft answer may turn luck your way.

THE SAN CARLO'S GREAT ORCHESTRA

MOST BRILLIANT EVER YET ASSEMBLED FOR TOURING PURPOSES IN AMERICA

Under the experienced direction of Signor Gaetano Merola, late general musical director of Hammerstein's Opera, London, the San Carlo Grand Opera Company orchestra, upon its present tour, is the most brilliant both from a numerical and artistic standpoint, ever assembled for touring purposes. Considering the fact that the ranks of professional instrumentalists have been greatly depleted through demands made upon them by the government as a result of the military draft, it is not difficult to understand the woes of the impresario in making up his orchestral forces this season. The San Carlo, however, has been singularly fortunate in this respect, for no sooner had the management announced the engagement of Signor Merola than applications for positions with this organization began to pour in. Many of the applicants, it appeared were former members of Signor Merola's big orchestra in London and had played with him in other important European opera centres, and they were desirous of appearing under his artistic baton in this country. Soon one of the finest orchestral bodies possible to assemble had been secured by Merola for the San Carlo tour.

Every member of the San Carlo orchestra has enjoyed an extensive operatic career, among the players being several who have toured the European countries and America as virtuosos. It is an aggregation of artists both individually and collectively able to meet every requirement, and lovers of symphonic music will find much to enjoy in this respect when the San Carlo Company visits here.

"MY SOLDIER GIRL" RETURNS SATURDAY

TWO ACTS PRESENT THE MOST NOVEL IDEAS IN LIVING STAGE PICTURES

The sparkling and gay musical play, "My Soldier Girl," to be presented at the Grand Saturday, matinee and evening, is the most brilliant success offered in years. There are two acts in the new offering, presenting the most novel ideas in stage pictures. The first act is laid at Colonel Stone's home, Miami, Florida, on Biscayne Bay, and a brilliant lawn fete is in progress in honor of "overseas" boys and girls whom the Colonel met while in France in the interest of the Red Cross. The picture presented outshines anything attempted in years, the effects are bewildering in their splendor and the dazzling array of costumes to say nothing of the wonderful performance is good to look upon. The story of Colonel Stone, a wealthy Floridian who was a producer of theatrical enterprises, went to Europe during the war in the interest of Red Cross—there he met many boys and girls well known in the theatrical business and made it a standing invitation that six months after the armistice should be signed, all those in America at the time should come to his home for a reunion at his expense. Dixie Harris, a ward of the Colonel's, also a clever actress who has devoted her time the last two years to aviation for the Government, is in love with Lieutenant Carter, who, by the way is just back from France and is present at the lawn fete. Colonel Stone, highly elated with the talent presented by the visiting guests, favors producing a big Follies production and engages his many guests to participate in same. Six months later we find the organization on the roof of a New York theatre, rehearsing a big musical spectacle in which Dixie is the soubrette and Lieutenant Carter is playing the light comedy, the play is dedicated to Dixie and entitled "My Soldier Girl," the brilliant stage setting with shimmering opalescent scenery, the riot of color in the dazzling array of gorgeous costumes and the wonderful story unfolded on the stage is brilliant beyond description. There are more than a score of big novelties and an excellent cast, including Dorothy Garrigue, Maude Baxter, Billy Moore, James Baber, Leslie Jones, Billy Murphy, J. G. LeRoy and many others, while a "pony" ballet of wonderful dancers trip through the novel drills and dance ensembles fetchingly.

"OH BOY" IS BUBBLING WITH CHEERFULNESS

DON'T MISS THIS SEASON'S MUSICAL EVENT AT THE GRAND TOMORROW.

"Oh, Boy," the smartest and daintiest musical comedy New York has seen in years and the fourth New York Princess Theatre musical comedy success is announced by F. Ray Comstock and William Elliott as the attraction at the Grand, Thursday. The book and lyrics of "Oh, Boy" are by Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse and the music is by Jerome Kern.

The book of "Oh, Boy" is bubbling with cheerfulness and revolves around George Budd, a quiet, easy-going young man who has married Lou Ellen Carter without telling her parents. Unknown to George Budd, his friend, Jim Marvin, invites a number of pretty girls to celebrate a polo victory, and they enter Budd's apartment by the fire-escape, unannounced, and hide in an adjoining room when Budd enters from another direction with his bride. A telegram arrives for Budd from his Quaker aunt, who is his guardian and as the aunt is averse to his marrying, the bride is about to go to the home of her parents when Jim and the girls dash in on the scene. George prevails on the merry party to go to another room while he escorts his bride of but a few hours to her home.

As soon as George and his bride have left the room Jackie Sampson, an actress who plays the part of "Modesty" in the morality play "Experience," dashes in the open window. Here she meets Jim Marvin and tells him she was with a party in a restaurant and during a mix-up over the delivery of a speech by an unknown gentleman nick-named "Toodles," hit an officer in the eye. Jim Marvin insists that she stay in Budd's apartment for the night and even introduces her to the bewildered policeman as Mrs. Budd. The following morning in trying to straighten out the situation, George introduces Jackie Sampson to his Quaker aunt as Mrs. Budd. The arrival of the bride's father and mother and the aunt result in some unusual and amusing situations, but George Budd is a resourceful man and smoothes them all out and every thing ends happily.

The Parcots—father, mother and two charming daughters—live in Southern California. At the time the action begins, Stephen Parcot, the father, is in the far North pursuing his avocation as an explorer. Mrs. Parcot has hurried home overseas to Belgium to bring back one daughter who had been placed in a convent there. Dimmy Parcot (the lead in the picture played by Blanche Sweet, who also appears as the other sister in several parts of the production), is alone in the beautiful Parcot home. She receives a letter from her loved ones abroad—a letter that almost sends her reason tottering from its throne—a letter that tells her that invading soldiers have committed against both her mother and her sister "the unpardonable sin."

The letter has been one last note of explanation, and a plea that mother and sister be forgotten, a cry that their disgrace be shielded from the world.

With the letter carefully hidden in a wallet, Dimmy, half crazed with grief, and not figuring the difficulties of the task she has set for herself, sets out to find her loved ones.

Her train is delayed just outside a little town in the Middle West. A chance travelling acquaintance offers aid, and later, as Dimmy and her acquaintance are walking along a shaded street in the little village just at dusk, the acquaintance, smitten with Dimmy's beauty, attempts to force his attentions upon her. Dimmy collapses, her reason flees. Only a zephyr of the breath of life remains. Weeks later she recovers her strength, both mental and physical, to find that she has been nursed in the home of the Windsors.

Noll Windsor, an undergraduate at the college in the little town, has learned to love Dimmy. She tells him her story, and torn between the fear of Dimmy and the thought that she may waver from her path of chosen duty, leaves the home without announcement, to continue her journey.

Soon after, young Windsor absvers his government's call to serve Hoover's Belgian Relief Commission in the devastated country. He arrives in Washington to secure his passports, and discovers Dimmy who has been in the Capital city for some time, unable to continue her journey for the reason that the government has discontinued the issuance of passports to "unmarried women." Noll and Dimmy effect a marriage of convenience, Dimmy's passports being securable in no other way.

Upon their arrival in Belgium, Noll, husband in name only, finds it possible to do much to aid Dimmy in her search for her people. Together they travel the devastated regions, even penetrating the enemy country, for in those days the United States had not entered the war.

A veritable pawn of Fate, it is Dimmy's misfortune to encounter the very beast who had ravished her sister. When he sees the fresh young girl from California, Colonel Klemm mistakes her for the sister whom he had so shamefully treated in Belgium. He is mystified, and his passion still leads him on. Because he thinks Dimmy a spy against his government, and because he wishes to possess her again, as he thinks, Klemm hounds Dimmy and Noll everywhere they go.

Klemm is outwitted. Dimmy's mother and sister are found, but not before a second horror in her frail young life has snapped the thread that tied the little sister to earth and a bitter disgrace.

Dimmy, her mother, Noll and an interesting group of refugees, who have been added to the party, are making a mad dash for the Holland border when a bullet sends Mrs. Parcot close to the brink of death. When she recovers she takes back to her husband in the States only the story of her terrible experience.

Dimmy and Noll find that their "marriage of convenience" must be re-enacted as a "marriage of necessity"—necessary because both have come to desire it.

MIXED LAUGHTER

Margarita Fisher, in seventy-five minutes of mixed laughter, satire, and mischief, with a steady undercurrent of a woman's caprice—depicting the essence of a lesson which might make even Mr. Rockefeller sit up and take notice. THEATRICALS

FAMOUS "DUMBELLS"

"Biff, Bing, Bang," is the catchy title of the original overseas musical comedy revue which the famous "Dumbells" are offering here at the Grand Friday and Saturday, October 25th.

The "Dumbells," as they were called in France where they gave over five hundred performances to our Canadian soldiers, is an organization of soldier-actors, who were chosen by Capt. M. W. Plunkett from practically every branch of the service. Every member of the cast and chorus has a record of a least sixteen months service to his credit before joining the entertainment corps.

Their performance, while given entirely by soldiers, is along similar lines to the big musical revues, so much in vogue in London and New York, and the boys play everything from chorus girls to prima donnas.

The costumes and scenery are the word in gorgeousness and the many song and dance numbers, most of which were written especially for them by some of England's best composers, are brilliantly sung and executed.

Prisoners and Guns.

London.—Gen. Yudenitch is meeting with great success against the Bolsheviki and is now within fifty miles of Petrograd. He took a thousand prisoners and thirteen machine guns yesterday.

HER STUDIO ON WHEELS

A "moving" moving picture indeed is "The Mantle of Charity," the latest Margarita Fisher feature made by the American Film Company and released through Pathe exchanges. There were five hundred miles traversed by the participants in the train scenes, and the directors and camera men, while the first fifty odd scenes were taken.

The Pullman porter is the real article. The light equipment was installed on the train in a manner more elaborate than ever done before. There was a generator in the baggage car, and an extension of the entire train wiring was necessary.

The picture was taken under great difficulty because of the prerogative of the other passengers, who left that they had a right to loll about, in and out, as they pleased, and who were naturally anxious to see, if not also to be seen by, the camera eye.

A veritable studio was carried on a flat car directly behind the observation coach, on the rear platform of which many of the opening scenes were laid. It is one of the first train scenes made by any producer which is genuine throughout.

The comedy and humor of the first fifty scenes of "The Mantle of Charity" will cause the onlooker to forget the technical difficulties but still many will wonder when they see the picture at the Empire Theatre, how it was done. Showing on Wednesday and Thursday.

¶ It is a Fact that—when a man drinks beer, he drinks and eats at the same time just as when he consumes a bowl of soup—in fact one eminent Ontario Physician declares beer is a liquid beefsteak.

¶ It is a Fact that—beer contains all the elements of a typical diet with the exception of fat—a glass of good beer is approximately as nourishing as a glass of milk—a quart of good beer is equivalent in food value to nearly a quarter of a pound of bread.

¶ It is a Fact that—beer contains such a very small amount of alcohol and such a relatively large amount of food material that it would be difficult indeed to find a meal at once simpler and more nutritive than a glass of beer, a piece of cheese, and a slice of bread.

¶ It is a Fact that—90% of organized labor of Canada demands a beer of 2.51% strength because it is the healthful and refreshing beverage the working man needs—a quart of this beer contains one-sixth of the energy required daily.

¶ It is a Fact that—the beer for which you are asked to vote on October 20th is an absolutely non-intoxicating beverage—has been proven to be non-intoxicating by a board of fourteen experts—and contains the bare minimum of alcohol needed as a preservative to make it digestible and nourishing.

Ontario Brewers' Association

A TIME TO TALK AND A TIME TO VOTE

There is a time to talk and a time to be silent. The present is the time to talk about the achievements of the Ontario Government.

Every woman knows that the Government which kept faith with the soldiers overseas, and provided for the dependents at home is the kind of Government that she wants to see handling the affairs of the province.

"I've got enough to do, to look after my work at ohme," some women are saying. "I have no time to be going out voting."

"Bless you I put my potatoes on to boil for dinner when I went out to vote for Union Government," said another woman, "and I was back in time to take them off again before the pot boiled dry. I don't think that I wasted much time."

This is an age of inquiry. The more you inquire into the administration of the Hearst Government, the more determined you are that they shall be returned to power. All kinds of wild statements have been made by those who want to discredit the members of the Government, but they don't back up their accusations with definite facts which they can prove. When you get down to real facts you find that the talk has been a lot of poppycock.

Women as a whole seem to favor prohibition. They know what a difference it has made to their happiness or to the happiness of other women, having the bars closed. They are not likely to forget that the Hearst Government dared to bring in prohibition at a time when it was vital to the war service of the province. Nor will they forget that the Premier is now keeping his pledge, that when the war was over and the soldiers were "home again, the whole question of the liquor legislation would be submitted to the people. It is the people, not the party, who have the right to decide this point which so vitally affects them.

The health and safety of women and children working in factories is safeguarded through laws enacted by the Ontario Government.

The Government which has its plans made for bringing about Mothers' Pensions, deserves the support of every woman. The Hearst Government is not only pledged to this, but the details of the plan by which it will be wokerd out, are now under consideration.

Women are not going to be cajoled into voting against their common sense. The leader of the Liberal party is making endless accusations against the Conservative party. But the word of the man who was ready to break faith with our fighting men overseas, who fought against conscription when it was vitally necessary, is not likely to have much influence with women who gave devoted service during the war.

Women are honest in thei rdesire to use their vote wisely and justly. They are going to judge by deeds, by things actually done in the past rather than by uncertain promises for the future. It is worth noting that Premier Hearst is the first political leader in the province to keep his word on the liquor question. He promised that the people should decide for or against prohibition themselves. The referendum is the fulfilment of that promise.

Why is it that in many ridings there is no Liberal to oppose the Conservative candidate? Because even the Liberals realize that there is nothing better to offer than the Hearst Government has given in the past, and will give in the future.

Preach the gospel of using your vote. Use your own and induce other women to use theirs. If the wrong men are elected, it wil be the fault of the women this time, because women represent 55 p.c. of the voters of Ontario. You will be just as much to blame if you neglect to use your vote, as you would be if you actually went out and voted for the otherside.

The Ontario Government has proved itself worthy of the women's support. In the past the women who wanted the vote, claimed that there were many laws relating to women and children which needed to be improved. Now that they have the vote let them remember that the Hearst Government has introduced most progressive legislation bearing on these matters. The Government which has seen that during war years, will continue along similar lines in peace time.

It would be a strange thing if the Government which was instrumental in securing the franchise for women, were not given the support of the women.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

IF MIXED WITH SULPHUR IT DARKENS SO NATURALLY NOBODY CAN TELL.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

Why EDDY'S Matches are Better

THERE are two big reasons why Eddy's Matches are better than others. The first is wood, and the second is machinery. Matches require soft, smooth-fibred pine. Other wood does not make a perfect product. The House of Eddy can use only perfect blocks for matches because the rest of the wood can be used for paper or indurated fibreware.

The perfect match is the machine-made match. Absolute uniformity can be obtained in no other way. But match-making machinery is expensive to install and to operate. It requires a tremendous output to make its use profitable. No small manufacturer can afford to use it. 70,000,000 matches a day enable the House of Eddy to maintain automatic machines which would be impossible with a small output.

Think of this when you buy matches. Eddy's matches represent no waste—no use of poor material—no variations from standard. In these days when the tax on matches more than doubles their cost to you, it is worth while to consider the subject a little more closely.

When you buy matches see that Eddy's name is on the box. It is your best guarantee of satisfaction.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

TENNYSON—BRADLEY
THOMPSON—BRADLEY

Park Street Baptist Church at 10 o'clock this morning in the presence of an exceedingly large number of relatives, friends and acquaintances, the marriage of the two daughters of Mrs. M. Bradley, 33 Lafayette avenue, Ethel May to Melville Tennyson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Tennyson, Otonabee, and Violet Pearl to Grant H Thompson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm Thompson, Maple Lake, Ont., the pastor of the church, Rev. Dougal Brown, officiating.

The church was most beautiful decorated by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society. The two very charming brides, who were unattended, were given away by Mr. Hugh McLaughlin, cousin, and Mr. Jim Bradley, brother of the brides, and both were gowned alike in white silk crepe-de-chene with tulle veil in Juliette cap effect caught up with wreath of orange blossoms, and carrying a large sheaf of roses and carnations.

After the ceremony the guests motored to the home of the brides' mother where a reception was held. Mrs. Bradley wearing black silk and crepe-de-chene with hat of black velvet and ostrich plumes. Mrs Philip Tennyson, mother of the groom, was gowned in black charmeuse satin with hat of black velvet and ostrich tips.

After the reception the brides quietly slipped away and later appeared in their travelling suits of blue serge with hats alike of black velvet edged with salmon pink of the same material, leaving later on their honeymoon for Toronto, Niagara Falls and Buffalo.

The out-of-town guests were Mr and Mrs John Tennyson, Toronto, the latter wearing taupe satin; Mrs John Shier, Kincardine, Ont., in silver grey silk poplin; Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Tennyson, Toronto, the latter wearing navy satin and georgette crepe; Miss Elizabeth McLaughlin, Collingwood, Ont., wearing white flowered silk crepe-de-chene; Ernest Tennyson, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Graham Weir, uncle of Mr. Tennyson; Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin, Stayner, Ont.; Mrs. John Mott, Haliburton.

The many beautiful and costly gifts received by both couples show the high esteem in which the two young couples are held.

On their return from the wedding trip they will both reside in Peterborough.

DR. ADAM DELIVERS SPLENDID LECTURE ON HARRY LAUDER

A large audience were treated to an interesting, educational and humorous lecture by Dr. George Adams at Murray street church last night. Dr. Adams spoke on Harry Lauder in the trenches, and spoke from personal experience as he accompanied him on most of his trips among the soldiers. He spoke with untiring praise of Harry Lauder's noble, generous character and illustrated this by act which he had seen the great singer perform. His lecture was very serious and even stern in places, decidedly humorous in others and even treated his hearers with a couple of vocal selections that he had heard Lauder himself sing to the boys in the trenches.

Dr. Adams, after expressing his appreciation of the people of Peterborough for requesting him to return here, anounced that he was going to talk about a small man with a large heart, Harry Lauder.

He stated that he had heard as he supposed the audience had heard of Lauder's meanness and told of a couple of stories he had heard of him which were told to illustrate this. But the speaker announced that he had no confirmation of these stories so he would not say whether they were true or not. But after personal experience he was inclined to doubt the truth of them all.

He then told a story of the other side of Harry Lauder which lead him to declare emphatically "there is no meanness in the spirit of Harry Lauder." He compared Harry Lauder with Bruce and Burns. Bruce saved Scotland and Burns revived the spirit of Scotland at a very critical time. But Harry Lauder has now gone out singing the songs of love and home with an effect that he has become the world figure that he is. There is, no comedian about Lauder but he is a man of genius.

He spoke of Harry Lauder's great anxiety to get to the trenches and of how he was actually fretting himself away in his eagerness to go over. He told of telling Harry Lauder to go to sing to the boys in the trenches and the noble spirit with which he sacrificed his $5,000 a week playing in "Three Cheers" to go over here "where the best men all are" in Lauder's own words.

He told of incident after incident in which he with Harry Lauder and James Hogg participated. He told of Harry Lauder's wonderful effect upon wounded soldiers in the hospital, of tired, footsore men returning rom the front and how he was always ready at any place at any time to sing to the boys and bring joy and cheer to them. He vividly described a great explosion in which a mine was exploded causing death and ruin for a large extent of territory. And he vividly described the young men performing in a very desperate engagement with the valor and steadiness of war stained veterans.

"My friends, don't get too Micky about the Germans," continued Dr. Adams. "I have no use for the Germans and if I had my way I would knock them all on the head. I am not in favor of allowing the Germans into the League of Nations or of allowing them to associate with decent people."

To explain this attitude the speaker told of a story Harry Lauder's son had told his father and which gave to Harry himself a great anxiety to kill Germans. When John Lauder was a short time in the trenches the Black Watch were stationed near his battalion in the first line trenches. One night they went out on a reconnoitering excursion but were unsuccesful and were captured by the Boche. The clothes were stripped off these men and they were forced to stand at attention in that condition during a cold November night. Then at dawn they were ordered to return to their own trenches but after crossing no-man's land and the barbed wire entanglements etc., and just as they were making the last dash for safety the machine guns opened on them and they were all shot down. "That was why Harry Lauder sat for an hour firing an eighteen pounder at the Germans hoping and praying that he was hitting something."

Then the speaker told of the wonderful effect on the soldiers, Harry Lauder had when he sang home and mother. He told of how the boys spoke and thought of their mother when in great trouble. He told of how many of them had died with the word "mother" upon their lips.

And then he related some of Harry Lauder's stories that sent the audience into peals of laughter as it had done to the boys in the trenches and just out on the trenches.

Dr. Adams told a patetic story of Harry Lauder kneeling at his son's grave in France and thanking him for laying down his life for his country. And then when Dr. Adams asked him to return to headquarters for rest, he turned on him angrily with these words, "my son is watching me and he is up there and the boys are wanting me down there to sing to them and I'll go." And he did go and sing.

One day Dr. Adams noticed that Harry Lauder refused a glass of whiskey and he asked him about it. Harry replied that when he started out on his profesisonal career he realized that to get to the top he must decline from drinking and now that he was at the top he realized more clearly that he must abstain from drink to stay there. "If Harry Lauder were in Ontario, I know he would vote four No's on the referendum ballot, and I would place Lauder's opinion on a moral political question above any other," declared Dr. Adams, amid applause.

In conclusion he spoke of Harry Lauder as a great and noble man. Before the war he did a great service, during the war he did a greater service and now he is preparing himself for a still greater service to all humanity. This war has brought out a great many good men but among the best is Harry Lauder.

NEW INSURANCE OFFICE

Ald. Taylor and W. G. Howden are firmly established in their new offices on Hunter street, short distance east of George, north side, where they will carry on a real estate business as well as their old insurance operation.

These premises, formerly occupied by Longo, as a fruit store, has been refitted and redecorated to good advantage by [illegible] Howden.

They were impelled to leave their Store on account of increased business, and now, with exceedingly comfortable quarters and real estate connection, they hope to go right ahead on expansion lines.

INN FEIN CONVENTION HELD IN DEFIANCE OF GOVERNMENT

ok Place in Mansion House, Dublin, at Midnight—Lord Mayor Asks Better Treatment For Imprisoned Sinn Feiners—Some are Near Death's Door.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Dublin, Oct. 16.—The lord mayor Dublin, Laurence O'Neill, alarm- at the condition of the imprison- Sinn Feiners, who, he says, are r death's door from their hunger ke, today sent a letter to Sir Mac- rson, chief secretary for Ireland, ing that they be given altered atment in prison.

Treatment of Prisoners.

After recalling the death in Mount y Prison in 1917 of Thomas Ashe, lord mayor concludes: "I am sure t a repetition of such an occurrence is not desired. Consequently I put it up to you to have the terms come to by your predecessor regarding the treatment of political prisoners carried out."

Defies Government.

Dublin, Oct. 16.—Defying the order of the Government and the commander-in-chief in Ireland, the 12th annual convention of Sinn Feiners was held at midnight in the Mansion House. It lasted three hours Despite all precautions taken to prevent the meeting a complete order of business was carried through.

RADES COUNCIL ENDORSES MR. TOOMS AS CANDIDATE FOR THE LEGISLATURE

he Sum of $25 is Contributed to Help Pay Campaign Expenses—Meeting Addressed by Joseph T. Marks, Toronto Editor and James Drury of Montreal

Mr. Thomas Tooms, the nominee the Independent Labor party for Legislature, was endorsed at the gular meeting of the Trades and bor Council last night and the sum $25 was donated to help defray campaign expenses. It was announced that all of the labor unions the city have made or have promised to make donations, and that r. Tooms is receiving no financial sistance from any other source. An ffort was made to have Mr. Tooms' andidacy advertised by slides in the cal picture theatres, but the committee appointed to look after that atter was informed that the censor had put an embargo on all such ublicity, no matter what political arty was interested.

Two Distinguished Visitors.

There were two distinguished visors at the meeting last night. Jos. . Marks, editor of the Industrial anner and provincial secretary of he Independent Labor Party, and ames Drury, of Montreal, organiser or the International Typographical nion. Both addressed the delegates. Mr. Marks, who has been all ver the province attending conventions that nominated Labor candidates, gave an account of his experiences and declared that in the present campaign Labor was interested s it never was before. He made no xtravagant claim as to a political upheaval or a clean sweep for the bor party, but did maintain that the present movement would make the old line politicians sit up, and that success, if not attained in this contest, would be assured later, as the work of organization would be resumed the very day after the election and the forces of Labor would be got into readiness for future campaigns.

The Liberals have always claimed the credit for bringing pressure to bear upon the Administration to grant the franchise to women. Mr. Marks disposed of this contention last night and asserted that it was the Labor party that convinced Premier Hearst that the women of Ontario wanted the franchise and were ready to use it. He defied anyone to show a record of a Liberal member of the Legislature taking a leading part in this movement.

What the Premier Has Done.

Mr. Drury, who is on an unofficial visit to the city, congratulated the workingmen of Peterborough upon the fact that they have four representatives in the City Council and said this should add to their prestige in the election next Monday.

Speaking of the industrial unrest, Mr. Drury cited the case of the printers of America who, in 1906, secured the eight-hour day and the right of collective bargaining after having spent six million dollars Since that time there has been industrial peace in the printing trade and strikes are rare.

The speaker maintained that that is the solution of the problem, the one cure for industrial unrest. The eight-hour day and the right of collective bargaining made general by legislative action, will put an end to al disputes between Labor and Capital.

Each of the speakers received a hearty vote of thanks for his address Mr. Marks came to Peterborough for the purpose of addressing a mass meeting on behalf of Mr. Tooms, but through some misunderstanding no provision had been made for such a gathering, and Mr. Tooms and his associates were working in the country.

W. D. VENTRESS WILL SUPPORT MR. SODEN

VOTED AGAINST HIM FIVE YEARS AGO BUT TIMES HAVE CHANGED

In that hotbed of Liberalism, the vicinity of Ventress' school house, Mr. R. J. Soden, the Conservative candidate for the Legislature, held a successful meeting last night. The attendance was good, and the attention given the speaker was all that could be desired.

Mr. W. D. Ventress was too ill to attend the meeting, although he is hoping that he will be well enough to go to the polls on Monday. Mr Soden visited him at his home, and by Mr. Soden Mr. Vineress sent a message to his friends and neighbors who had gathered to listen to the address of the candidate.

That message was that though Mr Ventress had voted against Mr Soden in 1914 he will support him Monday. Five years ago Mr. Ventress voted for the party that promised to abolish the bar. He recognizes now the fact that the temperance cause has made a long stride in advance since the last election Mr Ventress believes in prohibition. Premier Hearst gave Ontario the Ontario Temperance Act and Mr. Ventress believes for that reason the Premier is entitled to the support of every temperance worker. And the only way in which to support Premier Hearst is to vote for R. J. Soden.

BOLSHEVIKI, FORCED BACK ON FOUR FRONTS, FACE DISASTER AND DEFEAT

Both Petrograd and Moscow Seem Doomed to Capture—Still Uncertainty as to Position at Riga—Altogether in Russia Are of Extremely Discouraging Character for Bolshevik Regime—Soviets Cannot Conduct Winter Campaign.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct 16. Forced back by enemies on four fronts, armies of the Soviet Government of Russia appear to be facing a period pregnant with disaster

General Denikine's Cossacks from the south, Polish forces from the west, North western Russian legions on the northwest, and Northern Russian troops from the north, have during the last few days forged ahead until it seems that Bolshevik armies are between upper and nether millstones.

Petrograd Doomed.

Petrograd is doomed to capture, in the opinion of observers, General Yudenitch being at Gathchina, only 25 miles south of the former Russian capital.

Moscow Doomed.

It is generally recognized that the fall of Orel and Tula would mean that Moscow was doomed. There is still uncertainty about the position at Riga. According to the report of a German officer at Mitau, Colonel Avaloff Bermondt, in command of the Russo-German forces, is not aiming at the capture of Riga, but desires only to secure the Dvina front against Moscow.

Bol-heviki Discouraged.

Altogether to-day's developments from Russia are of an extremely discouraging character for the Bolshevik regime General Denikine, whose forces are advancing on a front of about 450 miles through Central Russia, has in the centre captured Orel, only 238 miles from Moscow, and the most important railroad centre south of the capital. The northwestern army of General Yudenitch, also operating on a broad front, is reported to have smashed through the Bolshevik lines west and southwest of Petrograd, and to be within fifty to seventy-five miles of Petrograd all along the front. Meanwhile Kolchak's Siberian armies are improving their advantage along the Tobol River and are now within a few miles of the boundaries of European Russia, from which they were driven by the recent successful Bolshevik offensive. Riga is apparently held firmly for the time being by the Letts, who, with Esthonian assistance have withstood the onslaught of Col. Avaloff-Bermondt and his German auxiliaries and have for four days been able to prevent them crossing the Duna into the main part of Riga The town, to which the Lettish Government has returned, is reported a fire in several places.

Held up in front at Riga, Col. Bermondt finds his rear seriously menaced by a new advance of the Poles, who have struck westward from Vilna to Kovno and now threaten the communications of the German troops with Germany.

With the exception of the gap between the Volga and the Siberian frontier, a fairly continuous line of offence is established against the Bolsheviki ,reaching from the Gulf of Finland, sixty miles beyond Petrograd, due south to Dvinsk, thence along the Polish front southeastward to Gomel, which in turn is barely seventy-five miles from Chernigoff, just captured by Denikine.

The Bolshevik leaders, it is reported, are preparing to evacuate Petrograd, and should Denikine's advance continue successfully beyond Orel, they may, it is said, give up the game altogether and retreat in Central Russia, and retreat into Turkestan.

MISLEADING STATEMENTS BY THE LIBERALS

One of the statements that is being circulated by the local Liberal workers and speakers with the object of injuring the chances of Mr. R. J. Soden is that in 1918 Mr. Soden signed a petition to have a liquor dispensary established in this city with a local man in charge. Mr. Soden most certainly did so in company with other leading citizens whose temperance principles were in no sense compromised by taking such a step.

At that time the Ontario License Commissioners were considering the question of increasing the number of shops at which liquor for medicinal purposes could be procured on a doctor's prescription. After a year's trial of the dispensary system it was felt that the number should be increased. It was deemed a hardship that the residents of this city, when doctors prescribed liquor for them, should be under the necessity of sending or going to Toronto for a supply and then take chances on not getting what they ordered. If liquor is necessary as a medicine, those authorized to so use it should not be put under unnecessary hardship or to avoidable expense in obtaining it.

At the time referred to the local druggists decided to give up the handling of liquor. The churches in need of wine for sacramental purposes, could not get what they required except by sending to Toronto. The License Commissioners not only talked of establishing a dispensary here, but proposed to put a non-resident in charge of it.

The members of the Ministerial Association joined in a resolution asking for a local dispensary with a city resident to manage it, naming in this connection a former dealer whose record was above suspicion. A petition to this effect was circulated. That was the petition which Mr. Soden and other temperance advocates signed. This is the basis of the story now being circulated by the whispering agents of Mr. Gillespie.

For some reason or other the local dispensary was not established here, although a deputation of citizens appeared before the License Board and urged that such a step be taken.

BOLSHEVIKI RETREAT

London, Oct. 16. (Bulletin). — A general retreat by the Bolsheviki before the armies of Admiral Kolchak in Western Siberia is announced in a wireless message from the Kolchak Government at Omsk, dated October 13.

An Irish lady well known to society contributed to the gaiety of nations he other evening by dashing into the ursery and reproving her eldest born in the manner following:

GEN. LUNDENDORFF REFUSES TO OBEY

WILL NOT APPEAR GEFORE GERMAN COMMISSION ON WAR RESPONSIBILITY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Oct. 16 —General Ludendorff is reported to have refused to appear before the War Parliamentary Commission investigating the responsibility of German leaders for which will begin its session early next week

Carl Kautsy will address the Commission on the results of his investigation of pre-war diplomatic documents, and suggest names of individuals to be summoned.

The judicial status of the commission and the extent of its powers to enforce attendance by witnesses is still uncertain, and it is the opinion in some quarters that General Ludendorff cannot be compelled to submit to examination.

Paris, Oct. 1 —The Commander of the British naval fleet in the Baltic has sent an ultimatum to the commander of the German forces at Riga saying he would shell them if they did not leave the suburbs by noon today.

WILSON'S MIND NOT IMPAIRED

PHYSICIAN DECLARES U.S. PRESIDENT IS MENTALLY AS GOOD AS EVER.

New York, Oct. 1 —The New York World this morning prints the following excerpt of a letter from Rear Admiral Grayson, President Wilson's personal physician, to an unnamed friend in New York. The publication was authorized by Admiral Grayson:

"I do not know of any disease that has not been included in the rumors about the President. If I tried to refute all the rumors that have been scattered about I would not have had any time to devote to the President professionally. I have not followed this course and I do not intend to do so.

"I agree with you—I wish I was similarly affected if I could be as mentally alert as the President. I can sincerely say that his mind is as good as it ever was since I have known him. I hope the time will not be far distant when it will be considered safe to permit him to resume work, when his actions and his words will speak for themselves.

"As he gains in strength his case is more difficult for me to handle, as he is so very anxious to get back to work. All the doctors I have called in agree that absolute rest and quiet is essential to complete recovery. My great dificulty is to keep him from becoming irritated as a result of the rest treatment, for if he should strain himself too severely complication might result. I belive you can appreciate the triyng situation with which I am laboring."

HARRY FLINDEN BADLY INJURED

FELL BETWEEN WALL OF CEMENT AND EARTH—CONDITION STILL SERIOUS

Mr Flinden was engaged signalling the huge derrick and while standing at the edge of the pier on the west side of the bridge lost his balance and fell down a considerable distance between a wall of cement and one of dirt.

His condition was slightly improved today but is yet very serious. He is suffering from an internal hemorrhage and rupture of the kidneys. An operation will be performed as soon as the sufferer is in a fit condition to undergo it.

STEEL STRIKERS ARE RETURNING TO WORK BIG COMPANIES CLAIM

Say Pittsburg Mills Are Fast Returning to Normal Conditions and Production on the Increase—Strikers Declare Men Are not Deserting Ranks and Position Satisfactory

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Pittsburg, Oct. 16.—Large numbers of workers who went on strike on September 22nd., last, when the nation-wide walk out of steel and iron employees became effective, are returning to work daily in the Pittsburg district, acording to representatives of the companies, who claimed today that the mills in this region were fast returning to normal conditions.

More Production.

Production is on the increase the companies declared and the situation so far as the companies are concerned is assuming a brighter aspect each day.

What Strikers Claim.

Union leaders countered employees claims today with the statement that strikers were not deserting the ranks and that the strike is as effective at this time as it was during the early days of the walk-out. Leaders at union headquarters were considering plans for carrying their free-speech and free assemblance fight into the courts today. A test case of this question, they said, was provided last night, when the police refused to allow strikers to meet on the south side of Pittsburg without a permit.

LONDON TIMES AND G.T.R. SCHEME

NEWS OF ARBITRATION AGREEMENT RECEIVED IN ENGLAND WITH SATISFACTION

RISE IN GUARANTEED STOCK

THIRD PARTY IN ARBITRATION SHOULD BE INDEPENDENT SAYS THE TELEGRAPH

London, Oct. 15. — The financial editor of The Times says the news of the agreement regarding arbitration reached between the Canadian Government and the Grand Trunk Railway was received in the city yesterday with undisguised satisfaction.

"The rise in the guaranteed stock would appear to be fully justified by the terms of the arbitration agreement."

The financial editor of the Daily Mail writes that if the Canadian Government's proposed terms are duly carried through, the Dominion guarantee of four per cent on the guaranteed stock will make the stock worth even more than the much higher price to which it rose yesterday on the announcement of the terms. Last week the price closed at forty-six and a half, but yesterday it jumped to fifty-seven. If it rises to 70 it will still yield as much as five pounds, or fifteen per cent to the purchaser. Continuing, the Mail's financial editor says:

"In veiw of the current market value of Canada's credit, a price of seventy would be by no means excessive. There is, of course, always the possibility of a hitch in such arrangements until they are actually binding, but there is so far no indication that the latest terms will not be carried through."

The third arbitrator, The Telegraph says, should neither be an Englishman or a Canadian, as he will obviously have the casting vote, in deciding the terms. "He should be absolutely independent and impartial," it concludes.

BODY OF MISSING AVIATOR FOUND

PICKED UP IN LAKE HURON BY EAGLE BOAT 44

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Detroit, Oct. 16 —The body picked up yesterday off Cape Hurd, Lake Huron, by Eagle Boat 44 has been identified as that of Observer Verheyder, who, with Captain Dammann, has been missing since their balloon participating in the national championship race, was foun wrecked off Cove Light, October 4th

CANUCKS CANNOT LEAVE GT. BRITAIN

UNABLE TO SECURE RETURN PASSAGE FOR AT LEAST SIX MONTHS

ARE PLACED ON FOOD RATIONS

INTENDING VISITORS TO MOTHER COUNTRY WARNED TO STAY HOME

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—The Department of Immigration and Colonization has received, by cable, a warning from England that there are thousands of Canadians on the other side anxious to come home, but unable to secure return passage for at least six months. It is said that this situation is being accentuated by the arrival of visitors from Canada.

When the cable was sent from London, rationing had been resorted to. The weekly allowance was: Butter one ounce; sugar, six ounces; coal 100 pounds; meat, forty cents worth. Canadians who contemplate a visit to the Mother Country during the next few monhts should take into consideration the impossibility of returning within a few weeks after arrival there. Unless, therefore, visitors are financially and otherwise prepared to stay in the Mother Country for from six months to a year, they should defer making visits until the shipping situation has cleared up.

KEEP ALIENS OUT

States Extends War-Time Passport Restrictions One Year.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Oct. 16.—By an overwhelming majority, the House today passed a bill extending for one year the wartime passport restrictions, so as to keep radicals and undesirable Aliens out of the U. S.

END OF DAYLIGHT TIME

Railways Will Change Back Sunday October 26th. at 12a.m.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Oct. 16.—Daylight saving time, which has been in effect on all Canadian railways during the summer, will change at 2 a.m. Sunday October 26. This announcement is made in a circular sent out to the railways from the offices of the Canadian Railway War Board.

Sink Warships.

Paris, Oct. 16.—By ratification of the Peace Treaty, Germany must sink all warships under construction, deliver her aerial fleet and evacuate Silesia and Eastern Prussia.

FOUR STEAMERS FROZEN IN ON YUKON PASSENGERS MAY BE MAROONED WEEKS

Forty Mile, Y. T., Oct. 11.—(Delayed)— Many women and children are included in the 300 passengers of four Yukon River steamers, which are marooned in the river ice owing to the early freeze up.

Passengers are helping to cut wood to keep steam in the vessel's boilers Only a moderation in the weather will possibly enable the boats to reach Dawson. Should the weather not moderate, those marooned, must wait several weeks for the coming of snow and dog teams. For the present the food suply is ample.

Reach Dawson Overland

Dawson, Y. T., Oct. 15.— Overland arrivals from Mayo report that the steamer Nasutlin has reached that point safely and is frozen in there for the winter.

The steamers near Forty Mile and Circle, still are delayed there by the heavy ice. The temperature is higher, but it is a question if these boats will be able to make their destination.

NORTH-WEST FARMERS SELLING THEIR GRAIN TO STATES FOR 70 CTS. INCREASE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Oct 16. —It is reported here in grain circles that farmers in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, to a distance of forty and fifty miles north of the International boundary line, are this fall hauling large quantities of wheat across to United States market points and receiving sixty cents or seventy cents more per bushel than would be possible if they sold their wheat in Canada.

Elevators Closing.

This international trade has assumed such proportions that a number of elevators located at southern points in the two provinces are being closed as the amount of business they are receiving does not warrant the expense of keeping them open.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1919

SUPPORTING MR. SODEN.

WHEN THE EXAMINER can think of no other name to apply to The Review it refers to it as the mouthpiece of Mr. Soden, as if that should be sufficient to scare us into the timbers.

Not for Mr. Soden alone but for all that Mr. Soden represents, and scarcely a mouthpiece either, as we insist upon the right to our own opinions and refuse to be the mere megaphone of politicians who can put about anything over the unsophisticated.

But really, we find the task of supporting Mr. Soden and the Conservative party from Pemier Hearst to the local candidate himself, a congenial duty. For the Premier, the candidate or the party it is not necessary to attempt to invent apologies. The position of the Premier on the vital issue is well known. That of the candidate, too, is an open book, and they are in perfect accord on everything. The record of the party is unassailable.

On the other hand, what do we find? The candidate and his leader are at odds. The latter refuses to declare himself on the question which is the outstanding feature of the campaign. The party has no record save that which has been made by a weak and inconsequential minority fifteen years in hopeless opposition, the main plank of their platform during that time a compromise emphatically rejected by the voters in 1914. And, going further back in political history, the annals of the closing days of the Liberal Administration will hardly stand investigation. All records in the way of graft were broken, all methods to retain hold of power gradually slipping away were surpassed by that Liberal Government.

Mr. Soden is a citizen of integrity. He is an authority on public questions, and a man who has the gift of speech in a high degree. He is a worker as well as a talker, a man eminently fitted for the position to which he aspires. To support such a candidate, especially when the high character of his leader and the record of his party are considered, is a pleasure in very truth.

MR. KERR AND THE ISSUE.

MR. F. D. KERR, speaking at Selwyn in the interests of Mr. Gillespie, made the claim that the Conservative party of Ontario is not pledged to prohibition because that policy was never really endorsed at a convention of the party. Mr. Kerr, if we understand his position correctly, thinks that Premier Hearst should have called a party conference to discuss this issue before making an appeal to the country.

Mr. Kerr is much too accomplished a political worker not to know that such a course would be unusual, not to say unprecedented. It is not in accordance with political procedure for a Government that has confidence in its own record to call a convention immediately before an election. The Ross Government did in those dark days when it was in its final throes of dissolution, but the case was too desperate to be remedied by such a course.

For the Hearst Government to have called a convention of the party would have been a confession of weak faith in its own policies, at least the step would have been so interpreted by Mr. Kerr and other leaders in his party. The Liberals have really no concern in what their opponents may or may not do in this regard. They are interested in the matter because they cherished the hope that a convention of Conservatives might have left the party in as lamentable disunion as resulted from the two Liberal conventions, Provincial and Federal, last summer.

We have not the slightest doubt that if Mr. Kerr cared to publicly express his honest convictions he would admit that on the great purposes of both conventions referred to—the selection of a leader—the will of the majority was thwarted and that each wing of the party was left in rather sorrier case than before. It is so easily possible for a convention to be packed with machine-made delegates while the rank and file of the party remain inactive and unrepresented.

The Conservative party has for the past three years borne the responsibility for the enactment of the only prohibitory legislation the Province has ever had. The measure was adopted by a Legislature in which seventy-seven members out of a total of one hundred and eleven were Conservatives. At every succeeding session the Ontario Temperance Act has been amended by unanimous consent of this large majority, and amended, too, in order to make its various provisions more binding.

Sir William Hearst has called a convention, not of the Conservative party alone, to be made up of hand-picked delegates, but of the entire voting population of Ontario. That massed gathering of voters will be heard from next Monday. Every man and woman of voting age in the Province will be given a chance to pass upon the record of the Hearst Administration, the temperance issue included. The heelers and the machine men will be unable to exert any pernicious influence in such an assemblage. Whatever the verdict may be next Monday, it cannot be said that the majority have not prevailed.

SUPPORT THE PARTY that has a leader whose following is united.

MR. GILLESPIE AND THE FARMERS.

The Province has been paying for years large sums of money on the Agricultural College at Guelph. Young men have been educated at expense to the people, but the Province has not received a corresponding advantage, because these young men invariably leave the Province and get good positions on the other side of the line.

The services of these young men could be retained to great advantage to the farming community by having them in charge of demonstration farms.

Their services would be valuable in laying our drainage systems, both large and small. Drains would be laid out at the best places to reap the greatest advantage. It would be a great advantage to a farmer to have a field produce twice as much produce for the same labor.—From Mr. Gillespie's speech at Lakefield as reported in the party organ.

IT IS TRUE that the Province has been paying for years large sums of money for the technical education of farmers, just as it has for the training of young men for the other professions, and this outlay is certainly no discredit to the Government. Graduates of our agricultural colleges not infrequently go to the United States, where their services are in demand, and no higher compliment can be paid the institution in which they are fitted for their life work. Young farmers have as much right to select their own field of endeavor as have lawyers, doctors or school teachers trained in Canadian seats of learning.

Mr. Gillespie would provide every graduate of our agricultural colleges with remunerative positions by establishing a demonstration farm in every county and putting these farms under the direction of the graduates. This policy would involve a public expenditure such as no government would be justified in undertaking. The farmers themselves would not stand for any such arrangement. They are not looking for State paternalism. The Government should not be required to provide situations for graduates of the agricultural colleges any more than for the young lawyers, doctors and teachers, who, when they receive their diplomas, are under the necessity of making their own way.

But not all the graduates of farm colleges leave Canada for the United States. In all parts of the Province these bright young men are to be found working their own, or employed on their fathers', farms, and the result of their training is to be seen in their improved surroundings and in the modern methods which they employ.

The farmers of Ontario are not really so neglected by the Government as Mr. Gillespie appears to believe. Every riding has its district representative, an agricultural expert, whose services are available to every farmer who comes to seek them, and that, too, without expense. There were two such representatives formerly, but the number was reduced as a measure of war-time economy. What other branch of industry is supplied with a resident expert who will advise gratis on a business problem?

Talking of demonstration farms, it is now possible to convert a large percentage of the farms of Ontario into such institutions. All depends on the location. If a farmer has a field adjacent to the public road and wishes to drain it on scientific principles, the Agricultural Department will do it for him and at the nominal cost of the actual living expenses of the expert employed. Any other farmer who wishes to underdrain his farm can secure a ditching machine and expert service from the Department. No farmer need lack for information as to the eradication of weeds or the use of suitable fertilizers. All he has to do when in doubt is to apply to the Department. The Government cannot, however, compel farmers either to send their sons to the college at Guelph or to underdrain their farms or to adopt any other up-to-date methods.

Beyond all question the services of an expert are required in draining a farm, either on or under the surface. In the olden times, before the present Government took the matter up, many a farmer found this out to his cost when, after a heavy outlay for ditches, he discovered that he had mistaken the lay of the land and that the water ran in exactly the opposite direction from which he had intended.

In the excess of his zeal for the cause, Mr. F. D. Kerr in his speech at Selwyn, said that if the Liberals are returned to power, Mr. Gillespie will stand an excellent chance of being made Minister of Agriculture. In the highly improbable event of Liberal success, a majority of the Legislature will consist of practical farmers. Surely one of these would be selected for the important position to which Mr. Kerr has reference. West Peterborough would esteem it an honor to have cabinet representation under any administration, but for Minister of Agriculture a practical farmer should be selected rather than a merchant.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

WHEN DID the Liberals ever face the electors on a straight prohibition issue?

* * * * *

UNFORTUNATELY for the Examiner there is no wooden leg issue in this campaign to help it in its struggles.

* * * * *

FAITH MAY be able to move mountains, but faith in Hartley Dewart as a leader is far below that high standard.

* * * * *

FORTUNATELY for the world, the voters of Ontario have the right of self-determination and will not hesitate to exercise it.

* * * * *

THE HORRORS of war survive the signing of the armistice. There's the peace debate in the United States Senate, for example.

* * * * *

INDISCREET rather than brave is the local temperance advocate who takes the platform to chant the praises of Hartley Dewart.

* * * * *

MR. GILLESPIE may well pray these trying days to be saved from his leader and from his professed friends, journalistic and otherwise.

* * * * *

TRUST Mr. R. R. Hall in every campaign in which he takes part to have a side line that diverts public attention from the main show.

* * * * *

THE FARMERS of West Peterborough are encouraged to hope that if the Liberals are returned to power a milk dealer will be appointed Minister of Agriculture.

* * * * *

ON ITS RECORD the Examiner stands discredited both as a counsellor and a prophet. Two years ago it declared the candidate to which it was opposed was not the man to represent West Peterborough, and the electors took its advice by rolling up a majority of something like four thousand.

INCIDENTS OF PRESENT CAMPAIGN INTEREST WOMEN OF ONTARIO

"Who knows but that God has given you the ballot for such a time as this to save your country," said a speaker, referring to women's vote.

"It is a joy to come and find the people here standing for right," said a returned man speaking on Saturday night in reference to the Ontario Temperance Act and the Referendum.

Dr. F. Scott McBride, spoken of as "the man who made Chicago dry," in speaking at a recent meeting in Toronto, claimed that the victory for prohibition in the United States, was due largely to the vote of the women. Ontario women will doubtless have the same record, after the vote on the referendum is taken on next Monday. And their vote on the Provincial elections will be equally united in returning to power, the Government that first introduced prohibition in Ontario,—the Hearst Government which brought in the Ontario Temperance Act as a war time measure.

Can women ever forget that Hartley Dewart, leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, was opposed to backing up our fighting men overseas? When sons of Canada "over there" were praying for reinforcements, and dying in France, Hartley Dewart did all in his power to prevent conscription, the only measure which have met the terrible emergency.

When women remember that the lads sleeping beneath the white crosses in France and Flanders, will they help to elect to power, the man who would have been false to those men who died doing their duty to Canada? Remember that a vote for a Liberal candidate, is a vote for putting that man in power.

At a meeting last night, Hon. W. D. McPherson drew attention to the fact that through the wisdom of the Ontario Government, parents in Ontario are paying less, for their children's school books, than are parents in any other pdovince of the Dominion.

The Government Housing plans, which include construction of thousands of houses in the coming Spring, will meet with the approval of women who, even more than men, have suffered through the difficulty of securing suitable and comfortable housing.

Dr. Catherine Woodhouse is another of the women doctors of Toronto, who have no hesitation in speaking on behalf of the Hearst Government. Dr. Woodhouse has the women's as well as the physician's stand-point, and realizes how the Ontario Government has improved conditions for women and children. Speaking publicly she has given unstinted praise for the medical and dental inspection introduced into the schools. This is not only for cities and towns, but is being introduced into the rural schools.

That Belleville had more to be thankful for than any other city, in the passing of the Ontario Temperance Act, was the claim of Mr. B. V. Sinclair of that city in speaking at a Referendum meeting. Belleville women like women all over the province, know that Sir William Hearst and his Government brought that Act into force.

Every woman who votes at the coming elections, does so because the Ontario Government made it possible for her to do so. It is all very well for the Opposition to claim that they deserve the credit, but why, was it that when they were in power they would have nothing to do with women suffrage?

Women have the vote not as a favor, but as a call to duty. If the party which has taken as a leader, a man who turned his back on the soldiers overseas, should be put in power and that man become Premier it would be the fault of the Conservative women who failed to get out and vote.

Farmers and farmers' wives in Tupperville and that section of the country are not worrying much about the O. F. A. They know as do others in agricultural pursuits through the country, just what splendid legislation for farmers, the Hearst Government has enacted.

North Bay women are not backward in putting on record, their confidence in the Hearst Government. At a mass meeting a few nights ago, they moved a resolution to that effect, endorsing the Premier's policy, and especially pointing to his plan for the liquor question. The women who moved the resolution is an out-and-out prohibitionist and not a partisan.

Premier Hearst kept his promises during the war. He can be relied upon to do the same in peace time.

"It is your duty to come out and vote for our Premier" said Dr. Caroline Brown, a well known Toronto physician and one of the four women members of the Toronto School Board.

Can anybody point to a single department which has not progressed during the years of the Hearst Government?

The Liberal party has done a great deal of talking on the temperance question, but it is noticeable that even when they were in power and could have introduced legislation, nothing was achieved towards prohibition. The Conservative party has done less talking but has gone ahead and done things while in power, which the Liberals talked about but never achieved.

FACTS ABOUT NICKEL

Some women are asking to be told a few definate facts about the Nickel question, ungarnished by party politics. The following bare statements which are authentic, should carry more weight than furious attacks, based on a desire to make political capital.

Nickel had to be exported to United States refineries, if our men were to be provided with munitions. There was no other possible solution, as at the time there was no refinery in Canada, and there was desperate need for munitions at the front.

All nickel exported to the United States during the war was under a supervision adopted by the Dominion Government through the co-operation of the British Admiralty. The British War Office took all possible precautions to assure complete supervision, and as proved by cables to Sir Robert Borden, was satisfied with the arrangements made.

The War Office was satisfied that if any shipments should evade supervision, the British Navy would catch them. Their estimate was correct. The fact that some shipments were caught by the Navy does not prove that many more slipped through as some try to make believe. It proves that as always the British Navy is on guard, and that they probably stopped every shipment on its way to the enemy.

Moreover as there are thousands of pounds of residue nickel from the copper industry in the States, it is probable that the nickel shipments taken by the Navy were from that source which is in no way connected with this country.

The Ontario Government had no more to do with prohibiting the export of nickel, than it had to do with the export of wheat. The Dominion Government had complete jurisdiction over those matters.

John R. Rathom, editor of the Providence Journal, who did such valuable work during the war, in bringing many enemy schemes to light, stated in a letter as well as many times publicly, that as far as he knew, Canadian nickel had not been going to Germany with the exception of a shipment on the Deutschland. And the nickel in this plant had been in the States for several years previous and was entirely beyond the control of the International Nickel Company.

Eventually as a result of a Royal Commission which studied and reported favorably on the project, a five million dollar refinery was erected at Port Colborne, and the International Nickel Company is now paying hundreds of dollars in increased taxes to the Province.

FEMININE LOGIC

The young lady across the way says the bible is well worth all the study she's put upon it, but one doesn't necessarily have to take everything literally, and a person can be a perfectly good Christian without believing the story of Noah and the whale.

Campbellford Town Council authorized the solicitor to prepare a bylaw to raise by debenture $49,000 to build a new High School.

Twenty-five private dwellings and four large stores were destroyed by fire at St. Raphael de Bellechane, Quebec.

MARKING THE BALLOT

		YES	NO
1	Are you in favor of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?		X
2	Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one hundredths per cent. alcohol, weight measure, through Government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
3	Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one hundredths per cent. alcohol, weight measure, in standard hotels in local municipalities that by a majority vote favor such sale, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
4	Are you in favor of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X

The above is a sample of the referendum ballot which will be submitted to the voters on October 20. Any person who is in favor of prohibition for Ontario will be well advised to mark the ballot as above. If this is done, there can be no question as to the intention of the elector.

To make it certain that your wishes in this respect will be given effect, that the Ontario Temperance Act as endorsed by the people, will be rigidly enforced when it comes to voting for one of the three candidates before the people, mark your ballot as shown in the following sample. Women voting for the first time should understand that they have a right to vote both on the referendum and for one candidate. To vote on the first only, even when both are recorded, would be a duty only half performed. Vote for the candidate who will support the Premier whose worth has been proved. Vote for R. J. Soden.

Will You Cast Your Vote for More Drug Fiends?

DO YOU REALIZE that the fiendish drug habit is spreading through the fair Province of Ontario at an alarming rate?

DO YOU REALIZE that doctors and apothecaries are so appalled by the insidious growth of this terrible evil that appeals are being made to the authorities to take most drastic action?

DO YOU REALIZE that this canker worm is eating its way through every strata of society, high and low, poor and rich—men and women of all grades and conditions in ever increasing numbers are becoming addicts of the terrible habit?

DO YOU REALIZE that these poor unfortunates are being supplied, by vast importations of opium, cocaine, morphine, heroin, through the dark ways of the underworld that baffle the police?

DO YOU REALIZE that this terrible condition is due largely to the sudden enforcement of a too drastic prohibitory legislation? The Toronto Telegram only a few days ago quoted a prominent physician as declaring: "Some of the addicts have stated that when cut off from alcohol they had drifted around to the use of drugs."

DO YOU REALIZE that in voting for the continuance of The Ontario Temperance Act you are voting for the continued spread of this deadly traffic? The despicable creatures of the underworld who live by pandering to the weakness of their drug-victims, are hoping for a solid four "No's" on the ballot. The responsibility must rest with you,

THE SONG OF THE ALLEYS

(By T. N. Sister.)

I hear the alleys calling in accents sweet and low,
And other "bugs" just like me have heard the call I know.
The summer days are over, and gosh, things do look punk.
Such foolish games as baseball are packed in winter's trunk,
But football strong and sturdy, will last a month or two.
And some will chase the pig skin.
And some will chase the pig skin who've nothing else to do.
The fishing days are over, mosquitoes are all dead.
And some poor souls are dreaming
And some poor souls are dreaming of hockey days ahead.
The cricket crease is punctured, and golf is buried deep,
And those who dote on tennis, now sit and sigh and weep.
The rowing shells are canvassed and croquet mallets hung,
And bowling greens are covered, the kitty's neck is wrung.
But say, if summer's welching, and things look on the bum,
When five nipgames get going, it's then that things will hum.
I see the pin boys sneering, at those who think they're it,
I hear the silent cussing (he's missed a simple hit.)
You'll miss the four pin sometimes, better men have done the same.
If you will keep your temper, you'll learn to play the game.
So cheer up chappie, cheer up, brgiht days are now ahead.
The five pin game will soothe you when other games are dead.
Though vines are full of pumpkins and frost is in the air.
The five pin game still lingers, then who the—blank—should care.

Argos also indulged in a light work-out. Among the absentees noted were Garrett, Foster, Cassels, Hay and Munro. The latter is in hospital, where he was operated upon for blood poisoning and it is doubtful if he will be ready for Saturday's game against Montreal. O'Reilly was at the practice, but eased up, as he is suffering from a cracked rib.

T. R. and A. A. emerged from Saturday's contest with Capitals better than first reports would have led one to believe. "Moose" Heffernan is the worst injured of the whole squad, as the muscles of his right knee are badly strained, but it is hoped to have him ready for the next league game. George Hickie's ankle is sprained and "Dutch" Brophy's back is wrenched, but a few days' rest are expected to rectify these casualties, also Dod Burkhart's twisted shoulder and neck.

After landing their half-back, Gilhooley, to the skies for his game against Argos on Saturday, Ottawa is now panning him for dropping a show of punts against McGill. The Red and White wings are said to have tackled like fiends.

LITTLE BIG FOUR ADOPT SCHEDULE TO OPEN ON OCT. 25.

Toronto, Oct. 15.—The Little Big Four held a meeting yesterday and thoroughly discussed the playing rules. They decided to retain the three-yard catch rule. The following schedule was adopted for the season:

Oct. 25—St. Andrew's at Ridley; Trinity College School at Upper Canada.

Nov. 1—Upper Canada at St. Andrew's (Varsity Stadium); Ridley at Trinity College School (Upper Canada Campus).

The Aftermath.

The aftermath of the week-end Rugby shows that almost anything may be expected to come along and upset the dope in the old gridiron bucket. After deducing the reason for Argonauts and Tigers losing to Ottawa and Montreal respectively one cannot but agree that the Rough Riders and M.A.A.A. have risen fifty per cent. in the local estimation. Then on top of that McGill, in their first game of the season with a team that was generally reported at the early practices to be far below the usual calibre of the squad Shaughnessy was used to handling for the Red and White, hands Ottawa a severe trimming. Varsity beat Queen's decisively and the question now arises in view of Argos' defeat by Ottawa and Ottawa's loss to McGill, Varsity better than the Double Blue.

It is a conundrum that will provide much food for thought in the next few days, but Saturday's fixtures will help unravel it some. In the first place McGill travel to Kingston, where they tackle Queen's. The Presbyterians should be a much stronger aggregation by that time than when they tackled the U. of T. and it is felt generally that with the tri-color squad in good condition there will not be any more walkaways this season in this group. Then T. R. and A. A. will play Varsity an exhibition game and if the past is any criterion it should be some battle, especially as there has always existed a peculiar rivalry between the college and city teams that has approached as near to "feeling" as good sportsmanship will permit it to go.

Who Will Win?

The outcome of the Black and White-Blue and White tussle will be watched with much interest for T. R. and A. A. beat Tigers in a pre-season game, Montreal beat Tigers on Saturday, who had already been beaten by Ottawa, whose string of victories were broken by McGill. Also Tigers invade Rytown to tackle the Capitals and from this safe point of vantage it looks a good place to watch them do them battle. Any nearer might prove precarious. If there isn't enough dope to figure out in those eternal triangles some fu-

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.80 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $1,000.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

The Presbyterians should be a much stronger aggregation by that time than when they tackled the U. of T. and it is felt generally that with the tri-color squad in good condition there will not be any more walkaways this season in this group. Then T. R. and A. A. will play Varsity an exhibition game and if the past is any criterion it should be some battle, especially as there has always existed a peculiar rivalry between the college and city teams that has approached as near to "feeling" as good sportsmanship will permit it to go.

Who Will Win?

The outcome of the Black and White-Blue and White tussle will be watched with much interest for T. R. and A. A. beat Tigers in a pre-season game. Montreal beat Tigers on Saturday, who had already been beaten by Ottawa, whose string of victories were broken by McGill. Also Tigers invade Bytown to tackle the Capitals and from this safe point of vantage it looks a good place to watch them do them battle. Any nearer might prove precarious. If there isn't enough dope to figure out in those eternal triangles some fu-

Sir Wiltrid Laurier Said:

As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $56.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495.00 in case of death

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

His "Ten Commandments" Won Wealth on Prairie

Most merchants in opening a store hunt for a suitably prosperous community in which to locate it. But Jim Thackeray opened his on a prairie and permitted a town to "congulate" around it. Jim Thackeray's store was opened in Cleveland, Okla., when Cleveland consisted solely of his store.

Thackeray is now worth half a million, but even in the days when he and his family were the entire community he did a fair trade.

There was a population in Cleveland, if there was not a community, but was an awfully transient population New York has quite a reputation for a transient population, but it never could hold a candle to Jim Thackeray's locality in the old days for transientness. The population was transient at that spot because it was always travelling from Kansas City to Texas, or from Texas to Kansas City. It paused at what is now Cleveland only to take a deep breath before fording the Arkansas river or to do a little trading in Jim's store.

Jim was twenty-two at that time. He lived with his uncle and aunt, and they were all poor together.

His inventory showed such items as groceries, clothing, guns, and ammunition, tobacco, pipes and blankets. The store was just a one room log hut, built between the river and the higher hills, far enough up so that the annual floods would not water his stock nor bring too many floating assets into his business.

His customers were Indians and others, but principally Indians. The classification "others" included cattle drovers, freighters, and trappers. For quite a while Jim was unpopular with the white population of that general region, at the men thought he was too "highfaultin" with his "grand business ideas." But gradually that attitude wore itself out.

Jim Thackeray didn't know much about the "science of merchandising" when he opened his log hut to the Indian trade, but he had a pretty firm grasp on certain fundamental busines principles. He calls them his "Ten Commandments of Business," and sets them forth in this manner:

First. Thou shalt not wait for something to turn up, but thou shalt pull off thy coat and go to work that thou mayst prosper in thy affairs and make the word "failure" spell "success."

Second. Thou shalt not be content to go about thy business looking like a bum, for thou shouldst know that thy personal appearance is better than a letter of recommendation.

Third. Thou shalt not try to make excuses, nor shalt thou say to those who chide thee, "I didn't think."

Fourth. Thou shalt not wait to be told what thou shalt do, not in what manner thou shalt do it, for thus may thy days be long in the job which fortune hath given thee.

Fifth. Thou shalt not fail to maintain thine own integrity, nor shalt thou be guilty of anything that will lessen thy good respect for thyself.

Sixth. Thou shalt not covet the other fellow's job, nor his salary, nor the position that he hath gained by his own hard labor.

Seventh. Thou shalt not be afraid to blow thine own horn, for he who faileth to blow his own horn at the proper occasion findeth nobody standing ready to blow it for him.

Ninth. Thou shalt not hesitate to say "no" when thou meanest "no" nor shalt thou fail to remember that there are times when it is unsafe to bind thyself to hasty judgment.

Tenth. Thou shalt give every man a square deal. This is the last and great commandment, and there is no other like unto it. Upon this commandment hang all the law and the profits of the business world.

Retires After Selling ..... Eight Million Toys .....

After making a record of selling 8,000,000 toys in six years, A. P. Breniser, of Reading, Pa., has retired from business and is now looking for some other field to conquer. He believes that he has worked the "toy game" dry and is perfectly willing for other people to take it up where he left off.

When he started out Breniser rented a storeroom sixteen by forty feet in size, out of the high rent district of Reading, in a section where only advertising could make a business a success. Later he moved into a building with three stories and a basement and was hard pressed for room at that. As his original capital he had $2000, two show windows and two eyes that saw every possible opening for business.

"If you interest the child, you will soon get the father and the mother," was the motto he followed. Therefore, with his newspaper advertising, his windows and his novelties, Breniser used to picture shows and their advertising slides, billboards and an extensive mailing list which he obtained through making deliveries.

Postcards mailed to children seldom failed to bring repeat orders and every now and then Breniser would mail out hundreds of invitations to holiday openings, distributing souvenirs to the children. In the last place—likewise in the first — Breniser kept track of the proper way of figuring profits and the exact amount of his turnover, so that he would not only know that the business was going well, but how it was going.

When it is remembered that Reading has only about 110,000 people, it will be seen that Breniser sold more than seventy toys to every person in Reading in the six years of his business, or an average of twelve a year per person.

He never let an ad go stale and no novelty space, movies or other mediums was neglected by this enterprising chaser after buyers. His retirement has left a gap in the toy trade of Reading, but his success has firmly impressed upon the merchants of that city the value of consistent advertising.

Price-Tagged His Store Into Profits

Hugh McWilliams's success dates from the night he slipped outside his store and overheard the remarks of two men who stopped to look in the window—and passed on.

It was all a question of the little price tags which were not there.

When he had moved his stock of clothing, trunks and gents' furnishing goods to the new location in Miami, Okla., he had high hopes, for there was room and to spare for another such establishment. He was a [illegible] and he employed competent clerks. He brought with him the name of "a good man to deal with."

And this proved true enough with those permanently located there and those who happened to come from his former location, but as in all mining cities, people "came and went." In a locality of strangers 'Mac" failed to do as well as he had a right to expect.

One evening, after closing hours he happened to be standing in front of his store when two men stopped for a moment to admire the really splendid values they displayed.

"Good stuff, that," said one. "Just look at that brown suit, that shirt, that pair of shoes and that tie" (pointing at each in turn). "Wouldn't that make a swell outfit?

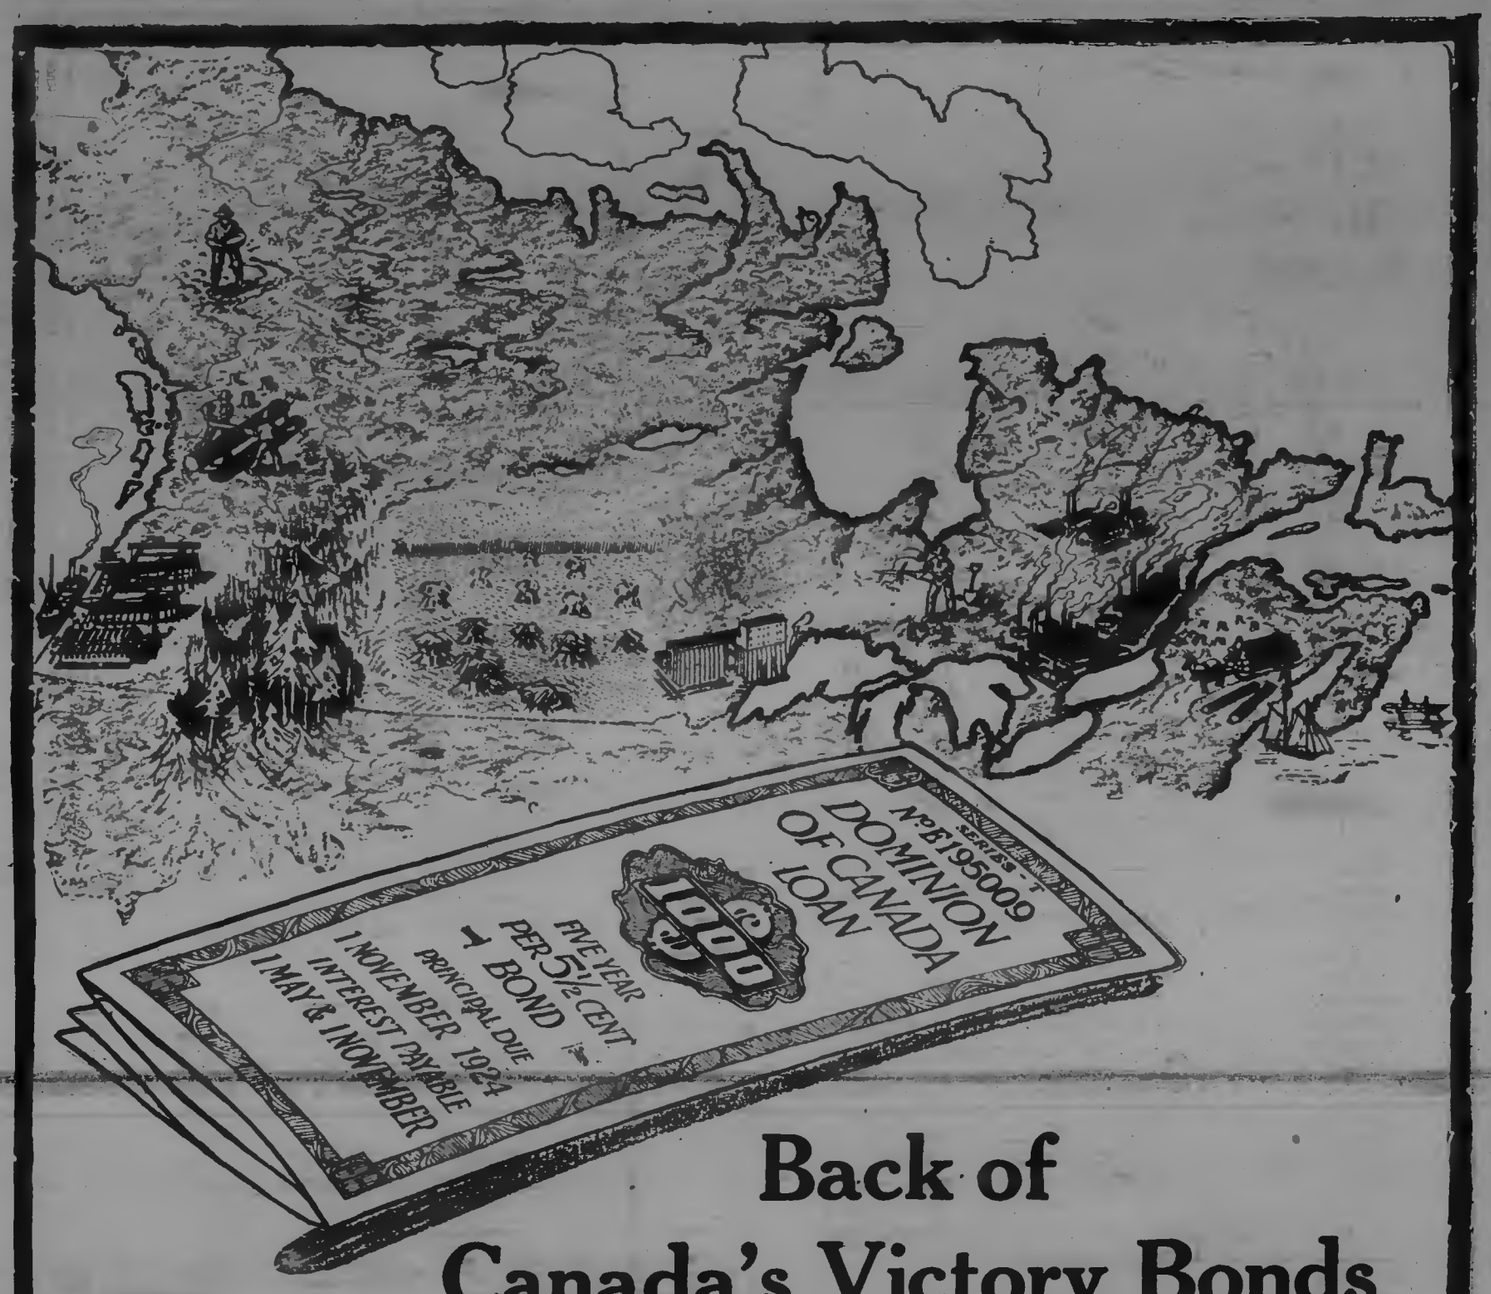
"It sure would," answered his friend, "but he's got no mark on them to show what they are priced at. They probably cost more than we could pay."

He had solved the problem. People wished to see the price of an article that struck their fancy, and not be compelled to ask for it. Yes, he had a good stock, splendid value, attractive displays, but they were not "marked."

That was all very well for his old home town, where every one knew him and his reputation for square dealing, but it wouldn't work in this "city of strangers."

McWilliams now has not only his window display plainly priced, but each and every article in the store, no matter how insignificant. All who enter may read.

The first month after "decorating" his stock with price tags his trade increased fully 20 per cent. And since, in six months, it has doubled.



Back of Canada's Victory Bonds

WHEN you loan money you make sure the borrower is able to repay the loan and that he will pay you the interest regularly as it falls due.

When you loan money to Canada you know your money is absolutely safe.

Back of Canada's Victory Bonds is the entire wealth that Canada possesses—all her industries and all her resources in minerals, fisheries, forests and lands.

Canada has one-third of the area of the whole British Empire; she is larger than thirty United Kingdoms; twice the size of India; eighteen times as large as France. She is practically as large as all of the European countries put together.

Canada is larger than the United States including Alaska (Canada, 3,729,665 square miles; United States and Alaska, 3,617,673 square miles).

Canada has over 440,000,000 acres of farm lands—and only one-eighth of it is yet under cultivation.

Canada has the most extensive and best stocked fisheries in the world—232,000 square miles of fishing waters.

Canada has over 225,000,000 acres of commercial timber—she is the great forest resource of the Empire.

Canada's field crops have doubled in five years—from $552,771,500 to $1,367,909,970.

Canada's people have increased their cash balances in Banks and Post Offices nearly seventy per cent. in five years—from $1,086,013,704 to $1,740,462,509.

Canada's trade has more than doubled in five years—from $1,085,175,572 to $2,564,462,215. Canada emerges from the war one of the world's greatest and strongest nations—her natural wealth equals $2,000 for each man, woman and child of her population.

Canada's Victory Bonds are the finest possible investment where safety is the chief consideration.

Moreover, when you loan your money to Canada you know that the interest will be paid every six months—all you have to do is to go to the nearest Bank and get it.

Canadians will soon be given another opportunity to buy Victory Bonds.

This will probably be the last time you will be able to purchase Canada's bonds on such favorable terms.

Prepare to buy—All Canada is Your Security.

The Navy League of Canada
Its Vital Work for Canada

THE Navy League of Canada fosters the splendid spirit that made the British the greatest of maritime nations. It organizes loyal Canadians so that practical work may be accomplished for the development of Canada's direct interests at sea.

The human side of Canada's Mercantile Marine is the League's especial interest—training Canadian boys to become the sturdy type of British manhood that won its laurels again and again in the great war—relieving distress among victims of the submarine warfare—and giving the sailor ashore an alternative place for rest and recreation to the places of doubtful entertainment that abound in port.

Why the $500,000 is needed

On Nelson Day, October 21st, starts a 3-day campaign throughout the Dominion to raise $500,000 necessary to finance the coming year's work of the Navy League of Canada. Help the work by giving liberally. As a nation whose expanding trade will depend on exports, we must educate our boys to the highest type of seamanship so that they will be equipped to man our ships to carry our exports to foreign markets.

You will do your part in this work by contributing liberally to the support of the Boy's Navy Brigades, the organizations by which the Navy League trains boys for our merchant marine.

Every dollar subscribed will be used to further the work of the Navy League in Canada—the work in which you are personally interested as a patriotic citizen. Help by giving.

AUSTRALIAN BOXING FANS ARE STILL MOURNING LOSS OF LATE LES DARCY

Les Was Clever and Tough, Greatest Ring Sport Since Days of Bob Fitzsimmons

Honolulu, H. I.—It will be a long time before Australians get through discussing the merits of the late Les Darcy, who had such an unfortunate ending in the United States in 1917.

James Gant, an Australian sporting man and boxing enthusiast, has had a great deal of experience in the States as regards boxing and was well acquainted with Darcy. Gant has seen all the great boxers of the last twenty years, and he is not backwards in picking Les as the greatest middle weight since the days of Bob Fitzsimmons.

"During the last ten years I have seen all of the stars, both in the States and Australia," Gant wrote me recently, "and it is my honest belief that Darcy was the best of all. He may not have been as great as Fitzsimmons, as the latter proved himself wonderful in the three classes—the middle, light heavy and heavy. Bob was a freak in build and a remarkable hitter.

Darcy Clever and Tough.

"To my mind Darcy was the greatest combination of all others. He was a wonderful fighter with remarkable endurance and a splendid boxer as well. It required more than the ordinary ability to beat men like Jimmy Clabby, Jeff Smith, Eddie McGoorty, Billy Murray, Buck Crouse, George Brown, Mick King and many others. Les fought all of them and never worked out of the ordinary for any of them. I have watched Mike Gibbons and Mike O' Dowd fight, and have never felt any doubt but that Darcy would have beaten either one. I have always admired Gibbons for his cleverness, but when it came to fighting I could not see him having a chance to defeat the late Australian middle weight.

O'Dowd is a fighter of the Darcy type, but he lacks the boxing ability of Les, and I doubt if he has the same endurance. I always regretted that Gibbons and Darcy did not meet, for it would have settled a much mooted question. I think if the question was put to Jimmy Clabby he would give the same answer, and there are few better qualified to give an opinion on that score than Clabby, whom we all admire and respect. Jimmy would have been just as wonderful as Kid McCoy and Tommy Ryan had he taken care of himself, but he did not and suffered for it."

Pick Leaders in Pugilism.

One of the objects of the proposed new national organization of the navy, army and civilian boards of control for boxing is to establish a standard set of weights and also to select a set of runners-up in the various classes, so that in the event of any title holder refusing to defend his championship when called on to do so the next in line will be called on to enter into competition for the championship. Those at the head of the proposed new league have been after a list of the best men in the different classes, and the following are those considered as having the best chance:

champion, New Orleans; Pal Moore, City, N.J.; Joe Lynch, New York; Joe Burman, Chicago; Jack Sharkey, New York; Kid Wolfe, Cleveland; Young Dundee, Baltimore.

Feather weight—Johnny Kilbane, Cleveland; Benny Valgar, New York, contender, Mike Dundee, Rock Island, Ill.; Elmer Duane, Buffalo; few boys of Kilbane class.

Welter weight—Jack Britton, champion, New York; Ted Lewis, New York; Jock Malone, St. Paul; Bryan Downey, Columbus; Denny O'Keefe, Chicago; Johnny Griffiths, Akron, O.; Billy Ryan, Cincinnati; Soldier Bartfield, Brooklyn.

SENSATION AT RUNNING EVENT

OUTSIDER WON CESAROVITCH STAKES — ODDS WERE TWENTY TO ONE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Newmarket, England, Oct. 15.—The running of the Cesarovitch Stakes here today finished a sensation, when an outsider, Ivansse owned by J. White, against whom the odds were twenty to one, took the event. Golden Melody, owned by V. Stewart, was second, and Bridgend, owned by W. Griggs, was third. Nineteen horses ran.

WHO LOST THE LEG?

A Laborman speaking in a town in the northern part of Ontario, on the value of the Workmen's Compensation Act, for which, he said, they had to thank the Hearst Government, in an amusing story, contrasted present conditions with conditions which had prevailed before the Act was passed.

"In our town" said the speaker, "an Irishman lost his leg in his work. He brought action for $500 against the firm for which he was working and his lawyer won the verdict for him. Then the Irishman and the lawyer sat down at a table to divide the the money.

"There's a hundred for you Pat, and the expenses amount to the other four hundred" said the lawyer pocketing his self appointed fee.

Pat pushed back his chair, and looked inquiringly under the table.

"What are you looking for Pat?" asked the lawyer.

"I was just lookin' to see which of us it was lote the leg," said Pat.

Such injustice, funny in the telling but cruel in its application, is now done away with, the Labor man pointed out, for the Workmen's Compensation Act passed by the Ontario Government protects the laboring men and women of the province.

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, Oct. 15.—Monday, being Thanksgiving Day, was duly observed as a general holiday, all places of business being closed and the citizens celebrating in various ways.

The schools were closed for the week-end to give the teachers an opportunity to attend the convention at Colborne.

A number of our people attended Roseneath Fair on Friday and report a very large attendance and a good exhibit.

Rev. Mr. Wesley of Peterborough spent Sunday in town in the interest of the temperance cause and the referendum. The reverend gentleman occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church in the morning and in the evening addressed a mass meeting in the town hall, where he was listened to with great pleasure and profit. Music was furnished by Miss Berry in a vocal solo, and Miss L. Tate and Mr. L. T. Huycke in a duet. The evening closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Sherwin have moved to town, having purchased the Coughlan building recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Ghent.

Mr. and Mrs. Ghent and family have moved their household effects to Castleton, where they purpose residing.

Miss Ella Tate has accepted a position with the Cressman Company of Peterborough and has left to assume her new duties. Miss Tate has been in the employ of Mr. James McCarthy, dry goods merchant here, for some time, and has proved herself very agreeable and successful as a saleslady, and the citizens in general regret very much her decision to leave, and will follow her with best wishes for a successful business career.

The many friends of Mr. Joe Lonergan of Peterborough, late of Hastings, regret very much to learn that he has had to undergo a serious operation, his attending physician finding it necessary to amputate one of his limbs. His many friends in Hastings wish for him a safe and speedy recovery.

Miss Margaret Bailey of Hamilton is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs A. V. Bailey.

Mr. Cecil Doxsee of Hillsburg was a holiday guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Doxsee.

Rev. Mr. Ferrill of Norwood was in town on Saturday en route for Wooler to take the anniversary services there on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Prest and family of Peterborough spent the week-end with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Prest.

Mr. Solomon Scriver of Peterborough was in town for the holiday.

Mr. Wilford Knight, of Cobalt spent the week-end with his parents Mr. and Mrs. A. Knight.

Miss A. Hermiston has returned from a pleasant visit with friends at Warkworth.

Miss Wilkinson of Norwood spent the week-end in town the guest of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Doxsee.

Mrs. Adams and daughter of Michigan are guests of Mr. and Mrs. N. Russaw.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell and family of Oak Hills spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Prentice spent the holiday with Foxboro friends.

Mrs. H. Collins has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. Mitchell, of Oak Hills.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Armstrong of Toronto are visiting friends in town.

Mr. Gould of Colborne is the guest of his son, Mr. W. Gould, town.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Lamey of Western Canada are visiting friends in and around Hastings.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burridge of Peterborough spent the week-end at the home of the latter parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Hatherill.

Dr. Johnston of Port Hope spent Sunday in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Stillman Terrill of Wooler were in town Tuesday.

Mr. [illegible] of Kingston is renewing [illegible] here.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher of Toronto have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. John Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Tate spent Monday in town.

Mr. and Mrs. V. German motored to Peterborough on Monday.

Backache only a Symptom

"It Seems as Though my Back Would Break."

This is a common expression among women, yet they toil on day after day heedless of the significance of this distressing symptom.

Backache is often a warning of some inward trouble that requires attention, and which unless relieved will sooner or later declare itself in more serious ailments.

If it is caused by female derangement Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is what you need. It quickly asserts its curative powers in all those peculiar ailments of women.

For more than thirty years this good old fashioned root and herb medicine has been restoring women to health.

The Splendid Recovery of Mrs. Fleet

Brantford, Ont.—"I have been a user of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and find there is nothing better for female troubles. I was taken sick with sharp pains in my right side and up over the hip to the back and the doctor said I would have to be operated on. I was in the hospital three weeks and did not get any better so I went home and took the Vegetable Compound. I stayed in bed three weeks more, then I was able to get up. Have [illegible] all right and I have recommended your medicine to several friends and my daughter is taking it and all are pleased with the results from its use."

MRS. FRANK FLEET,
Brantford, Ontario.

Mrs. Hunt tells how it helped her

Detroit, Mich.—"I was in a general run-down condition, was very nervous and tired, had backache and other troubles. I suffered for several years, was not able to work at times and tried doctor's medicine with no results. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, and after taking it a short time I was much better. I am still taking it myself and giving it to my daughter, and am glad to recommend Vegetable Compound at anytime."—Mrs. M. E. Hunt, 171 Davison Ave.

ALFRED WILSON KILLED AS RESULT OF PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Lnidsay, Oct. 15. — A distressing fatality occurred on Thanksgiving afternoon, when Alfred Wilson, Bond Street, met his death.

In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Wilson drove out to the ranch of Mr. Horatio Moore, at the foot of the Fenelon Hill, to get a horse belonging to the deceased. After a lively chase they succeeded in corralling the animal in the stable yard. To prevent his escape, Mr. Wilson picked up a fence rail braced one end of it on the fence, and held the other in his hands. The horse charged the opening and struck the rail, the free end striking Mr. Wilson with terrific force, breaking his neck and instantly killing him. Dr. Rich, of town, was summoned, but on his arrival found the unfortunate man beyond human aid.

The deceased conducted a barber shop in McGregor's tobacco store, and was highly esteemed by all who had met him. His parents, both of whom are still living, reside near Cambray. The sympathy of the community is extended to the sorrowing wife, and the two children, Evelyn and James, and other relatives.

The deceased was a member of the Cambridge street Methodist church, and belonged to L.O.L. No. 32. The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon and will be under Orange auspices.

TORONTO WOMAN PRAISES TANLAC

Mrs. Emma Benson Says Results She Has Derived Have Been Marvellous

"Tanlac certainly has proved to be one of the best friends I ever had," said Mrs. Emma Benson, of 683 Runnymede Road, West Toronto, Ontario.

"I had been in a badly run-down condition for a long time," she continued, "suffering from neuralgia and such terrible headaches, that I would have to go to bed and stay there for days at a time. My nerves were shattered and I would lie awake at night for hours before I could get to sleep, then often I would wake up feeling so weak and nervous that I would faint dead away. I was completely worn out and was simply miserable all the time.

"My husband had been relieved of stomach trouble by taking Tanlac, so I decided to try it myself, and now that terrible neuralgia is completely gone. I haven't had a headache since I started on Tanlac, my nerves are quiet and I sleep like a baby. That tired feeling has passed away and I am stronger and better in every way than I have been in a long time."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

INSPECTOR ARNOTT MAKES BIG HAUL

BELLEVILLE LISENCE INSPECTOR CAPTURES TWO TRUNKS OF WET STUFF.

The boldness and ingenuity of the importers of wet goods from Quebec was further emphasized the other morning by a find made by Inspector Richard Arnott, of Belleville, at Marysville. Express No. 19, due at Belleville at 2:10, stopped at Marysville, and the baggageman put off two heavy trunks. There were no checks on the trunks, and the baggageman refused to show the checks to the inspector. As to that, more will be heard later.

The inspector then examined the trunks and made the interesting discovery that they contained three dozen bottles of Hiram Walker's Special, one dozen bottles of Seagram's, and six one-gallon cans of alcohol. The trunks were placed in safe keeping, and some interesting developments are expected later.

An Irish lady well known to society contributed to the gaiety of nations the other evening by dashing into the nursery and reproving her eldest born in the manner following:

"I just wish your father was home ome evening tosee how you behave when he is out."

Wives Will Vote "No!"

Mothers of Ontario's Children Will Not Compromise With "Booze"

Do not spoil your ballot by marking it with anything but X —four times.

		YES	NO
1	Are you in favour of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?		X
2	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
3	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure in standard hotels in local municipalities that by a majority vote favour such sale and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
4	Are you in favour of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X

Simply put an X after each Question under the word "No"

BOOZE" is an ugly word in the ears of a woman. Millions of women have had all hope of happiness in this world blasted by "booze."

"Booze" has starved little children and clad them in rags.

"Booze" throughout history has made fiends out of men and rewarded the tender affection of women and children with curses and abuse.

Wife Murderers "Booze-Crazed"

"I have never known of a single case of wife murder that was not committed under the influence of drink," said the late Dr. J. T. Gilmour, Chief Warden of the old Central Prison, Toronto, and subsequently Superintendent of the Provincial Prison Farm at Guelph, a man of life-long experience with criminals.

Seventy-five per cent of the suicides have been set down to drink.

"Booze" shortens lives. Insurance experts calculate an average increase of 35 per cent. in the death rate for even moderate drinkers.

"Booze" Brings Poverty and Sickness

"Booze" decreases the household income, lessens the husband's earning power and kills his ambition to succeed.

"Booze" and degenerative disease go hand in hand. Fifty-four per cent. of the divorces in Germany, the great beer-drinking country, and 50,000 deaths a year are directly traceable to "Booze." No less than 50,000 cases of alcoholic insanity are admitted to German Asylums yearly. And yet drinking in the homes or in cafes and beer gardens as practised in Europe is held up as ideal for Ontario!

"Booze" Dooms Children to Insanity

Children of both alcoholic fathers and mothers are doomed to be mentally backward, feeble-minded, morally degenerate, epileptic or insane.

Alcoholism affects the child unborn, and alcoholic degeneracy may descend to the children of the third and fourth generation.

Beer drinking in the home makes the home a school for future drunkards.

Domestic beer drinking has made German women coarse and vulgar, German children feeble, and German men bloated and brutal.

Ontario Women Have Power to Vote

Once women of this Province suffered "booze" to wreck and destroy in silent sorrow or bitter pride. Today in Ontario they have a vote. On October 20 they can order that "the Menace of Booze shall be forever ended."

Old Country v. Willys-Overland.

Willys-Overland v. Davenports.

Toronto Scottish v. Ulster or Baracas.

A Crying Need.

"Er—er—some of the facetious gentlemen in the congregation," said the minister, as the deacons prepared to take up the collection, "have been in the habit of dropping trouser buttons into the plate. Might I suggest that, in view of a recent arrival at the vicarage, they substitute safety-pins for the time-being?"

S. J. Farmer has been selected as the Labor representative for Mayor of Winnipeg.

An Old Debt.

"It was terrible," cried the man who had been nearly drowned in the duckpond.

The crowd murmured sympathetically.

"I went down and down and down, and then came slowly up—once, twice, thrice. "He covered his face with his hands. "And all the time my past life was flashing before me in series of pictures."

"Not really?" exclaimed one of the crowd, bending forward eagerly. "I don't suppose you happened to notice a picture of me lending you that $10 in the spring of 1907, did you?"

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE WEST RIDING OF PETERBOROUGH

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having again received the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Convention of West Peterborough as a candidate for Parliamentary honors at the ensuing Provincial Election, to be held on October 20th, I desire to solicit your hearty support in favor of my election.

WAR WORK

Having represented you for the past five years (war years), I can safely say that during that period, while every effort was being made to win the war—my record is known to you all, and on that record I ask you to judge me on the position I have taken on all measures affecting the war work.

TEMPERANCE QUESTION

When I was elected in 1914 I stated my views on the Temperance question during that campaign; I pledged myself to vote for Temperance legislation on all occasions brought forward by whatever party, and the record in the House will show that I carried out that pledge.

The Referendum vote is to be taken on the same date as the Provincial election, October 20, and if I am again elected your representative I promise to give my whole-hearted support to the Government elected to carry out the will of the people as expressed by their votes on the Referendum ballot.

AGRICULTURAL LEGISLATION.

During the years preceding 1914 every one agreed that the Department of Agriculture was asleep. The very first opportunity offered in the House I introduced the question of a forward movement in Agriculture, and, along with other Liberal members of the House, have earnestly advocated a more strenuous progressive policy in Agriculture.

The shortage of production, the problem of farm help, and the numerous perplexing questions affecting the farmer, cannot be solved unless we seriously consider the cause and apply the remedy.

During the past few years of unrest in the country, due mainly to excessive living costs, I have advocated that demonstration farms be established in different counties, and increased attention be paid to the education to be received in our Agricultural College and Experimental Farms, and that the knowledge gained at the Agricultural College be put into practice on Demonstration Farms, where a profit and loss account could be kept, and the costs of producing 100 pounds of milk or a pound of pork, or any of the many products of the farm, could be ascertained and established, such information being sadly lacking today. By such a system of education the farm would be looked upon as a business manufacturing plant, that would attract the best brains to the development of the greatest asset in Canada today—the farm. Our production is unlimited. The markets of the world are calling for food, and our own citizens living from hand to mouth at tremendous prices, wondering what the next six months have in store for them.

PROVINCIAL HIGHWAYS

Our highways need much repair. Auto and truck traffic is becoming daily increased, and we must develop a road policy which will make for hauling our produce to market as cheaply as possible. To this matter I promise to give my best thought.

EDUCATION

Education, I am pleased to say, is in the hands of a new Minister, in whom we hope for great things. I believe in a separate education for the city and rural districts. An education in the rural districts to educate the boy and girl in the great lessons of Agriculture, making two blades of grass grow where one grew before, developing the average cow of Ontario today, which gives 5,000 pounds of milk in a milking period of 10,000 pounds, producing a pound of pork or beef at a lower cost, and giving to the world the blessing which we most need—a reduction in the high cost of living.

THE LABOR QUESTION

Regarding the important question of Labor, my own policy has been to treat Labor as I would wish to be treated myself. I have had a good deal of experience with labor of various kinds and conditions, and have never had any trouble along that line, and do not expect to have any.

OUR RETURNED HEROES

To me, the welfare of the returned soldiers and soldiers' wives is one of the most essential duties of our country. Therefore I promise that I will give my hearty support to every movement calculated to promote their very best interests. The soldiers who fought for me for five years deserve, and may expect to receive, my earnest consideration during the remaining years of my life.

THE WOMAN VOTE

I am delighted to know that the women are to enjoy equal privileges with men in the use of the franchise at this election, and in the exercise of this privilege I have the greatest faith in their good judgment and purifying influence. Their power with the ballot on October 20, especially with the Prohibition and Labor problems, will, I feel certain, be of far-reaching effect. I will, therefore, consider the votes of the ladies counted in my favor at the approaching election to be instruction to take high grounds on all matters calculated to elevate the morals of this community as well as of the whole Dominion.

CONCLUSION

These questions I have dealt with are, to my mind, the outstanding questions of the day. If I am elected again as your representative, I promise to give the best of my ability, my mature judgment on all questions affecting the interests of the West Riding of Peterborough, the Province of Ontario, the Dominion of Canada, and the British Empire, of which we today are so justly proud.

Thanking you, ladies and gentlemen, for your support in the past, and soliciting your support again on the 20th day of October, I remain,

Your obedient servant.

GEO. A. GILLESPIE.

HELPLESS WITH RHEUMATISM

Until He Took "Fruit-a-tives" The Fruit Medicine

R. R. No. 1, Lorne, Ont.

"For over three years, I was confined to bed with Rheumatism. I treated with doctors, and tried nearly everything without benefit. Finally, I tried "Fruit-a-tives". Before I had used half a box I saw improvement; the pain was easier and the swelling started to go down. I continued taking this fruit medicine, improving all the time, and now I can walk about two miles and do light chores about the place".

Faithful London Bobby

To Receive Higher Pay, And He Earns His Wages

THE British "Bobby" has received a raise of $10 a week over his pre-war pay. The demands of the men who preserve law and order were admitted at the time to be just, and the only point of difference that the committee failed to settle satisfactorily to the police is the question of union recognition. This possibly may be overcome by a Government committee that will deal with all claims or grievances, on which the men will have representation.

The new pay scale, which starts at $17.50 a week for junior men, represents an increase of more than $10, compared with pre-war wages. For this small remuneration the policeman was supposed to be infallible, and any slight lapse met with sharp punishment. He was appointed only after he had passed examinations that would puzzle many a university graduate. In London the policeman is expected to be a directory and more or less an encyclopedia of information. His training lasts six months, during which he attends an instruction class and learns all the beats of the division.

At school he is taught, among other things, to be a sound lawyer, a bit of a medical man, a statesman and a diplomat, a keen observer and a cool, impartial witness, a boxer and a strategist, a fluent reader, a guide to London, a peacemaker, at times a linguist, and always to turn out smartly, clean and a credit to the force.

On the streets he must be ready always to apply his knowledge accurately to the needs of the moment. He must be able to decide offhand for what offences he may make an arrest and those that have to be dealt with only by summons. Everything he does is the subject of a written report, even little things like a ride on a public vehicle while on duty have to be reported. If he spends only two cents in carfare, before he can collect this sum he must report the number of the ticket.

If he should make a mistake regarding the licence number of an offending driver and summons the wrong man, he has to pay the cost of the summons and the expenses of the victim of his mistake.

In spite of the low pay and the [illegible] policeman is certainly an advantage to the city. Every citizen uses him as a directory. He is "cadi" to the rougher elements, almoner to the poor, but a terror to the cadger and friend to the children and old people. As a missionary he has saved hundreds of youngsters from getting before the children's court and thousands of older citizens from their folly, and all for a wage that up to now has been very little above that of an unskilled laborer.

Golf of Lowly Origin.

If tennis has a royal lineage, golf, which was later regarded as a rich man's game, had most plebian beginnings, writes J. R. Hildebrand, in the National Geographic Magazine. Contrary to a widespread belief, it seems not to have originated in Scotland, but in northern Europe. Apparently it was first played on ice, being one of the winter sports adapted to the physical geography of the Low Countries. Even in the north, though, it evolved to a terra firm stage, as indicated by a sketch in a book illuminated at Bruges, which shows three players, each with a ball and one club, playing on turf.

By the fifteen century golf had attained such vogue in Scotland that it threatened the cherished archery, and it is classed with "futeball" and other "unprofitable sportis" by James IV. That monarch, however, seems to have disregarded his own edict, as did enough other Scotchmen to keep the game alive.

Like tennis, golf was played by both sexes. Critics of Mary Stuart cited in evidence that her husband's fate weighed so lightly upon her heart that she was seen playing the game in the fields near Seton.

To the Romans also is ascribed a game that suggests modern golf. It was played with a feather stuffed ball and called "paganica," because the common people played it — another evidence of the game's lowly origin.

High for Old Pictures.

Among the most valuable books in existence are a copy of the Mazarin Bible, printed on paper, and sold for $15,400; the same book, printed on vellum which brought $17,000; Boece, Croniklis, Edinburgh, printed on vellum for James V. which changed hands for $19,500; and the famous Psalterium, Fus and Schoeffer, which produced as much as $24,750 when Bernard Quarich purchased it.

But these sums fade into nothingness beside the prices paid for old pictures. Franz Hals' "Old Lady" was purchased a few years ago for $137,000. The top prices for a Rembrandt is $206,850; for a Holbein, $360,000; for a Velasquez, $460,000; and for a Rembrandt, $500,000.

Worth more than any of these is Raphael's "Panshanger Madonna," sold to an American in 1914 for $700,000.

London Bridge.

The new London bridge was opened on August 1, 1831. This replaced the celebrated old bridge, built more than eight centuries before. It had 15 solid stone piers, with bulky stone arches and was covered from end to end with buildings. On the "Traitor's Gate," at one end, the heads of traitors were shown. It was removed on account of its obstruction to navigation.

Silky Wool From Australia

No other material was ever used in these famous stockings for children.

There have been times when the Australian supply was light. Then, we were unable to produce enough Little Darling and Little Daisy Hosiery to go 'round. For we would not substitute other wool.

We thought it better not to vary the quality of Little Darling and Little Daisy Hosiery.

Mothers, we know, expect in these stockings the finest, softest and best knitted wool yarn. They expect unusual wear. It means much to them to clothe their children in such comfortable, healthful—and, at the same time, such economical—material.

LITTLE DARLING HOSIERY—for babies and tiny tots up to seven—has silken toe and heel.

LITTLE DAISY HOSIERY—for children up to twelve—has extra strength in heel and toe.

Many dainty shades and black.

HOW A MUSIC MEMORY CONTEST WAS USED IN NEW YORK PUBLIC SCHOOLS

There is a growing feeling in Canada that, while few school children can, even with a good course in music, become real musicians, fully ninety-nine per cent. of them can come to appreciate music in a way that is indispensable to a good general education and to real living. With this in mind it is interesting to read of how they are meeting the situation in the New York schools. Mr. Geo. H. Gartlan, Director of Music in that city's public schools, himself outlines their plan of procedure

"If we are to teach appreciation of music in the elementary grades the question naturally presents itself as to how far it is safe for us to go in taxing the mental capacity of children," Mr. Gartlan says. "To teach them to recognize and name the compositions of the great masters is a simple and worthy deed. When and how shall it be done? The class room period does not always readily lend itself to this type of instruction in music throughout the country is approximately sixty minutes per week. If we are to teach reading of music, naturally very little time is left for the teaching of musical appreciation. So we turn to the assembly period as the proper time for this instruction. Under the direction of a teacher properly trained the assembly period can be used to greater advantage than one might suspect. For example, in place of the old type of formality, including the perfunctory singing of songs (mostly in unison) and the usual stereotyped recitations this time could be better employed by making it possible for children to be informed concerning the lives of the great composers and to hear a performance of their works by means of the phonograph player piano, or, better still, by the first hand rendition of artists.

"Convinced that the teaching of musical appreciation was a necessity, and confronted with the fact that the course of study in music did not provide sufficient time for the teaching of musical appreciation "per se," it became necessary for us to use a small portion of our assembly period time for this teaching, and to supplement this work by intensive application after school hours. The work was done by the class teacher, in the school building, under the immediate direction of the special teachers of music assigned to each school district. The committee in charge selected eighty compositions, including standard songs and choruses, instrumental works of the great masters, and selections from opera, oratorio and symphony. During the daily lessons a complete composition would be played for the children, then the leading motives would be analyzed and explained, and after these had been studied, the entire composition would again be played. In this manner it forcibly impressed itself on the musical memory of the child.

"This method of instruction was carried on for a period of three months. Approximately 250,000 children in the seventh and eighth grades of our elementary schools enrolled for this instruction. Upon investigation it was discovered that very little music of any kind was provided for in the home of these children, but the enthusiasm . . . with which they responded impressed the educational authorities with the sincerity of the great value of this purpose.

"During the early state of this instruction the music was presented either through personal performance on the piano, the player piano or the phonograph. Gradually we were able to enlist the services of local artists who volunteered to come into our school buildings and perform for the children. This was a very valuable means of bringing school work into closer association with outside musical activities."

Plumb Plan and the Author

GLENN E. PLUMB has become famous in a fortnight. A little while ago his name was practically unknown outside of railway circles. It is now familiar throughout the United States and Canada, and no doubt has been heard by millions in other countries. Mr. Plumb leaped to sudden distinction when the railroad brotherhoods of the United States declared that they wanted the United States to extinguish private ownership in the railroads of the country and operate them in accordance with the "Plumb plan." Then everybody began to ask what was the Plumb plan, and who was Plumb. In brief, the Plumb plan is a plan whereby the Government takes over all the railroads of the country, guaranteeing the private owners a certain percentage of interest upon their investments, and then turns their operation over to a board composed in equal numbers of Government representatives, representatives of the management or high officers, and representatives of the drivers, firemen, conductors, and so forth. The profits are to be divided equally among them — please don't laugh—and the deficits are to be the exclusive affair of the public. Under this plan it is claimed that the roads will be more economically operated than at present, the men will be able to get all the wages they want, and the public will get cheaper transportation.

It's a great plan, and seems to put Mr. Plumb up in a class with Bela Kun. It is not, as might be supposed, the scheme drawn up in half an hour by a demagogue whose only acquaintance with railroads was formed from the brake beams. It is the carefully-thought-out solution of the railroad problem of a man who has had wide and specialized railroad experience, who has been a corporation lawyer, a railroad receiver, and finally the general counsel of the Organized Railroad Employes of America. He was born in Iowa in 1866, but spent his boyhood in Illinois and graduated from Oberlin College, receiving the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Later he spent one year at Harvard, but decided to complete his legal education in the West, and graduated from the Northwestern University. He then entered a law office in Chicago, his firm representing [illegible] Paul Railroad. In the five years he remained he learned the rudiments of railroad law. This enabled him in 1900 to secure a retainer as attorney for the General Railways Company of Chicago, and while holding this position he is said to have matched his wits time and again with Charles T. Yerkes, owner of the other traction properties in Chicago, and one of the keenest railway men of his day.

For three years he was attorney for the receiver of the General Railways, manager of the road and receiver, being in complete charge when the road was reorganized and handed over to the consolidated traction enterprises that took charge of all the city's traction properties. In 1905, when Mayor Dunne, of Chicago, made his effort to straighten out the city's traction difficulties, he retained Plumb as special counsel for the city. It was in this period, it is said, that he began developing the ideas that have now appeared before the world as the Plumb plan. For a short time afterwards he was president of the Calumet & South Chicago Railroad, a street railway with some two hundred miles of track, and when this road was absorbed by the Chicago City Railway Co., Mr. Plumb went back to the practice of law.

It was his theory of railway valuations that attracted the attention of the brotherhoods, and in 1917 Mr. Plumb was retained to represent the railway brotherhoods before the Inter-State Commerce Board. This spring he became counsel for the ten other railroad labor organizations and therefore is entitled to speak for all American railroad organizations, just as Mr. Gompers is entitled to speak for the American Federation of Labor. In May, Mr. Plumb went to Washington to direct his propaganda and educate the public as to what the railroad employes want. He established a weekly paper and gathered round him some clever writers and cartoonists, all of them having a marked radical, not to say Bolshevist, slant. He now is at the head of a powerful organization which in a single fortnight prepared and despatched 1,500,000 pamphlets setting forth the Plumb plan. There must be plenty of money behind him, and Mr. Plumb says that in a year — will have cash contributions amounting to one million dollars.

Recently Mr. Plumb appeared before a Congressional committee and explained his plan. In the course of this examination he asserted that he had never read a book on Socialism, and did not know what a Soviet was. To which it might be retorted that he was quite capable of writing a book on railway socialism, and that what his plan proposes is the Soviet government of the railroads. It has been pointed out that his propagandists are writers noted for their radicalism, and that none of them has ever had any connection with railroad affairs. His own knowledge of railroad matters is not to be questioned, but all this knowledge appears to have been left to one side when he made the suggestion that there were likely to be profits under such administration as he proposes. On the other hand, he can point to the wrecking of railroads under private operation and Wall Street manipulation. If the American Federation of Labor supports the demand of the railroad brotherhoods for the Plumb plan, the author thereof may take his place as one of the momentous figures in American history.

Cuckoo Brings Good Luck.

There is an old superstition prevalent in many parts of England that, if you turn the money you have in your pocket when first you hear the cuckoo in the spring, you will not suffer from lack of cash all through the year.

Bad Business.

Said the facetious philosopher: "Putting something away for a rainy day is excellent business policy, but what gets a lot of fellows in the toils of the law is putting it away for a dry one."

Protection.

Two patrolmen were sitting in front of the steam heating plant in the basement of an apartment house. Suddenly the door opened and the sergeant stalked in.

"I suppose this means we're going to be busted," said one of the cops.

"Not necessarily," said the cold sergeant coldly. "You stay right here and watch the janitor and see that he keeps the boiler sizzling. If you fail I'll prefer charges against you. I happen to live in this house, and I'm going up to bed."—New York Press.

Warning Sign.

Mr. McCann went to have his photograph taken and took on a very crouchy expression.

"Try and look pleasant, please," said the photographer.

"Got on your life," answered McCann. "Me for the sullen ferocity thing. This is for the wife's mother, who wants to come and stay a month with us."—New York Post.

But He Didn't Come Again.

The appetite of the guest was a keen one, and he was doing full justice to the excellent dinner provided by his host. The little daughter of the house watched him open mouthed for awhile. Then, finally, she smiled on him brightly and said:

"Oh, I do wish you were here to dinner every day."

The guest beamed with satisfaction. "Do you, my dear? Why?" he inquired.

"Because," came the unexpected reply, "there won't be anything cold to eat tomorrow."—Pittsburgh Press.

Real Pioneer.

One of the first white men and in all probability the first British subject to make his abode in territory comprised within the boundaries of the province of New Brunswick, Canada, was John Gyles, who was carried from the southern British colonies to the wilderness of the valley of the St. John river by marauding bands of Indians.

To Friends Like Old Friends.

Esteem of great powers, or available qualities newly discovered, may embroider a day or week, but a friendship of twenty years is interwoven with the texture of life. A friend may be found and lost, but an old friend can never be found, and nature has provided that he cannot easily be lost.—Samuel Johnson.

The Cerccay Papers.

In the Treaty of Peace occurs a mysterious allusion to some papers: the Cerccay papers. The clause stipulates that Germany shall return to France all the political papers seized by the German authorities on October 10, 1870, at the country house of Cerccay, then the property of M. Rouher, sometime Cabinet Minister. Not much attention appears to have been paid to the clause in the press of the world, but a London paper, the Sunday Times, has now broken the silence. It tells a remarkable story. When, on October 10, 1870, the seventeenth Mecklenburg division arrived at Cerccay, the soldiers proceeded, in the approved German way, to turn Rouher's house upside down. In the process they came upon some papers which they would have scattered and destroyed if it had not been for a German officer who, guessed their existence and was ordered to send them to Versailles, where Bismarck then was. The Chancellor examined the papers himself, would let no one else see them, and ultimately stowed them away in the state archives where no one, not even Treitschke, has ever set eyes on them. Bismarck had discovered that the fortune of war had put in his possession a correspondence which gave him the complete mastery over his enemies, the recalcitrant states of southern Germany. The nature of the correspondence can be gathered from contemporary history; it was also pretty clearly divulged in a letter published in the Kolnische Zeitung. The writer, "M. von D." Dalwigk, Minister of the Grand Duchy of Hesse, wrote: "Though Germany does not actually desire a French invasion, the French if they did come, would be received with open arms." With such letters in his possession Bismarck held the cards. "I cannot help thinking," says a German historian, Ruville, "that we have there the key to the foundation of the German Empire." A French paper, Le Peuple Francais, grows so to have been inspired by Rouher, declared in so many words that "the confidential correspondence exchanged in 1865 and 1866 between the French Government and the Ministers of Bavaria and Wurtemberg had also been left at Cerccay, and are in Prince Bismarck's hands."

Tropical Repartee.

The native West Indian is the greatest controversialist of the tropic world, according to George O. Miller, author of "Prowling About Panama." He illustrates: "A young West Indian woman on the train in Costa Rica left her seat to speak to a friend and another girl slipped in next to the window. When the visitor returned, claims, charges, and counter charges began as to the ownership of the seat. With indescribable acorn the usurper said, 'Do you want a seat in my lap?' which provoked, 'Ah, now I see how you was raised!' Indeed, and you have no manners at all.' Back and forth the duel rages until the first claimant finds another seat, saying, 'I certainly does respect myself too highly to sit by the likes of you.' All this with the wholly inimitable British-Jamaican accent."

Keeping Groll Off the Grass

A Job Neatly and Effectually Performed.

By HENRY BERLINGOFF.

Stub Reilley was willing to admit that the "old man" was a more important figure in the office than George Fielding, but the rack itself could not wring from him an admission that any one else loomed as large, least of all Douglas Groll, the junior partner.

Groll had incurred Stub's enmity the first day the boy had come into the office, and since then he had done nothing to cause a reversal of Stub's opinion.

Fielding was a wholesome sort of chap whose very capacity for making friends had won for him a place of authority in the office of Sommers & Groll. Every one liked him. The loyal Stub worshiped him and would have gone to the end of the earth at his order.

Stub had even raised from the dead his mythical grandmother to bury her at a more auspicious moment because Fielding had hinted that there was a lot of work to be done even if the "champs" were playing a double header at the ball grounds. Greater tributs than this no small boy can pay.

Naturally when Gertrude Vance was looked upon with especial favor by Fielding she became the chief goddess in the office.

Mr. Sommers' sonorous call of "Patrick!" sometimes went unanswered, but the boy fairly jumped to Miss Vance's desk at the softest call of "Stub!" and would sharpen her pencil or bring her a fresh set of carbons before he answered the increasingly impatient call of the head of the firm.

And because Fielding cared for Gertrude it angered Stub to notice the familiarity with which the junior partner treated the little typewriter. Gertrude could not very well resent these trifling impertinences without losing her place, and she could not afford to do that when she and Fielding were saving up every penny against the time they should find some tiny suburban home suited to their modest income.

They were working hand in hand toward that end, and she could only pretend not to notice the hand that rested caressingly on her shoulder whenever Groll stopped at her desk to give an order or ask a question.

Stub instinctively sensed her embarrassment, and he gritted his teeth impotently whenever he saw Groll moving toward the typewriters' corner vowing with boyish intensity that he would get even.

He watched Groll with a quiet attention that permitted no more to escape and that resourceful business man would have been surprised had he realized how much Stub knew about his personal affairs.

Stub was ever alert to get hold of some bit of information that he could use as a club, but Groll grew more and more daring in his attention with the knowledge that the girl feared to speak to Fielding.

Groll always was particularly offensive when Fielding was at the bank. The firm had two branches uptown, and every morning the receipts from these branches were brought down by the trusted clerks and turned over to the cashier, who accepted the credit slips without question and passed the sealed package on to the bank with his own deposit by Fielding. The packages of bills were made into brick shaped forms and sealed at either end. The messengers were trusted employes, and the cashier had implicit confidence in their slightest inaccuracy.

Stub loved to watch the arrival of the packages. It was his ambition to be a messenger himself some day and carry a revolver under license from the police.

The bulges in the messengers' coat pockets filled him with envy, and he was saving his tips with the idea of purchasing a revolver of his own against that happy day when he should be intrusted with one of the leather satchels chained to the messengers' wrists.

Then came a day when Groll went into the senior partner's office, and soon he and Sommers went to the cashier's cage. Here the two, after a brief consultation with the latter, went toward Fielding's desk.

"I tell you that I saw him make the exchange," Groll was saying as they moved toward the closed desk. "I was in the cage for a moment and saw him bending over his desk."

"Did Mr. Fielding go to his desk after he left the cage?" asked Sommers of the cashier, and the latter nodded an unwilling assent.

"He had a bottle of medicine that he wanted to put there. He had a bad cold."

The cashier carried the bunch of keys that were duplicates of all the keys in the office, and they soon found the one that fitted Fielding's desk. As the roll top was raised to release the catch that held the drawers locked Stub could not refrain from drawing near. The trio did not notice his approach, so interested were they in the investigation.

With an exclamation that sounded very like a groan Sommers drew from the bottom drawer a package that was unmistakably the deposit from the north side branch, and with trembling hand he reached for the sharp envelope opener that lay upon the blotter.

"I've had my suspicions for some time," announced Groll jubilantly. "I happen to know that Fielding is planning to marry Miss Vance, and he has been speculating with what they call their building fund for some time. He planned this move to get back his losses and at the same time gain enough to buy a home. I have been watching him carefully, and today my suspicions were aroused."

"The money is not counted here in the office, and he planned to place the blame on the cashier or the messenger and go scot free."

Stub grinned at the jubilation of Groll's voice and stood on tiptoe the better to observe the proceedings. Sommers had slit the wrapper that the seals might be preserved intact for future reference, and all three men gave an exclamation of surprise when, instead of the bank notes, Sommers drew out sheets of crisp bond paper cut to greenback size.

"Nerve nothin'," interrupted Stub. "I was wise to your game. I had the switchboard when the girl was out to lunch, and I was rubberin' on the wire when you told Mr. Beekman to fix the package today like the one he gave you. You was trying to get Mr. Fielding out of the office so you could break off the engagement, and maybe Miss Vance would go to lunch when you asked her.

"Piggy Moran up to the branch goes to th' same clooch I go to. I got him th' job, an' he found out that there was a lot of cut paper in Mr. Beekman's wastebasket last night. I see you bring in the package this morning, an' I see you and Mr. Beekman in Brown's last night when he give it to you.

"I was wise. I swapped packages on you, an' it ain't your fault that Mr. Fieldin' ain't comin' back from the bank tellin' that the north side package was a fake. You didn't see me switch it. You didn't even know I was in th' cage. Ain't I a slick article, and that's how it is that you got back the same package you thought you was givin' Mr. Fieldin'. I'm there, too, when it comes to handlin' lemons."

"Telephone Mr. Beekman and your friend Moran to come down here at once," commanded Sommers. "Groll, you know best whether or not to make arrangements to sell out your interest in the business."

"You needn't send for Beekman," said Groll sullenly as he laid a heavy and detaining hand upon Stub's shoulder. "You can let Vanderson buy me out if you want to. This devilish kid is too smart for his own good. If you let a word out about this I'll kill you," he added as his nervous fingers tightened their grip on Stub's shoulder until the boy winced with pain.

"Forgit it," admonished Stub. "I put a 'keep off the grass' sign on Miss Vance, an' that's all I was after. I guess that goes."

At a sign from Sommers, Groll released the boy and followed his partner into the private office to arrange the details of the sale of his interest.

None of the others had noticed the little group, and as Stub hitched off to his desk he looked at the trim figure of Gertrude Vance seated at her machine.

"I wisht I was big enough to marry her meself," he mused, "but it's the next best thing to see her marry Mr. Fielding. Anyhow, I jest had to keep Mr. Groll offen the grass. He's too fresh that guy."

REPLY FROM MR. GILLESPIE

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—My attention has been drawn to some remarks made by Mr. Soden at a meeting in Bridgenorth held on the 11th inst., during which he accused me of "assisting to advance the high cost of living." In his effort to prove this statement he referred to the price of a case of 48 tins of condensed milk as sold by Armour & Co., of Hamilton, at 25 cents per case lower than our price to local grocers here. Let me put Mr. Soden right on this matter, so that if he is tempted to repeat it again he will be able to tell the electors the truth.

Armour & Co., of Hamilton, bought the condensed milk from us during the season of 1918, when milk and all that entered into the making of condensed milk was cheaper than it is to-day. Furthermore, let me assure Mr. Soden that not one case of condensed milk was sold to a grocer in Peterborough this year; but if we had sold the price would have been exactly the price quoted by Armour & Co., of Hamilton.

Discussing the local milk question, Mr. Soden also took occasion to state that we realised almost 100 per cent. on the price paid the milk producers. In fairness to the electors, as well as to himself, Mr. Soden should have told them:

1st—What it costs to haul the milk from the producer to the creamery.

2nd—What it costs to clarify and pasteurise and bottle the milk.

3rd—What it costs to deliver the milk to consumers.

The first principle of cost finding is that each item of expense must be charged to the department or operation for which the purchase was made or the cost incurred or which receives the benefit of it.

Mr. Soden, as a good business man, must know that before he sells any article out of his store he must first find out what percentage he has to add to the wholesale cost to cover the cost of selling.

My practice as always been to call in the farmers and consult with them on a price at which they can fairly produce the milk. And for two years, thanks to the patriotic farmers of this section, the Peterborough Milk Products Co. have supplied to the citizens of Peterborough good, pure pasturised milk—the best food known for child or adult—as cheap, and in many cases cheaper, than in other cities in the Province. Our price to-day is 12 cents a quart. Toronto's price is 16 cents a quart. And other cities of similar size to Peterborough are higher than here.

The Peterborough Milk Products Ltd., is in competition with fifteen or twenty milk dealers in the city, any one of whom would willingly go into the cost of milk distribution with any householder or politician who thinks the public is paying exorbitant prices, but it is a mistake that this question should have been brought under discussion at this time when in reality to the Peterborough citizens, it was in a most satisfactory condition as compared with other cities.

In conclusion, let me say to Mr. Soden that if he wants to discuss my personal business instead of the political questions of the day, I invite him to come over to the creamery, and I will be pleased to enlighten him, so that he may be able to talk more intelligently on the milk question.

Respectfully yours,

GEO. A. GILLESPIE.

FIGHTING PESTS.

Destroying Moths That Breed Worms and Caterpillars.

Some of the worst enemies of the crops are moths. As moths, they are harmless, but the caterpillars hatched from their eggs are wholesale destroyers.

Every housewife is lamentably familiar with the disgusting worm so commonly found in the ears of sweet corn that she buys for her table. Few ears seem to escape its attack, while many are half devoured.

This filthy creature is the offspring of a moth that flies only in the night time. Often present in countless numbers in the cornfields, it flits about, laying its eggs, one here and another there, on the silks of the corn. The caterpillars, as soon as hatched, find their way to the growing ears, creep into them, and begin to devour the grain.

Various schemes have been tried for trapping the moths. Pans of sweetened water poisoned with cyanide of potash have been scattered about in the field, to attract them. Lamps, to draw them, have been hung over receptacles containing kerosene, so that the fumes might suffocate them.

These and other contrivances have captured many moths; but, for some unexplained reason, nearly all of them were males. So what was the use?

The "brown-tail" caterpillar for some years past has been causing a great deal of trouble, chiefly by scattering its poisonous hairs, which float about in the air, get into people's clothing, and engender a horrid rash. Persons have been made very sick by them, and one man died.

In this case, likewise, the parent moths are night-flyers, and efforts have been made to trap them by hanging arclights over vessels of kerosene. Here again, however, those captured were nearly all males.

The worst enemy of the grape-owners in California is a minute insect called the "thunder-fly," because it appears in greatest numbers in hot sultry weather, when thunderstorms are frequent. A man out there has constructed a spraying machine, with a ten horsepower motor, which is placed on wheels and driven through the vineyards, harvesting the pests from the vines as it goes along. It is said to work very successfully.

An even more remarkable contrivance is used in Germany to capture wholesale the "nun moths" that devastate the forests. It is provided with two powerful searchlights that draw the moths from miles away (the apparatus being placed on top of a building), and they are further attracted by a pair of arc lamps on either side of a suction ventilator. An electric motor causes the fans of the ventilator to revolve rapidly, thereby producing an intake of air that swallows every moth approaching within a few feet. Through the ventilator they pass into a wire-net cage. A single machine of that kind has been known to catch 100 thousands of moths in a night.

Ink Stains on Furniture.

To remove ink stains from mahogany, rosewood or black walnut furniture, put half a dozen drops of spirits of niter in a spoonful of water and touch the stain with a feather wet with the mixture. As soon as the stain disappears, rub with a cloth dampened with cold water.

Cold Water as a Purifier.

Fresh cold water is a powerful absorbent of gases, therefore it should be greatly used in a sick room or in one which cannot be frequently ventilated. A bowl of cold water kept in such a room and changed daily is of great assistance in purifying the air.

The Library.

Consider what you have in the smallest chosen library. A company of the wisest and wittiest men that could be picked out of all civilized countries, in 1,000 years, have set in best order the results of their learning and wisdom. The men themselves were hid and inaccessible, solitary, impatient of interruption, fenced by etiquette; but the thought which they did not uncover to their bosom friend is here written out in transparent words to us, the strangers of another age.—Emerson.

Okapi Goes to Belgium.

British naturalists who have been confidently expecting that the only live okapi in captivity was to be housed in the Zoological Gardens in Regent Park, were disappointed when the news came from Antwerp that the animal had been brought there from the Congo by Dr. Lebrum. It was the gift of Mme. Landaghem, whose husband is in the Congo medical service. The okapi is the survivor of a distant ancestor of the giraffe. An adult stands about five feet high, and although it has the general shape of the giraffe it's neck is relatively shorter and its forelegs are not so high in proportion to its hindquarters.

The sides of the animal's head are light fawn color and the general coloration of the body is a dark purple. The most striking character is that the rump and the upper part of the legs are transversely striped with black and white. It was first known in 1901, having been found in the Semliki forest, haunting low undergrowth and swamps. This particular specimen was in Mme. Landaghem's possession for a number of years, and photographs of it show it eating out of her hand.

First Woman Smoker.

It is said that the first white woman to form the habit of smoking tobacco was Mary Frith, an Englishwoman, better known to her contemporaries as "Moll Cut-Purse," who was born in 1565. In her time pockets had not been invented, and gentlemen carried their money in purses worn at the girdle.

"Moll Cut-Purse" early became an adept in the art of cutting the strings of purses without the knowledge of their owners. She always wore men's clothing. Despite her dishonest methods of making a living, she was good-natured, and divided her spoils liberally with those in need.

In ancient prints she is usually pictured smoking a pipe, and she was undoubtedly the first white woman to proclaim publicly her allegiance to "Lady Nicotine." She lived to be nearly 80, and at her death left a will requesting that the remainder of her fortune be spent in merry-making at her funeral.

CAUSE FOR INDIGNATION.

Why Should a Man Return Home Too Late Safe and Sound?

An Ost East man who has not been married a great many years and who is engaged in a business that seldom keeps him in the city late at night recently attended a dinner that lasted longer than he had expected it to. In fact, it was after midnight when the last speaker closed his remarks. Then one of the Oak Park man's neighbors offered to take him home in an automobile if he would wait a few minutes. The few minutes were multiplied several times, and a punctured tire added to the delay, the result being that the man who was seldom out late at night reached home at 2:27 a. m.

He let himself in as quietly as possible, but he might as well have been as noisy as an auction bridge party. His wife was awake and had all the lights in the house going. She had telephoned to a number of her neighbors for their advice and was about to communicate with the police department for the purpose of letting it be known that her husband must have met with some terrible mishap. When he got inside the house the lady rushed to greet him, crying:

"Charles, dear, what has happened? Are you hurt?"

"No; I'm all right," he replied.

She stopped, looked him over hastily and critically and then exclaimed:

"What do you mean by coming home at this time in the morning with nothing the matter with you?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

SAN CARLO GRAND OPERA COMPANY AND SAN CARLO ORCHESTRA COMING

Well-known music authorities have claimed that the orchestra entitled to fifty per-cent of Grand Opera. Certain it is that the instrumental section is a feature of the highest importance, and unquestionably there are many patrons of opera who attend the performances because they are quite as interested in this department as they are in the artists on the stage. This section of an organization, however, is one of the most difficult to assemble under present day conditions, especially as it demands the enlistment of seasoned experienced players who have devoted most of their career to opera playing. The establishing of symphony orchestras in many of the leading motion-pictures houses of the country now-a-days has given ready and lucrative employment to the finished performer, who, on the average, prefers the comforts of home life to the disadvantages, to say nothing of the expense, of traveling.

The personnel of the San Carlo Grand Opera orchestra this season, however, remains quite unchanged save for its increased numerical strength. The return of many competent players from overseas where they were sent by our Government has, to some extent, relieved the scarcity of experienced musician, which prevailed in this country during the war and which caused many amusement enterprises to enter the field with incomplete musical forces. The San Carlo orchestra number many artists who were previously identified with the world's foremost grand opera ventures, some of whom are finished virtuosi, and constitute a splendid symphonic back-ground for the productions. At its head is the eminent Italian maestro, Gaetano Merola, who directed the operas at the London Opera House for the late Oscar Hammerstein.

MY SOLDIER GIRL AGAIN SATURDAY

NEW MUSICAL PLAY FULL OF COMEDY, AND A BEWITCHING PONY BALLET

A tuneful musical comedy presented in all its dazzling splendor is "My Soldier Girl," the most pronounced musical success that has been turned out in years, coming to the Grand, Saturday matinee and evening. This new play is brim full of comedy, contains some twenty tuneful numbers, brilliant in its gorgeous scenic effects and novel costumes, offers a splendid cast and bewitching "pony" ballet who present this sparkling and gay musical novelty in all its merry-making. The story centres about Dixie Harris, a ward of a wealthy Floridan who was a producer of theatrical attractions long before the war. Dixie, likewise the Colonel, served their country during the late struggle, and while in France a love affair crept into the hearts of Miss Harris and a Lieutenant Carter. The Colonel made many friends during his European trip, inviting them to visit his home once the armistice signed and conditions were such that the majority of the boys and girls would be back in America. It is at the Colonel's home that the first act opens and a brilliant lawn fete is in progress, presenting a beautiful picture of flowers and lights. The guests participate in the evening's merriment and a night of gayety reigns in all its merry-making. So many exceptionally clever entertainers are found among the visiting guests that the Colonel during an impromptu speech makes known that he is to produce a big Follies production in New York City and extends an offer to all who desire to become members of it. The suggestion is received with wildest enthusiasm and the long to be remembered night of festivities draws to a close with the new Follies show looked forward to, with much anticipation.

The second act finds many of the guests who participated in the festivities at the lawn fete playing leading roles in the rehearsal of the Follies production on a roof of a New York theatre. True to his word, the Colonel has given the new show a wonderful mounting and it actually out-classes all that have gone before it. Dixie is cast as the "Soldier Girl" and nothing prettier has been done in the pictureland of the stage than this novel play offers in its clever little story. There are more than a score of tuneful song hits of which "My Soldier Girl" leads in oppularity with "Just For You," "That Dixie Wedding Tune," "Wrap Me Up in a Bundle of Love," "Jasper's Ragtime Band," and "Won't You Be my Beau," folow closely in this popular score.

AND THE PEAS ROLLED OFF

Forks Eliminated for Courtesy to Harry Casrey.

During Harry Carey's tour of the United States, on which he made personal appearances in hundreds of motion picture theatres, he was extensively feted and dined, but one banquet in particular stands out prominently in his memory.

When he sat down to the table, he found no fork at his place. Looking around he saw that his neighbors had none. "Funny bunch" he thought, but said nothing, when his host started piling into the meat and potatoes with his knife. Believing that when in Rome it is advisable to do as the Romans do, Carey followed suit.

Later he found out that his host and he guests were not sword swallowers by profession, but were using knives exclusively out of courtesy to him. Having seen the western star eat with a table knife in a recent cowboy role, the host figured to save Carey embarrassment by omitting the fork course altogether.

But the next picture Carey made, "The Outcast of Poker Flat," now playing at the Empire shows the star as a gentleman gambler with exquisite table manners. And Carey hopes that the amateur sword swallowers will go and see this new picture, so that he will be vindicated.

FAMOUS DUMBELLS

AT THE GRAND THEATRE FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24 AND 25.

That the Canadian soldiers in France were royally entertained while billeted near the front lines, has been amply evidenced to the home folks since the arrival of the famous Dumbells, who are playing a homecoming tour of the larger Canadian cities, presenting their original overseas revue "Biff, Bing, Bang."

The production which they have brought to this country is identical with the various shows they gave the boys at the front, and this bunch gave over five hundred performances in France, forty in Brussels and fifty-eight in London.

The cast and chorus is made up entirely of soldier-actors, who have averaged sixteen months apiece in the trenches before having been brought out of the line and given places in the entertainment corps.

DOROTHY BERNARD HAS TWO PARTS IN PLAY

IN "A MAN OF SORROW" AT THE GRAND, FRIDAY, PORTRAYS NANCE AND JESS LENDON, SISTERS.

Dorothy Bernard, talented photo play actress, plays two parts in the William Fox production, "A Man o' Sorrow," starring William Farnum. Miss Bernard is seen as Nance Lendon, a country girl, and as Jess Lendon, half-sister of Nance, who has been brought up by a band of gipsies. The types are widely dissimilar. Nance is the domestic, home-loving wife of Jack Hewlitt, whom she has reformed. Jess is the care-free, irresponsible creature of her own whims.

Few people unfamiliar with the fundamentals of photoplay realize the task that the playing of two parts imposes. For instance, suppose an actress, while playing a certain scene as a gypsy and then as an entirely different character enters the same scene. It is necessary for her to keep definitely in view just what is the frame of mind of each of the characters. But she must exercise care in other directions, especially in the matter of dress and make-up.

In one of the scenes in "A Man of Sorrow," Miss Bernard exists as Nance Lendon, dressed in a dark skirt and a white shirt waist with a clasp pin on the collar and her hair "done up." A second later she enters the scene as Jess Lendon, the gipsy, with a multi-colored skirt, a shawl about her shoulders and her hair down her back. In the making of this particular scene it was necessary for Miss Bernard to change her costume and make-up several times, and each time she had to be sure that it was a duplicate of that previously worn.

UNPARDONABLE SIN PERFECT PRODUCTION

MASTER PHOTOPLAY AT ALLEN THEATRE PRAISED BY LOVERS OF MOVIES

"The Unpardonable Sin" is an impressive photoplay, filled with splendid characterizations, remarkable photography, and a thoughtful perfection of detail which honors the intelligence of the beholder.

The outstanding performances are Blanche Sweet's, in the roles of the sisters Dimny and Alice; and Mary Alden's, as the mother. Although Miss Alden has far less to do than Miss Sweet, it is an equally significant performance. Miss Sweet as the outraged Alice evidences to the full her capability for a sort of tragic futility—a lifelike thing which is not acting, and which is not the pompous manifestation of self-sorrow which many of our players think is tragedy that is the very mirror of real despairing existence. So does Miss Alden remain perfectly in the picture. She presents a handsome, well-bred woman, approaching middle-age and even in her extreme moments there is nothing to suggest the crushed and blasted girlhood of her daughter. Rather, she becomes a calm, sombre, poised and waiting spirit—the mother of the Greek plays.

On the other hand, as Dimny, Miss Sweet is altogether the adventurous girl, sensitive, refined, but always unafraid and ready to battle for her own honor or the honor of those she loves. Dual characterizations are so possible in pictures that they have come to be a misfortune, thanks to the people who dabble in them. But here is a duel characterization—that is to say, Alice Parcot, the gentle slaughtered lamb, is not and could not be any time the valiant sister whom she so closely resembles.

Taken as a whole "The Unpardonable Sin" is "technically perfect" and the best work of Blanche Sweet's long career.

Deepest Lake In World.

Lake Baikal is the great lake of Russia in more than one sense. It is the deepest in the world, one of the largest, and besides it is, to the Russians, holy. The people, who inhabit the region of Lake Baikal firmly believe that both the lake and its surroundings are endowed with supernatural powers and inhabited by unearthly beings. All manner of weird tales mingle with their explanation of any feature of the lake.

Even so simple an object as a great rock lying in the middle of a river just where it flows from Lake Baikal takes on a mysterious significance. If this stone were to slip from place, they say, the whole of Lake Baikal would pour out of its basin and flood the river and probably the continent.

Yet, even without native interpretation, many things are strange about the great Russian lake. One of Baikal's phenomena is a species of fish that inhabits the deepest part. These fish have been seen by few persons, for as soon as they are lifted out of their accustomed atmosphere of high pressure they explode.

Lake Baikal has played an important part in Russian affairs. It lies directly in the way across the continent, and before the railway was built around the southern end of the lake it had to be crossed by Siberian travelers going either east or west.

In summer steamers carried freight and passengers, but in winter, when the lake was ice-bound, traffic depended on the slow work of an ice-breaker—a steel ship that could cut ice four feet thick—and when the ice became too thick for the breaker sledges made the forty-mile trip over the ice.

During the Russo-Japanese War, when troops had to be rushed from one end of the empire to the other, Lake Baikal was a great obstacle to speed until engineers laid tracks across the ice sheet and ran trains across it.

¶ REMEMBER—Beer is the most nourishing beverage we possess. It contains such a very small amount of alcohol and such a relatively large amount of nutritive material that it would be difficult indeed to find a meal at once simpler and more nutritive than a bottle of beer, a piece of cheese and a crust of bread. One eminent physician proclaims Beer to be a liquid beefsteak.

¶ REMEMBER—The Beer of the Ballot must not be confused with the beers sold in Ontario before prohibition. The beers sold in this Province under the Old License System had an alcoholic content as high as 7% and over—the beer for which you are asked to vote on October 20th is but 2.51%.

¶ REMEMBER—The Beer of the Ballot is absolutely non-intoxicating—beer of even .24 stronger has been proven non-intoxicating by scientific experiments and thorough research by a board of fourteen qualified experts. The Beer of the Ballot is nothing but a mildly stimulating, healthful and refreshing non-intoxicating beverage—brewed from a high grade of malt and hops—containing only sufficient alcohol to make it digestible and nourishing.

Ontario Brewers' Association

HORSEMEN PLAN FOR 1920

Lexington, Oct. 16.—With the waning days of the Grand Circuit, now down to the finale at Lakewood Park, Atlanta, the leading stables have been strengthening their forces for the drive of 1920. Down here in the blue grass country, the heart of the breeding world, both harness horse and thoroughbred, is the logical place to look for stake prospects and hundreds of them have been given the "once over" by the trainers during the two weeks of the trots just closed. The continued and growing popularity of colt racing has made the demand for young stuff especially strong, but there never was a time in the history of harness racing, when a trotter or pacer which looked to have a chance in the stakes for aged horses could command a higher price.

The most important of the sales consummated during the trots and for the highest price paid for a stake prospect price the Summer of 1914 when Tom Murphy paid $20,000 for Peter Scott, was that of the three-year-old trotting gelding, Peter Manning, for which the same trainer traded a cheque for $21,000. That is a lot of money to pay for a youngster which is yet to be tested out in the furnace of Grand Circuit competition, but the Illinois gelding has performed some feats never before accomplished by one with the limited amount of training he has received and one of the leading experts has gone so far as to class him with such sensations of the trotting world as Uhlan and Lou Dillon.

Thought Little Of.

Peter Manning a year ago was an unbroken youngster on a farm near Chicago and his owner thought so little of his chances for fame that he was priced at $100 without finding a buyer. The Illinois trainer, Harry Putnam, who looked after the training of the horses of his owner, had interests in the West which kept him away until Spring, so the gelding was not broken to harness until April and did not see a race track until May. He made speed rapidly once he knew what was wanted of him and won a race over a half-mile track in 2.17¼. This was the first time he had beaten 2.20. He was taken to the Great Western Circuit meeting at Milwaukee four week ago when he worked a mile around 2.10. The day before the opening of the trots here he worked a mile in company with the futurity candidates. Brother Peter, in 2.15¼, the last half in 1.02¾, and the last quarter in 29¾ seconds. A few days later he was started for a record, going to the half in 1.06 and finishing the mile in 2.06½, the last half in 1.00½, the mile equaling the world's record for three-year-old trotting geldings, held by Easton.

Son of Azoff.

Peter Manning is a son of Azoff, which in 1910 took a two-year-old race record of 2.14¼ in the Norseman Futurity at Detroit and which was expected to be a star until an unfortunate accident compelled his retirement. He is a son of that greatest of all sires, Peter the Great, out of a daughter of Axworthy, which sired the race champion, [illegible] and [illegible] other stars and is grandsire of that greatest of all trotting stallions, Lee Axworthy, 1.58½. The dam of Peter Manning is a daughter of Emmet Grattan, which argues for stamina for the family of Grattan is noted for its staying qualities.

Murphy made another important purchase when he paid $5,00 for the veteran trotter Charley Ray, 2.06½, one of the greatest of half-mile track trotters and which showed sensational form in a race here the first week of the trots. This was in a race won by the bay gelding, Early Dreams, the leading money winner of the 1917 season. All three heats were faster than 2.04, and Charley Ray was the contender each time. The gelding has raced a 2.06 1-8 over a half-mile track. He worked for Cranwood course near Cleveland, in 2.05¾, but up to his race here he was generally looked upon as a half-mile track trotter pure and simple; one of the freakish sort of trotters which will trot one of the two-lap goats about as fast as they will a mile course. The gelding was given to making a bid, breaks, then trotting a terrific clip. In one of the heats he made a break going away from the wire which lost him several lengths, putting him in the rear of the entire field, yet he had the lead long before reaching the half-mile pole. The master hand of Murphy may correct some of these peculiarities and the homely gelding from Illinois may be a thorn in the side of the 2.07 stake horse in 1920.

Murphy a Plunger.

Murphy is one of those "plunging buyers"; price cuts little figure with the Poughkeepsie wizard when he is satisfied that the horse he is after is the real article. On the other hand is Walter Cox, great trainer and driver and shrewd horseman, but a conservative buyer who is always willing to sell any horse in his stable if the price is right. Few drivers would have been willing to part with Peter Scott in 1914, that stallion looking to be the greatest stake trotter in the country, as he afterward proved to be, but when Murphy offered $30,000 Cox advised the owner to sell. The New Hampshire trainer got into the game the past week when acting for Barton Parde, owner of those two trotting stars, Mabel Trask, 2.01¾, and Lou Princeton, 2.01, he purchased from George H. Estabrook, of Denver, the five-year-old trotting stallion E. Colorado, 2.11¼, paying $10,000. During the first week of the trots the stallion, half-mile track all season, winning 10 races out of 11 starts, trotted a mile in 2.06 1-8, and in another workout went to the half in 1.10 and the mile in 2.10 1-8, the last half in 1.00½. Up to the present season this trotter was very unsteady, but in the hands of the Detroit trainer, Will Milloy, who has raced a lot of good pacers, including the veteran pacer Earl, Jr., 2.01½, he has been shaped into a very reliable sort of racing tool as well as a very fast trotter. After the sale was made Estabrook bet Cox a suit of clothes that E. Colorado would trot in 2.03 next season. Milloy, who is very conservative, remarked: "Next year; he he can trot in 2.03 now and can trot a half faster than 1.00."

E. Colorado is a son of Colorado E., which won three futurities for Estabrook in 1910, was second in the Kentucky Futurity, and the following week trotted a heat in 2.04½, which at that time was the world's record for three-year-olds, and was not beaten until that greatest of all trotters, Peter Volo, came along four years late and trotted in 2.03½ in winning the classic of the trots.

JONNY EVERS WILL RETURN

EXPECTED TO SUCCEED BEZDECK AS LEADER OF THE PIRATES

BY OSCAR C. REICHOW

Johnny Evers is to be back in the National League next year as manager. He is to replace Hugo Bezdek as pilot of the Pittsburg Pirates, according to information obtained in Cincinnati during the world's series. The announcement of his appointment will probably not be made until the meeting of the league in December unless President Barney Dreyfuss desires to start building up his club earlier than usual and asks Evers' assistance in doing so.

Dreyfuss, in choosing Evers to replace Bezdek, is not discharging his manager, but is said to have accepted his resignation. Hugo is a college coach and is now devoting his time to drilling the Penn State football eleven and it is understood he would prefer to stay there all season. This [illegible] experienced [illegible] ous breakdown as a result of trying to keep the Pirates in the race. Rather than impair his health he left the club flat on its back in New York and rushed to his home in Pittsburg for a rest. This, it is believed, convinced him that his duties are with the college.

Friends Open Negotiations

The Pirates' president attended the series' games in Cincinnati and was in conference with Evers on several occasions, but denied he was talking to him for the purpose of securing him to lead his club. It is known that Evers is most desirous of returning to baseball after an absence of two years. He declared to the writer that his health is finer now than it has been in many years and that he believed he is capable of taking a club and making a success of it. While he did not solicit Bezdek's position, it is known that several friends went to the front for him and succeeded in arranging a meeting with Dreyfuss.

Evers managed the Cubs in 1913 and finished third with the team. He replaced Frank Chance as leader, but was let out after the race and sold to the Boston Braves, for whom he played in 1914, assisting materially in winning the National League and world's series pennants. Evers was not a success as a manager, although there are few in baseball, if any, who know more about the game or running of a club on the field. His only difficulty was in getting along with his players. He was too drastic on the field and by his severity aroused the displeasure and incurred the enmity of his players. Had his men played ball the way he desired them to the Cubs might have won the championship this season.

Nucleus of Winning Team.

Evers realized the mistake he made and now that his health is greatly improved feels that he can take a ball club and handle it as well as any other manager in the game. He wants the chance and is going to get it with the Pittsburgh Club, with which he may prove himself capable, as the team as players around whom a championship organization can be molded. Evers knows this, and for that reason would ather lead the Pirates than any other club in the league.

"I have been out of the game for two years now," said Evers, "and am itching to get back. I have not solicited any positions, but surely would be glad to take the managerial reins of the Pittsburgh Club, as I understand that Bezdek is not to be back.

Pulled for the Reds.

"eaBlbsand now is etaoin shrdlun "Baseball is my game and, although I have not been in it for a while, I am still interested and eager to return. Nothing enthused me more than the Ded's victory over the White Sox. I was pulling for the National League and was pleased at the chance to help Moran and his men."

NEVER SAW THE SUWANEE

Writer of Popular Song Used Name Because Rhythmic Sound of It Appealed to Him.

The song, "Old Folks at Home," made the name of "Swanee River" famous, but few people, except those of Florida and Georgia, connect the Swanee of the song with the Suwanee that flows from the southern swamps of Georgia down through the woodlands of Florida to empty into the Gulf of Mexico.

"Way down upon the Swanee river" suggests vaguely the South of the antebellum days with its cotton plantations, its mansions and negro cabins. None of these things are found along the Suwanee. Yet Floridans claim that the song was written in honor of their forest stream, and boatmen even point out a tree under which Stephen Foster is supposed to have penned the memorable lines. Reports less picturesque, but more generally accepted, say that Foster never saw Suwanee river, but that he used the name because of the rhythmic sound, dropping the "u" to perfect the meter.

While the Suwanee river may not be what its name suggests to most of us, it is a beautiful stream, flowing through a semi-tropical country where live-oaks and cypresses are mirrored in its clear depths. Heavy forests of cedar also grow in its valley, but these have been reduced in recent years, as the wood is in great demand for pencil making.

The Suwanee figured largely in early American history, for it was a favorite haunt of the Indians, and many battles with the red men were fought in its valleys.

The name Suwanee has an Indian sound, but it is said to be a corruption of San Juan—a name given the river by early Spanish explorers.

LOYAL TILL DEATH.

South African Ostrich Is a True Monogamist.

Fifty-five years ago the ostrich was not a domesticated bird in South Africa. True, a few wild ostriches had been captured and kept in captivity for private or public exhibition, but no attempt appears to have been made to farm them seriously. The few ostrich feathers that reached European markets were from wild ostriches, and, commercially, were considered much damaged. Nevertheless they fetched very high prices, which naturally drew the attention of South Africa to the possibilities of the ostrich-feather trade.

The more venturesome stock-breeders and speculators practically started the present extensive ostrich farming industry by offering very high prices for eggs, chicks, or full-grown birds. The Kalahari — the favorite haunt of the wild ostrich—was searched for eggs and chicks, but the demand for some time continued to exceed the supply.

In a comparatively very short time hundreds of domesticated or half-wild ostriches were successfully reared, partly with the help of incubators; but the loss by death through lack of experience was for a long time considerable. Fortunately this drawback has since been largely overcome by the application of new methods, which, taken in conjunction with greater attention to selection for breeding purposes, has put South Africa [illegible] farming foremost in

In the life of the ostrich there are some characteristics that deserve mention, because they have been frequently misstated or misunderstood.

In the wild or natural state ostriches [illegible] in the spring. Once paired, they remain paired "till death doth them part." The female, or hen bird, makes a shallow hollow in the ground away from water-courses for her nest. During the sitting period the male remains on the nest by night, the female by day. As the eggs are in greater danger of wild animals by night, this mutual arrangement between the parent birds is as obvious as instructive. On the approach of danger, the parent bird sitting on the nest will put its neck and head flat on the ground in front of it, for by doing so it can be easily mistaken for an ant-heap or low bush. Even while going in search of food it may resort to this deception.

In the domestic state they retain the characteristics observed in their wild state, but in a less degree, owing to less dependence on their natural instincts. In course of time they will no doubt cease to be monogamists—a fate that seems ever to await animals selected by man for domestic use.—Family Herald.

Verdure on China's Great Wall.

Trees and shrubbery planted in the soil that has been accumulating for hundreds of years on the great wall of China are in thriving condition, some of them having grown to a height of 12 to 18 feet. This method of beautifying the great wall was an outgrowth of the movement for the reforestation of the country started some time ago with government sanction under the direction of foreign experts. The driveway on the great wall is considered very much improved with the addition of trees.

PRICE OF BOOTS REMAIN HIGH

WILL POSSIBLY STAY WHERE THEY ARE FOR THREE OR FOUR YEARS

Considerable criticism has been launched at various times and from different sources on account of the large increase in the price of boots and shoes. Others are complaining because now that the war is over the prices are not lowering to a pre-war standing. When the situation is thoroughly understood it can be seen that it is a very natural consequence of present day conditions that the prices of shoes are still high and will in all probability remain high for some time.

It is true that some wholesalers and jobbers in the boot and shoe business have made enormous profits. They have been greatly criticized for holding the price of shoes too high, in order to enable them to derive exorbitant profits. But these men are pure speculators. They looked ahead and saw that the price of leather must rise and so stocked themselves very heavily. If the price had suddenly dropped, as it might have done, would the people who are extending such severe criticism toward these men be as ready to extend their sympathy to the ruined speculators?

But apart from this, why must the price of high-class boots and shoes remain at the top notch for another three or four years? This is simply explained. Before the war, Austria supplied sixty per cent. of the world's kid, much of which was sent to France for manufacture. But during the war the Austrians were forced to kill their goats and kids for food, so that now their export of kid for leather is almost nothing. And until the European countries have restocked their farms and put themselves in a position to supply their own leather, the price of boots and shoes in this country must remain high.

South America, a great hide producing country, was practically cleaned out during the war and it will be at least three or four years before this continent can reach its pre-war standing in hide exporting. Russia, a great leather producing country is too exhausted with civil strife to put its products on the market in large quantities for a considerable length of time.

The truth of the matter is that there is not a supply of hides in the world, and until the farms of the world are restocked with cattle, kid and goats, boots and shoes, especially of the finer quality so much in demand today, will remain at high prices. And this cannot possibly be accomplished within three or four years.

COUNTING BALLOTS ON THE REFERENDUM

COMMITTEE MAKES SUGGESTIONS TO AID WORK OF ELECTION OFFICIALS

The members of the referendum committee have been for some time working on a plan to aid the election officials in the work of counting the temperance ballots when the polls close Monday evening, a work which is new in connection with an election on account of the manifold nature of the ballot. One of the ladies on the committee has made the practical suggestion that the first step in making the count should be the separation of the straight ballots. This will eliminate probably seventy-five per cent. of the vote, and the counting of these will be a comparatively easy matter.

To count the mixed ballots it is suggested that a separate count be kept of the votes on each question, a sheet of purpose being ruled for the purpose. Four columns would be required, each of these to be subdivided to provide spaces in which to record the affirmative and negative votes. It is hoped that the work can be completed in time to give the public a fair idea of the result on Monday night.

FIELD DAY SPORTS A GREAT SUCCESS

LOCAL COLLEGIATE TEACHERS AND SCHOLARS ENJOY GOOD LIST OF RACES.

The Collegiate Field Day sports were held at the exhibition grounds yesterday afternoon and were in every way a greater success than ever. Members of the Board of Education, teachers and scholars all entered into the spirit of the day and everyone had great enjoyment out of the sports. The races, both boys and girls, were very close and interesting and the boy senior and junior champions are still in doubt. A complete list of races and cup winners will be published later.

G. W. V. A. AT HOME IS GREATLY ENJOYED

GOOD CROWD SPEND EVENING AT CARDS AND DANCING—ALLEN THEATRE ORCHESTRA

The first "at home" of the season for the local branch of the G.W.V.A. held in their room last night was in every sense of the word a great success. A fairly large, yet comfortable crowd, were on hand and greatly enjoyed the evening. Euchre was played till about 10.30 o'clock when refreshments were served. Immediately after the refreshments were served the orchestra from the Allen Theatre arrived and the rest of the night was used for dancing.

Col. Mills won the man's euchre prize while Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Payne divided the honors among the ladies.

WOMEN'S CANADIAN CLUB.

Branch Organized in Peterborough Yesterday Afternoon.

A meeting of very special interest to the ladies of Peterborough was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Miss Clementi on Stewart street when it was decided to form a women's Canadian Club in this city.

At this entirely informal and pleasant gathering about twenty ladies, congregated to discuss the advisability of organizing such a club in Peterborough. It was generally accepted as being a favorable move to promote the advancement of patriotism, as well as to incite that spirit of co-operation for good which is essential to progress.

Mrs. Kendry occupied the chair and during the course of a very interesting discourse Miss Ambrose of Hamilton pointed out some important facts concerning the organization in that city.

TO THE WOMEN VOTERS

(By Somtimeer.)

May I take the liberty of reminding you of the great responsibility facing you Monday next, and every day thereafter if you have not fully considered your duty. At the time of the last Dominion elections many of us cast our first vote. Am I not right in saying that vote was cast with a thought of our men then overseas fighting against great odds, and sorely in need of assistance and we thought we were helping them or were we thinking of the Germans reaching our shores, and possible danger to ourselves. At any rate we tramped the streets and solicited votes, cheered at meetings and quite approved of the stand our clergy took, and were there any who did not say it was the duty of the boys to go? Did any of us realize what we were sending those boys into? When at the time we could not assure their safe transport to Halifax many of them did not return. We had no qualms then, and now why should we consider what is it we are thinking about, is it illness—some slight pain? Think of the men suffering many a wild night on the battle field and giving.

This present enemy who threatens our province, who has more advocates in Germany than in the Liberty league even—an enemy who kills both body and soul. Do you ever look at those men and boys who are in our town now with that little button on the lapel of their coat, "Lest we forget." Shall we not keep our own clean for them?

Is there anyone in Peterborough suffering in any way because the whiskey business was taken from them? No.

The boys who spend their evening at the Veterans' Club, rows of boys having their pie and coffee over the Greek's counter last night—will they not be as happy today as the young men who a few years ago spent their evenings in some dirty bar room, club, or back lane? I have confidence in the men of today, but this is our opportunity to do a little housecleaning. We may not be satisfied with the man we elect, but I assure you we shall never regret the four 'no's.'

I should like to say a word to the man of money who seems to be such a sore spot because he can import. There was a rich young man years ago who was asked to give up a great deal. Brotherhood then was the same as it is now, I am thinking.

Will our clergy help? The Bishop, Canon Davidson and others, who more than once have been asked to help a family brought low by drink. Will they all ring true? Who will interpret Prov. XX-1, same chapter verse 29? I am not quoting scripture. Someone else should do that in the proper place. My sisters think carefully, decide wisely, act promptly and may God help us to win.

"OH, BOY!"

GENERAL YUDENITCH'S RUSSIAN ARMY RE-INFORCED BY PRINCE LIEVEN'S MEN

Advance on Petrograd Continues With Success for Anti-Bolshevik Troops Tsarskoye Selo, Summer Residence of Former Emperor Nicholas, May be Occupied Any Moment by Gen. Yudenitch—Soviet Wireless Station Here Still Sending Out Propaganda.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Stockholm, Oct. 17.—General Yudenitch, whose Northwestern Russian army is marching on to Petrograd, has been re-inforced by troops commanded by Prince Peter Lieven and volunteers from Archangel, who form the vanguard of the advance on the former Russian capital.

Still Advancing.

London, Oct 17.—The march of General Yudenitch at the head of the Northwestern Russian army on to the city of Petrograd was still progressing favorable at latest advices.

Come reports of his advance, however, have apparently outrun his actual progress. There appeared, for instance, some doubt today whether the fortress of Kronstadt, an outpost at the water approach to Petrograd, had capitulated to British naval forces, as indicated in reports during the night. The British admiralty sent no confirmation advices, and accuracy of the news was questioned in [illegible]

Doubtful Reports.

Dispatches from Scandinavia have announced the capture of Gatchina, 25 miles south of Petrograd, by Gen. Yudenitch's forces, and stated that he was advancing on Tsarskoye Selo, the summer residence of former Emperor Nicholas, and Krasnoye Selo, nearby. Reports of the capture of these places by an anti-Bolshevik army, however, seemed of doubtful accuracy.

Soviet Propaganda.

A Bolshevik wireless station is located at Tsarskoye Selo, and the announcement was made by wireless press here this morning that the Bolsheviki were apparently still in possession of it, as Soviet propaganda was yet being sent out from the station during this forenoon.

Food for Petrograd.

Under the supervision of officers at Viborg, energetic measures are being taken to supply food to Petrograd in the event that city is captured by the Russian forces, according to the Daily Mail's Helsingfors Finland correspondent, telegraphing Wednesday. The supplies on hand are calculated to be sufficient for 650,000 persons for 17 days

The correspondent says an unconfirmed report in Helsingfors is to the effect that Leon Trotzky, the Bolsheviki Minister of War, has brought large reinforcements to Petrograd, and that serious opposition is expected by the Russians beyond Gatschina

Field for Recruits.

The capture of Petrograd, which experts predict will happen in the near future, would furnish a large field of recruitment for General Yudenitch, it is believed, since the anti-Bolsheviki feeling there is said to run high. Thus, the fall of Petrograd would represent not only a vital blow politically to the prestige of the Soviet Government, but also a distinct military loss. If the present pressure upon Petrograd and elsewhere continues for long, a military collapse of Bolshevist Russia is within the bounds of possibility. Already disaffection and revolts are reported in several bodies of Bolshevst troops.

NAVAL SUCCESS NOT CREDITED

REPORTS OF CAPTURE OF KRONSTADT ARE NOT CONFIRMED.

NO REASON FOR BRITISH ATTACK

LIGHT CRUISERS WOULD BE INCAPABLE OF CHALLENGING THE FORTRESS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 17.—Confirmation of reports that British naval forces have taken the Fortress of Kronstadt, on the Gulf of Finland, west of Petrograd, has not been received at admiralty offices here.

Only Light Cruisers.

Dispatches telling of the capitulation of Kronstadt are not credited, it being said the British have only light cruisers in this vicinity, which are incapable of successfully challenging the fortress.

Admiralty officials state there was no reason for a British attack on the place.

OPPOSE BILL IN SECOND READING

LIBERALS OBJECT TO G.T. PURCHASE BILL ON FINANCIAL GROUNDS.

It is expected that division in Commons will be reached about Tuesday evening next and that the Senate will take it up next week. Saturday and morning sessions of the House may soon be commenced in order to hurry prorogration.

WAR WORKERS ASK FOR GRATUITY

CANADIANS EMPLOYED IN BRITISH MUNITIONS FACTORIES EXPECT CONSIDERATION

MAKE GOOD FINANCIAL LOSSES

OVERSEAS MECHANICS MADE NO MORE THAN FOUR POUNDS A WEEK.

Ottawa, Oct. 16—Pleas on behalf of munition workers who went overseas from Canada to work in British munitions factories during the war period were made before the special committee dealing with the soldiers' civil re-establishment yesterday. The taking of evidence by the committee was supposed tohave been formally concluded on Friday last, but representatives of the munition workers having arrived from Vancouver, it was decided to hear them.

They were Mr. D Kirkwood and Christopher Cropley, who stated that they represented five associations of overseas mechanics.

They asked for assistance in the form of a gratuity to make u pfor financial losses they had sustained in leaving Canada and also that they be placed on the same footing as members of the C. E. F in respect to the soldiers' settlement scheme or any new schemes accepted for the re-establishment of returned men.

Both witnesses told the committee that Hon. Dr. Barnes, who headed the British labor mission which came to Canada in 1915, had assured Canadian workmen that they would earn from four to ten pounds per week in British factories.

Many proceeded overseas, and when they arrived they received less than three pounds, and even in 1919 they had not been increased to four pounds. There was a separation allowance for men who left their wives in Canada only. Owing to the small pay, the sums workers were able to send home were insufficient, with the result that when they returned home they found their families in distress

EXAMINER SHOULD APOLOGIZE FOR INSULT TO JEWS OF PETERBORO

Rabbis in Toronto Absolve License Commissioner From all Blame in Connection With Supply of Liquor for Religious Rites—Everything According to Ritual.

The Examiner says it did not mean any offense to the Jews in Peterborough or Toronto when it asserted in effect as it did only the other day that they secured a supply of highly intoxicating liquor for sacramental purposes and that a solemn religious rite was turned into a drunken orgy. The Examiner further charged that the License Board permitted the Jews to secure this liquor, the object being to bribe them into supporting the Hearst Government.

Our blundering contemporary that falls into so many foolish errors by relaying slanders originated by other newspapers, when brought to book for this most silly of all breaks, weakly attempted to defend itself by asserting that it was the License Commissioners who were to blame. However, the fact remains that the Examiner charge that Jews became intoxicated at a church service and that it was possible to purchase their votes by a supply of liquor of high alsoholic standard.

With the rest of the newspapers with its own evil-speaking party leader, who slandered a race noted for their orthodoxy in religion, the Examiner can now apologize for its gratuitous insult. Today's Globe says:

"The following statement dealing with the charges made against the Provincial Government in connection with the supplying of "vishnick" to the Jews of Toronto for use during their recent religious festival has been sent to Sir William Hearst signed by the following rabbis: Rabbi Solomon Jacobs, Rabbi J. Weinreb, Rabbi J. Gordon and Rabbi W. H. Levy:

"We herewith solemnly declare:

"We have repeatedly asked the License Board, through Rabbi Jacobs, for permission to use wine for religious purposes during festivals.

"This permission was always granted, the only stipulation being that each family should only receive sufficient for religious purposesd.

"The suggestion that privilege was granted us for the Feast of the Tabernacles with a view of securing votes or for any other political purpose is untrue.

"We took what we believed were proper precautions to carry out the instructions given us by the License Board, and if any individual succeeded in obtaining more than he was entitled to, it was through his own deception and trickery, for which we are not responsible.

"We sincerely regret that a malicious construction has been placed on the action of the License Board, as we assume all responsibility and acted, throughout, in perfect good faith.

"We know as a fact that in the United States, since prohibition came into effect, Commissioner Roper of the U.S.A. Internal Revenue Department has issued regulations for similar sacramental purposes under the War-time Prohibition Law of the United States.

"According to our Jewish ritual the Kidduah is looked upon as obligatory in the home, and therefore, an act of Divine Worship."

U. S. DELAYING PEACE TREATY WITH TURKEY

WILL AMERICA SHARE BURDENS OF CIVILIZATION, ASKS LLOYD GEORGE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 17.—In his speech at Sheffield last night, Prime Minister Lloyd George attributed delay in conclusion of the peace treaty with Turkey to uncertainty as to the attitude of the United States.

To Share or Not.

It was impossible, he said ,to settle the destiny of Turkey before knowing whether the United States was going to share the burdens of civilisation ouiside of the United States.

SAYS CHURCH HAS WANDERED ASTRAY

ANGLICAN BISHOP OBJECTS TO PRESENT DAY TENDENCY TO MODERNISM.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 17. — The House of Bishops, in session here, accepted the resignation of Rt. Rev. F. J Kinsman, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Delaware. In accepting the resignation, the governing body divested Bishop Kinsman of his authority over the Delaware diocese, but did not depose him from the ministry of the Church.

Bishop Kinsman, in his letter of resignation, said he had come to feel that the Protestant Episcopal Church had "strayed in the by-paths of modernism" and that it no longer stood for the pure Apostolic faith which, he understood, it did when he was ordained.

It is understood that Bishop Kinsman intends to enter the Roman Catholic Church.

NEW FACTORY STARTS SOON

ENGINEER WATSON LAYING OUT FLOOR AREA FOR $40,000 WORTH MACHINERY

Mr. Watson, engineer for the Nashua Gum and Coated Paper Co., has been in town the past couple of days, going over the late Stickney motor building, in which this company proposes to locate. Mr. Watson is pleased with the premises in every way and he has been busy laying out the floor area in preparation for the $35,0000 or $40,000 worth of machinery his company intend installing, should their bylaw carry on October 24th. It is the intention to start operations at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Watson has just returned from England, after superintending the establishment of a branch of the Nashua Gum and Coated Paper Co. at Leicester. He also superintended the erection of a factory for this company at Middletown, Ohio, three years ago, and that branch is now doubling the capacity of its plant.

CONSERVATIVE RALLY TOMORROW EVENING

Miss Constance Boulton of Toronto will address a meeting of the electors in Victoria Hall, George street, tomorrow (Saturday) evening, October 18th, at 8 o'clock. All women voters are asked to attend to hear the questions of the day discussed by one of themselves. Miss Boulton, who has been heard in this city before, is one of the best speakers before the Canadian public. Mr. R. J. Soden, the Conservative candidate, and others will also address the meeting. Miss Boulton will be able to give valuable instruction to the new voters as to how to exercise the franchise.

PREMIER HEARST ADDRESSES THE ELECTORS

In a statement to the public issued today, Premier Hearst says: "I earnestly commend to the electors of Ontario the duty of going to the polls on Monday and choosing by their votes the Government to administer the affairs of this Province during the next four years. An unusual number of candidates have presented themselves, but the electors who wish the Government to be sustained will have no difficulty in making their choice. They have only to remember that every vote cast against a recognized supporter of the Government is a vote against the Government and its policies. I would like to emphasize the fact that a Government can be sustained only by the election of men who have confidence in it, and that to be strong and efficient a Government must be assured a substantial majority in the Legislature. I ask the electors to bear this in mind when they mark their ballots.

"This will be the first opportunity for the women of Ontario to vote in a general election for members of the Legislative Assembly, and I urge them to take full advantage of it. My pledge to the electors is that we will, if sustained, give clean, strong, progressive and patriotic government to Ontario in the interests of the whole people.

"W. H. HEARST."

MESSAGE FROM ABOVE TELLS HOW TO VOTE

DON'T EXPOSE YOUR OWN CHILD TO THE TEMPTATION OF BOOZE.

An aeroplane flew over the city today and dropped the following aerogram, instructing the electors of Peterborough how to vote on the referendum in the interests of the province and of Canada's youth:

"To the voters of Ontario:

"October 20th is your day!

"You will not allow Ontario to become the slum of this continent.

"Will you expose your own child to the temptation and misery of booze?

"Your vote will decide! For home and country.

"Mark your ballot as shown on opposite side of this message.

"ANDREW S. GRANT."

On the reverse side of the message was printed a facsimile of the referendum ballot with four "x's" marked emphatically in the "no" column.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Two automobiles collided at the corner of Charlotte and Stewart streets yesterday afternoon. G. J. Topling was driving west on Charlotte street and endeavored to turn south on Stewart street when a car, driven by Harold Catson, proceeding east on Charlotte street, collided with him. Slight damage was done to each car. No persons were hurt.

MEAT PACKERS WILL APPEAL

TO TAKE THEIR CASE BEFORE O'CONNOR OF OTTAWA

Toronto, Oct. 17—In an attempt to secure a modification of the order of Judge Robson effecting the price of pork on November 1, representatives of the meat packing industry will confer with the Board of Commerce in Ottawa next week.

"We believe," said Mr. J. S. McLean, president of the Canadian Meat Packers, Ltd., "that at the conference last Saturday we were able to convince Judge Robson that the order should be modified, and that regulation of the industry at the present time was the last thing that should be resorted to. We feel if we see Mr. O'Connor we will get further consideration."

WOMAN DIES IN FIRE

Oil Stove Exploded and Burned John Ross' Home Near Ingersoll.

Ingersoll, Oct. 17—In a fire which followed an explosion of an oil fuel stove in the house of John Ross, three miles east of here, Mrs. McClure, aged 90, an aunt of Mrs. Ross, was overcome by smoke and died soon after being carried out. She had got outside but went back possibly in the belief that she was needed to rescue others of the family. The house was destroyed.

ENNISMORE VOTERS TO SUPPORT THE ONTARIO TEMPERANCE ACT

Pioneer Dry Township Has Been Under Total Prohibition Since 1881—Meeting Last Night Addressed by R. J. Soden and V. J. McElderry.

Howevr they may go politically, one thing is certain—the voters of Ennismore will sustain the Ontario Temperance Act next Monday by an overwhelming majority. Ennismore is the banner township, so far as temperance is concerned, the pioneer municipality in prohibition. It has been dry since 1881, and the temperance sentiment has kept pace with the development of the township. Not only was it the first township in the county to adopt local option in its then form, but was one of the first municipalities in the Dominion of Canada to do so.

The credit for this reform belongs to the late Father Kielty of sacred memory in that parish, which has been looked after by so many illustrious pastors, two of whom were invested with the mitre. When Father Kielty first went to Ennismore there were three barrooms in the township, and in those days all rural hotels did a thriving trade in liquor. Father Kielty never despaired, never wavered in his work, until the door of the last barroom was closed and the township was under prohibition.

There was, however, always a weak spot in the line of moral defence. The barrooms of the city were to a certain extent a menace to the successful operation of the law in Ennismore. But three years ago this menace was removed and the people of Ennismore have not been slow to note and appreciate the improvement. The prohibitory law is safe so far as that flourishing township is concerned.

Mr. R. J. Soden, Conservative candidate, and Mr. V. J. McElderry addressed a meeting in the Ennismore town hall last night and were given an attentive hearing by an audience that was large considering the condition of the weather. Among those who listened to the addresses was Rev. Fr. McAuley, pastor of St. Martin's church. The chair was occupied by Mr. John B. Galvin, who spoke highly of Mr. Soden as a citizen and bespoke for him the consideration of the electors.

Mr. McElderry spoke at length on the temperance question, and Mr. Soden discussed all the important issues figuring in the present campaign, making special reference to the educational policy of the Hearst Government, a policy the results of which are manifested in the excellent educational system of Ennismore with its separate and continuation schools, which rank among the best in Ontario and the maintenance of which has been made possible by generous legislative grants.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1919.

SUPPOSING YOU VOTE "YES"

THE MEMBERS of the Liberty League are so set on the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act and upon the restoration of the liquor traffic, that in their propaganda they advise the electors to vote "yes" on all four questions. That is because which, if adopted by the majority, would lead to complications and would leave a government opposed to the principles of prohibition with practically a free hand to reinstate the traffic in almost any form. No man by voting "yes" on all four questions could really express his own opinions because no man can possibly believe in the repeal of the Act, the sale of beer in Government agencies, the sale of the same beverage in standard hotels and the sale of beer and distilled liquors in Government shops. In the event of a majority of the electors voting "yes" four times what would be the real verdict of the people?

But an affirmative majority for the first question disposes of all the others. In that event, according to a provision in the Act itself, the old license law, the open bar and shop under private ownership will be automatically restored. Hartley Dewart is quoted as saying that if the Liberal party is returned to power the bar-rooms will be knows better than this and knows that as Premier, with the Act repealed, he would have no alternative. He stands pledged to carry out the wishes of the people.

The electors will not be tricked by the Liberty League. If a voter is in favor of an Amended Act, beer sold in hotels or in Government shops, or if he stands for what the leaguers say they are after ,the Government-owned shop, the only way he can help to secure any of these is by voting "no" on the first question

The referendum ballot is really a simple affair. It may at first sight look complicated but that is only because that it provides for the expression of four different opinions. Suppose a voter is in favor of the sale of beer in Government agencies. All he has to do is to vote "yes" on the second question and "no" on all the others. If he votes "yes" on the third question and "no" on the others he has declared in favor of the sale of beer in standard hotels, subject to a local option vote. If he votes "yes" on the fourth and "no" on the others he will have recorded his verdict for a Government-control shop, where all kinds of liquor may be obtained by the man who has money to purchase it. The members of the Liberty League are simply trying to hoodwink the electors.

Every elector is entitled to vote as he chooses, one "no" and three "yeas", or vice versa. But the voter who really wants to see the Act sustained, and present conditions continued, will make no mistake, he will render his verdict all the clearer, if he votes in the negative four times. Such an expression of opinion can be interpreted in only one way—the elector's desire to see shop, bar and club closed with Government dispensaries where liquor can be obtained for medicial purposes on a doctor's order still maintained.

Vote as the Liberty League suggests and a majority in their favor would open a wide field for Governmental manipulation of the liquor traffic. And the intelligent voter will remember that it is useless to sustain the Act unless there is placed in power an administration that can be relied upon to give faithful effect to the popular verdict.

MR. HALL'S HOBBY

IN EVERY political campaign in which he interests himself, either directly or on behalf of a friend, Mr. R. J. Hall invariably has a hobby. Two years ago he attempted to cloud the main question at issue by confining all his energies to preaching greater production. His claim was that what the Canadians in the trenches needed was more food and not reinforcements. That campaign has now passed into history but Mr. Hall is out again working for the election of Mr. G. A. Gillespie, a strange combination surely.

In his address at Lakefield recently Mr. Hall spoke as a socialist. He made the air red by the venom of his attack upon the extravagance of the Provincial Government in building and maintaining a residence for the Lieutenant-Governor, a residence which is after all only in keeping with the purpose for which it is intended and with the wealth and importance of the Province of Ontario. James Simpson, of Toronto, or any other recognized Socialist, could hardly have dealt more vigorously, and venomously, with the subject that Mr. Hall handled. If Mr. Hall really intends to pose as a Socialist, if it is now his mission to erect a new social structure, to establish a really democratic standard, he should lay hold of some other born of what appears to him to be a dilemma. He should begin his work of reform at the other end of the proposition and start his structure at the foundation instead of first dealing with the roof. In other words, why not have the constitution of the country amended so as to do away altogether with such functionaries as Lieutenant-Governor. In this way he can remove the necessity for providing these officials with princely wages and suitable dwelling places.

Mr. Hall, as a private citizen, maintains a palatial home in the residential section of the city where silk stockings are commonly supposed to be the badge of social greatness. The Government mansion in Toronto to which he so vigorously objects is just as much the property of the people of Ontario as Mr. Hall's residence is his own personal possession. Money invested in a residence is not so much capital thrown away. Mr. Hall's residence represents part of his estate. The Government house remains as the asset of the Province. The coal that is required to heat it would not relieve the fuel situation if it was distributed fairly among the lay residents of Ontario. After all it is rather a democratic institution than otherwise as the reports of functions held there and appearing in the society papers would show. Others than the titled are made welcome. "Lady Pork," the creature of Mr. Hall's sarcastic imagination meets on terms of apparent social equality plain Mrs. Jones or Mrs. Smith. Mr. Hall has on occasion, if we mistake not, appeared at these social functions himself.

But the voters of West Peterborough would, we venture, much rather hear Mr. Hall speak on a topic in which they are more directly interested. Suppose he drops this red flag propaganda long enough to take his neighbors into his confidence and to let them know how he proposes to vote on the referendum. His position on his subject is a matter of speculation. The people are inclined to wonder how a man of his suspected attitude on the temperance question can take up the cudgels on behalf of Mr. Gillespie. Of course ,if Mr. Hall does not care to make a confession of faith there is no law to compel him to do so. He can take Hartley Dewart as an example and claim an illustrious precedent. But the people are really interested, rather more so than they are in Mr. Hall's rather detailed inventory of the furnishings of the mansion of power over which "Lady Pork," whoever that may be presides.

MR. WEARING AND LABOR

"LOOK WHAT the Liberal party did for you in the way of labor legislation when they were in power at Ottawa," says Mr. Joseph Wearing, addressing himself to the workingmen of West Peterborough.

But why should Mr. Wearing mar the hilarity of the nation, why risk exciting a riot by calling up a subject that is certain to arouse the indignation of the class whose cause he volunteers to espouse? The Liberals indeed did pass laws govering workingmen's conditions. But this legislation is not now and never was popular with the wage-earners. Naturally so, too, it would appear since the outstanding feature of the law, sponsored by the present Federal leader of the Liberals, is the clause which makes it a criminal offence for a workingman to strike for better pay except upon arbitrary and all but impossible conditions. But this seems to be Mr. Wearing's idea of state beneficence.

What has Labor to expect from the Liberals in the light of experience" Even the local Liberal organ cannot give them a fair show. In its issue of last night it publishes in parallel columns the labor platform of [illegible] and the alleged platform of the Independent Labor party. The latter is so censored and mutilated that only a bare skeleton is given. No one expects The Examiner to be fair, but from Mr. Wearing something better is to be expected in the way of information. The Liberals are locally fighting Labor. What has the workingman to expect from such a party if it ever regains power?

Mr. Wearing, when he is not talking of Labor, is given to charge that the members of the Hearst Cabinet are asleep. With men like Mr. Wearing this inference is perhaps justified. He simply mistakes the silence that always accompanies efficient and concentrated effort for slumber. The members of the Government are in the habit of doing business without a brass band accompaniment. They are not addicted to tearing holes in the atmosphere with oratorical artillery. Mr. Wearing seems unable to realize that it is impossible for a man to be silent unless he is deep in dreamland.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

ONCE AGAIN—vote for a candidate as well as for the referendum.

• • • • •

TODAY there are just two classes of people in Ontario —those who play the game fairly and Liberty Leaguers.

• • • • •

LONG on temperance but short on prohibition is the record of the Liberals, and between the two there is a decided difference.

• • • • •

NOTHING, if not alliterative, the Liberals have adopted as a slogan, "Dewart or Die," thus supplying safe and easy alternative.

• • • • •

WHAT HAS become of the old-fashioned politics' orator who viewed with alarm or who was constantly hearing rumors in the air?

• • • • •

JUST NOW the election monopolizes public attention. With that out of the way the people can take up the matter of the new Victory Loan.

• • • • •

THE PARADOXICAL PHRASE. "his friend the enemy," takes on a new significance in the light of recent political happenings over the way.

• • • • •

FOR Hearst, Soden and prohibition. For Gillespie, Dewart and heaven above knows what so far is the temperance question is concerned.

• • • • •

MR. DEWART may promise that if the Liberals are returned to power the open bar will never come back, but his party is the recognized champion of the wide open shop.

• • • • •

"WHY SHOULD any Liberal prohibitionist go back on a Liberal candidate who has fought for temperance for years?" asks the Toronto Globe. Why, indeed, provided such a candidate can be found.

• • • • •

IT IS ALWAYS half-way measures for the Liberals. They may have favored temperance while in opposition, but there is a vast difference between a temperance compromise and prohibition.

• • • • •

MR. GILLESPIE'S election might give the Premiership to Hartley Dewart, and the latter in that event would have no difficulty in selecting from the party Cabinet members ready to do his will.

• • • • •

MR. HARTLEY DEWART may favor temperance, but never prohibition. So long as liquor is sold it matters little whether the business is carried on in barroom or shop.

• • • • •

IF THERE WAS a spread of one hundred per cent between the buying and selling prices of the school books which Mr. Soden handles, how long would it be before the Examiner would demand an investigation? Or if Mr. Soden was selling pies, at 10 cents a cut to an editor with a tooth for dainties?

SIR HENRY DRAYTON TALKS ON NEED FOR VICTORY LOAN

Toronto, Sir Henry Drayton, Minister of Finance, received the assurance of the new Ontario division of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, which was organized to-day, that the members will do all in their power to help the Victory Loan to succeed.

The Minister was the speaker at the organization luncheon in the King Edward Hotel to-day, when Mr. George H. Douglas, of Hamilton, was elected chairman of the division and John R. Shaw, of Woodstock, vice chairman. Following the luncheon the members went into executive session to complete the details of the organization.

In his address Sir Henry Drayton said:

"Your business because it is yours and the country's business does not require very much preparation to talk of. Everyone's troubles appear the greatest, but there are some troubles which are everyone's and some business which is every one's, and Canada's prosperity is one of these.

"There are two thoughts to leave with you: Will we look after our financial interests? This is a war loan and must be applied to our war obligations. There is one thing, Canada must keep clean and hold her record high.

"Paying our debts is one thing and carrying on is another. Business must go on. We must continue to produce to 100 per cent. or even 110 per cent, and we must sell our surplus goods. How are we to sell?

"The country is committed to $125,000,000 of foreign credits. Every red-blooded Canadian wants to see our products go overseas and believes that old John Bull will go on and pay his debts in the future as he did in the past.

[illegible] some time and see that Canadian exports go out. The C. M. A. is going to do its best to see that this loan is a success, and that "Canada Limited" is a success, and the factories are going to be left open to Canadian workmen."

WORLD CONGRESS OF WOMEN OCT. 23

NATIONAL WOMAN'S TRADE LEAGUE UNION OF U. S. TO BE HOSTESS'

DELEGATES FROM EVERY LAND

PREPARING FOR LABOR GREAT EVENT AT WASHINGTON NEXT WEEK.

From the box factories, the boot hoe, glove, doll and candy manufacturing companies, from the switchboards, the type-writers, and from behind lunch counters, even from back of footlights, all sorts of business girls will flock to Washington as delegates from their union to the Working Women to be held in Washington, U. S. A., the week beginning Oct. 23.

Mrs. Raymond Robins of Chicago, president of the National Women's Trade Union League of America, is in Washington making preparations for the congress, which is to be held a week before the international labor congress to be summoned by the president of the United States.

Mrs. Robins' Call to Women.

"Since women must now assume responsibilities in international affairs we believe that a conference of the working women of the world alone can guarantee mutual faith and joint action which shall make for universal justice," said Mrs. Robins in a call issued to the woman trade unionists of America. "Such questions as: What restrictions are at present imposed by law on the employment of women in industries making lead, arsenic, mercury, or phosphorus? Are women properly safeguarded in factories where unhealthy processes are employed? At what age are children employed? Is the eight hour day enforced? will be discussed.

HOME-MADE BREAD

Home bread-making reduces the high cost of living by lessening the amount of expensive meats required to supply the necessary nourishment to the body. The increased nutritious value of bread made in the home with should be sufficient incentive to the thoughtful housewife to give this important food item the attention to which it is justly entitled. Bread made with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other.

ANOTHER TALK WITH WOMEN VOTERS

Mrs. L. A. Hamilton of Toronto who has been consistently independent in politics, and who was to have been a candidate in the coming elections, representing women independently of party, has decided not to run. Mrs. Hamilton gives two reasons. One is that her health does not permit her undertaking the task. The other is that, confident the referendum prohibition will carry by the women's vote. Mrs. Hamilton declares that, "the Government which gave us prohibition must needs have a good strong majority," and she does not wish to split the vote. party politics, she thus expresses her confidence in the Hearst Government.

One of the ideals of the Hon. Dr. Cody, Minister of Education, is that patriotism should be taught in the schools. Women throughout the province have always recognized the importance of this. The Daughters of the Empire and other loyal women's organisations have advocated it, and have done much towards that end. They will appreciate this stand of the Minister of Education, and will be eager not only to see him in parliament,— since his seat is assured with no one opposing him,— but to see the Hearst Government which retained him as Minister of Education, returned, so that he may continue in his great work.

Every woman who has the privilege of voting should go to the polls next Monday, to give the candidates of the Ontario Government the majority that Government deserves in recognition of its record or war service. By piling up a big majority, the Opposition, will realize that the will of the people is behind Sir William Hearst.

The Hearst Government has passed legislation regarding social diseases, far in advance of any other country. Every thinking woman realizes how important such measures are, and how greatly to be trusted in matters of public welfare, is the Government which takes definate action on this matter.

The only woman running in Ottawa as a parliamentary candidate, though independent, is actually running on the planks of the Conservative party platform. Even a woman whose honesty of purpose could not be disputed, can find nothing better than the Hearst Government has given in the past, or is pledged to give in the future.

The same fact is true of a Liberal woman running in Toronto. This is Mrs. Bundy, president of the Toronto Women's Liberal Club. Even Mrs. Bundy has taken as her platform, practically all the things for which the Hearst party stands, or which it has enacted.

Proper provision for the insane and the mentally defective has been undertaken and very largely achieved by the Ontario Government.

VOTERS WILL NOT BE CHALLENGED

UNLESS NAME'S NOT ON LIST NO QUESTION ON DISLOYALTY BASIS

Toronto, Oct. 17—The fact that under the Disqualification Act of 1919 provision is made for the disqualification for ten years, of defaulters under the M. S. A., and of persons convicted of treasonable offences, is being used in some quarters to support a rumor that an attempt will be made to challenge persons of apparently military age who are believed to be opposed to the Government.

When seen Mr. Allen Dymond, Chief Election Clerk, declared that there was no possibility of anything of the sort taking place. He further stated that no instructions had been given by any person to challenge the right of a citizen to vote, unless his name were not on the lists. He had heard nothing of any duplicate exemption certificates being issued.

No man objects to a whistling girl,
Although it's not permissible
But how could man do otherwise,
When the pucker is so kissable.

A genius is a man who can do almost anything but make a living.

"We are anxious to make our first congress a success so that in turn we may take our full responsibility in the International labor congress immediately following."

Hostess to Foreign Women.

Unlike the international labor congress the working woman's congress is not called by the government, but is called by the unions. The National Woman's Trade Union league will be hostess to representatives of foreign unions. Each country is entitled to send ten women, and to ten votes in the congress. One delegate from each country will be designated to act on the executive committee of the congress, which is scheduled to meet just previous to its opening.

The British woman trade unionists, through the standing joint committee on industrial organization, asked the National Woman's Trade Union League of America to be hostess at the congress, and the delegates to the congress will be the guests of the American trade unionists.

SUPPOSING YOU VOTE "YES"

THE MEMBERS of the Liberty League are so set on the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act and upon the restoration of the liquor traffic, that in their propaganda they advise the electors to vote "yes" on all four questions. That is a course which, if adopted by the majority, would lead to complications and would leave a government opposed to the principles of prohibition with practically a free hand to reinstate the traffic in almost any form. No man by voting "yes" on all four questions could really express his own opinions because no man can possibly believe in the repeal of the Act, the sale of beer in Government agencies, the sale of the same beverage in standard hotels and the sale of beer and distilled liquors in Government shops. In the event of a majority of the electors voting "yes" four times what would be the real verdict of the people?

But an affirmative majority for the first question disposes of all the others. In that event, according to a provision in the Act itself, the old license law, the open bar and shop under private ownership will be automatically restored. Hartley Dewart is quoted as saying that if the Liberal party is returned to power the bar-rooms will be open in every city, town and village in the province. He knows better than this and knows that as Premier, with the Act repealed, he would have no alternative. He stands pledged to carry out the wishes of the people.

The electors will not be tricked by the Liberty League. If a voter is in favor of an Amended Act, beer sold in hotels or in Government shops, or if he stands for what the leaguers say they are after, the Government-owned shop, the only way he can help to secure any of these is by voting "no" on the first question.

The referendum ballot is really a simple affair. It may at first sight look complicated but that is only because that it provides for the expression of four different opinions. Suppose a voter is in favor of the sale of beer in Government agencies. All he has to do is to vote "yes" on the second question and "no" on all the others. If he votes "yes" on the third question and "no" on the others he has declared in favor of the sale of beer in standard hotels, subject to a local option vote. If he votes "yes" on the fourth and "no" on the others he will have recorded his verdict for a Government-control shop, where all kinds of liquor may be obtained by the man who has money to purchase it. The members of the Liberty League are simply trying to hoodwink the electors.

Every elector is entitled to vote as he chooses, one "no" and three "yes's", or vice versa. But the voter who really wants to see the Act sustained, and present conditions continued, will make no mistake, he will render his verdict all the clearer, if he votes in the negative four times. Such an expression of opinion can be interpreted in only one way—the elector's desire to see shop, bar and club closed with Government dispensaries where liquor can be obtained for medicial purposes on a doctor's order still maintained.

Vote as the Liberty League suggests and a majority in their favor would open a wide field for Governmental manipulation of the liquor traffic. And the intelligent voter will remember that it is useless to sustain the Act unless there is placed in power an administration that can be relied upon to give faithful effect to the popular verdict.

MR. HALL'S HOBBY

IN EVERY political campaign in which he interests himself, either directly or on behalf of a friend, Mr. R. R. Hall invariably has a hobby. Two years ago he attempted to cloud the main question at issue by confining all his energies to preaching greater production. His claim was that what the Canadians in the trenches needed was more food and not reinforcements. That campaign has now passed into history but Mr. Hall is out again working for the election of Mr. G. A. Gillespie, a strange combination surely.

In his address at Lakefield recently Mr. Hall spoke like a socialist. He made the air red by the venom of his attack upon the extravagance of the Provincial Government in building and maintaining a residence for the Lieutenant-Governor, a residence which is after all only in keeping with the purpose for which it is intended and with the wealth and importance of the Province of Ontario. James Simpson, of Toronto, or any other recognized Socialist, could hardly have dealt more vigorously, and venomously, with the subject that Mr. Hall handled.

If Mr Hall really intends to pose as a Socialist, if it is now his mission to erect a new social structure, to establish a really democratic standard, he should lay hold of the other horn of what appears to him to be a dilemma. He should begin his work of reform at the other end of the proposition and start his structure at the foundation instead of first dealing with the roof. In other words, why not have the constitution of the country amended so as to do away altogether with such functions as Lieutenant-Governor. In this way he can remove the necessity for providing these officials with living wages and suitable dwelling places.

Mr. Hall, as a private citizen, maintains a palatial home in the residential section of the city where silk stockings are commonly supposed to be the badge of social greatness. The Government mansion in Toronto to which he so vigorously objects is just as much the property of the people of Ontario as Mr. Hall's residence is his own personal possession. Money invested in a residence is not so much capital thrown away. Mr. Hall's residence represents part of his estate. The Government house remains as the asset of the Province. The coal that is required to heat it would not relieve the fuel situation if it was distributed fairly among the lay residents of Ontario. After all it is rather a democratic institution than otherwise as the reports of functions held there and appearing in the society papers would show. Others than the titled are made welcome. "Lady Pork," the creature of Mr. Hall's sarcastic imagination meets on terms of apparent social equality plain Mrs. Jones or Mrs. Smith. Mr. Hall has on occasion, if we mistake not, appeared at these social functions himself.

But the voters of West Peterborough would, we venture, much rather hear Mr. Hall speak on a topic in which they are more directly interested. Suppose he drops this red flag propaganda long enough to take his neighbors into his confidence and to let them know how he proposes to vote on the referendum. His position on his subject is a matter of speculation. The people are inclined to wonder how a man of his suspected attitude on the temperance question can take up the cudgels on behalf of Mr. Gillespie. Of course if Mr. Hall does not care to make a confession of faith there is no law to compel him to do so. He can take Hartley Dewart as an example and claim an illustrious precedent. But the people are really interested, rather more so than they are in Mr. Hall's rather detailed inventory of the furnishings of the mansion of power over which "Lady Pork," whoever that may be presides.

MR. WEARING AND LABOR

"LOOK WHAT the Liberal party did for you in the way of labor legislation when they were in power at Ottawa," says Mr. Joseph Wearing, addressing himself to the workingmen of West Peterborough.

But why should Mr. Wearing mar the hilarity of the nation, why risk exciting a riot by calling up a subject that is certain to arouse the indignation of the class whose cause he volunteers to espouse? The Liberals indeed did pass laws covering workingmen's conditions. But this legislation is not now and never was popular with the wage-earners. Naturally so, too, it would appear since the outstanding feature of the law, sponsored by the present Federal leader of the Liberals, is the clause which makes it a criminal offence for a workingman to strike for better pay except upon arbitrary and all but impossible conditions. But this seems to be Mr. Wearing's idea of state beneficence.

What has Labor to expect from the Liberals in the light of experience? Even the local Liberal organ cannot give them a fair show. In its issue of last night publishing in parallel columns the labor platform of the Independent Labor party and the alleged platform of the Independent Labor party. The latter is so censored and mutilated that only a bare skeleton is given. No one expects The Examiner to be fair, but from Mr. Wearing something better is to be expected in the way of information. The Liberals are locally fighting Labor. What has the workingman to expect from such a party if it ever regains power?

Mr. Wearing, when he is not talking of Labor, is given to charge that the members of the Hearst Cabinet are asleep. With men like Mr. Wearing this inference is perhaps justified. He simply mistakes the silence that always accompanies efficient and concentrated effort for slumber. The members of the Government are in the habit of doing business without a brass band accompaniment. They are not addicted to tearing holes in the atmosphere with oratorical artillery. Mr. Wearing seems unable to realize that it is impossible for a man to be efficient unless he is deep in dreamland.

Conclusive Findings of Interest to Ontario Voters

IN a news despatch to the Toronto World last Saturday, announcement was made for the first time of the result of exhaustive tests made by Professors H. L. Hollingworth and R. S. Woodworth of Columbia University, New York, into the effects of 2.75% Beer on the human system.

The tests were made upon six students of the law school over a period of twelve days. A corps of assistants, men and women, collaborated with the two professors of psychology in conducting the elaborate experiments that had been devised.

"The effect of the beer on the students was said to have been almost negligible," says the despatch.

Word has just come from Wisconsin that as the result of a test case, the courts of that State have declared beer of 2.75% alcoholic content by weight measure to be non-intoxicating. As a result of this decision 2.75% beer is now on general sale throughout Wisconsin.

The 2.75 per cent. beer proven non-intoxicating by the professors of Columbia University, and declared non-intoxicating by the Wisconsin Courts, is .24 per cent. stronger than the Beer of the Ballot—the 2.51 per cent. beer for which you are asked to vote October 20th. These findings must be conclusive to every man and woman who has an open mind—who is willing to vote on the truth as proven.

How absurd it is then for the Referendum Committee to continue to declare that this mild and light beverage is intoxicating.

DRINK 2.75 BEER AND REMAIN SOBER

Tests to Determine Intoxicating Qualities Made on Columbia Students.

New York, Oct. 10—The story of how two Columbia professors, using the laboratories of the university, tested the effect of 2.75 per cent beer in studying the result to be used as evidence in a suit to force the government to legalize the manufacture and sale of such beer, came to light yesterday, after having been kept secret for more than three months. The effect of the beer on the students was said to have been almost negligible.

The tests, in which six students of the law school were used, were held in the early part of June under the supervision of Professors H. L. Hollingworth and R. S. Woodworth, both of the department of psychology. A corps of assistants, men and women, helped in conducting the elaborate tests that had been devised. The experiments were designed to show whether 2.75 beer, drunk to the limit of a man's capacity, would make him intoxicated or would affect in any degree his steadiness, his ability to co-ordinate, or his power to think rapidly and clearly.

The experiments lasted for 12 days. The same procedure was followed each day. In the morning the students drank as much water as they could hold, and then were tested to learn their normal steadiness and quickness of mind.

In the afternoon, without having eaten anything, they were given as much beer as they could drink. The same tests were then given as in the morning.

The experiments were in nine parts, each designed to determine some particular effect of the beer. During each day's test the students were not allowed to eat or smoke.

This is the non-intoxicating beer that Labor in particular is demanding. Is there any fair or just reason why you should stand in the way of the working men obtaining their favorite beverage? Just because the beverage is labelled "Beer", is no reason for you voting against it. This is not a time for prejudice but a give-and-take spirit that sees the "other fellow's" viewpoint. Give the working men the more palatable and nourishing, yet non-intoxicating beer they are asking for.

MOUNT PLEASANT

Mary Jane Jackson.

It is with the deepest regret that we this week chronicle the death of one of our most respected residents in the person of Mary Jane Jackson, widow of the late David Finley, of Emily.

The deceased lady who lived with her daughter, Mrs. John Handley, at Mt. Pleasant, left her home a few weeks ago in apparent good health, to visit at the home of her brother, Mr. Harry Jackson, Gilmore Street, Peterboro, and was then stricken down with heart trouble, from which she never recovered, and passed quietly away to her eternal rest on Saturday, Oct. 11th.

The late Mrs Finley was born in the township of Cavan, 81 years ago, and was the daughter of the late John and Maria Jackson of that township, and on the twenty third of December, 1862 was married to the late David Finley, of Emily, where she resided up to his demise, 15 years ago, when she went to live with her daughter, Mrs. J. Handley, Mt. Pleasant.

The deceased lady was a consistent member of the church of England, and was beloved by all who knew her, for her lovable and charitable disposition.

The funeral which was very largely attend, took place from the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. John Handley, to Emily cemetery, on Oct. 13th., inst., and was followed by a large concourse of sorrowing friends.

Personals.

Mr. Herman McLean of Toronto, was home for the holiday.

Mr. Jos. Rosenburg and bride spent thanksgiving with his mother.

Mrs. Keen and daughter, Audrey, of Toronto, who has been visiting at the home of her mother, Mrs. Jos. Lowe, returned to her home to-day.

A member from here attended the [illegible] day night, to see "Mickey."

Mr. Harry Pamleeon was a visitor to Peterboro on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Finley returned to their home on Wednesday, after attending the funeral of his mother.

SPOOKY HOLLOWEEN

From the requests for Halloween party suggestions I think, writes Eleanor Glover, there are going to be parties galore on this most fascinating of days. We all love mystery and the favors are so alluring this season, the shops so full of ghosts and witches, it is going to be hard to forego the pleasure of entertaining in some way.

Once upon a time the party I am about to describe was given and was so successful I am certain the ideas will be welcome. The invitations bore this jingle done in fantastic letters, with pen and ink line sketches of witches, ghosts and goblins scattered about the card:

"When you arrive next Friday night,
Oh be prepared to tell
The worst adventure, fearful fright,
That ever you befell."

Address, day, date and hour followed.

The rooms were decorated with autumn leaves, brilliant pumpkin jack o' lanterns and candles shaded with fantastic black cats on orange paper. The guests with much mystery were conducted into a "chamber of horrors" (an unoccupied upstairs room), the walls were hung with sheets and on them had been pasted black cats, bats, owls, spiders and witches. The lights were shaded with a bluish green paper, which cast a ghostly, ghastly light, grewsome, indeed.

In this weird place the "horror" tales were told which evoked the desired shivers up and down one's spine. At a thrilling moment a real live black cat and her family of kittens appeared out of a bag, to the consternation of not only the guests, but the felines, which made a hasty exit.

A spooky hand was held out in greeting as each one entered this room and it was speedily dropped with exclamations of terror. To make this ghostly hand, take a white kid glove, stuff with fine sawdust or sand and lay on ice for several hours before using; fasten the hand to a round stick, which the ghost will hold and conceal under flowing sleeve draperies. This is an old trick, but new every year to some one. In fact, there are few new or "different" things to do on Halloween, but there is always a set of kiddies growing up to whom the old stunts are new and novel.

Here is the menu as served, which may be modified to suit the wishes of individual hostesses: Coffee, cider, crab-meat in the chafing dish, creamed and put on squares of buttered toast; cheese, olives, popcorn, apples, nuts, apple and celery salad in hollowed out red apples; gingerbread cookies in figures, and a mystery cake containing the usual prophetic symbols. On a stand by the fireplace here was a huge bowl filled with apples, raisins and chestnuts for roasting. It was all jolly and informal, as such parties should be.

Subdued.

"Is your cook a good one, Jones?"

"She says she is."

"What do you think about it?"

"Man, I've been married long enough to eat what's set before me and never think."

Tragedy in Three Scenes.

A poet wrote—
His color rose to such a height
That passion nearly choked him.
The compositor set it—
His collar rose to such a height.
That fashion nearly choked him.
Whereupon—
The poet's shoulder rose and he Sought out that chap, and soaked him.

PRINCE DOWN IN A SILVER MINE

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS GES LOYAL WELCOME FROM MINERS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cboalt, Oct. 16. — The Prince of Wales was today the guest of rugged miners of Cobalt and Timmins, and he was given a characteristic welcome and demonstrations of loyalty and enthusiasm.

With members of his party, the Prince descended five hundred feet in the O'Brien mine, to inspect its workings and he watched the evolution of silver from rough ore to valuable bars.

He left tonight for lower Ontario where he will be the guest of various cities and towns comencing with Hamilton tomorrow.

"What?"

"He makes the firefly."

GOOD NIGHT'S REST

President Wilson's Condition Improves Day by Day.

Washington, Oct. 16.—President Wilson, relieved from the glandular swelling, from which he suffered for two days, had a good night's rest last night, said a bulletin issued today.

The Path to Health

For many thousands of women the Path to Health has certainly been through Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When this great remedy was first introduced, and for many years after, skeptics frowned upon its curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by it has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands—doubt and skepticism have been swept away as by a mighty tidal wave, until today this purely vegetable medicine is recognized as the greatest remedy for woman's special ills in the world. This is because it is a wonderful tonic and reconstructor which acts directly and favorably upon the feminine organization and is a specific for that purpose.

AMERICANIZATION OF FOREIGN BORN

LEGISLATION TO THIS EFFECT WILL BE URGED BY SENATE COMMITTEE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Oct. 16.— The investigation of the steel strike by the Senate Labor Committee will be closed next week with the examination of witnesse on activities of radicals in the strike.

In making this announcement today, Chairman Kenyon said decision to close the inquiry next week was reached because of the Committee's desire to report to the Senate and expediate consideration of legislation for the Americanization of foreign born residents of the United States.

LOWELL'S PLANE DAMAGED BY FIRE

FLYING PARSON ALMOST A DAY'S FLIGHT IN THE VAN OF GREAT RACE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Oct. 16.—Almost half way across country on his return journey in the army airplane in the reliability and endurance race, Lieut. B. W. Maynard (flying parson) today was well in the lead of four other homeward-bound fliers, who had doubled back after soaring from coast to coast.

Lieut. Maynard, having reached Sydney, Nebraska, was almost a day's flight in the van of his nearest pursuer from San Francisco, and his closest opponent in the point of actual flying time for the trans-continental flight, Capt. Lowell Smith, temporarily was out of the contest, as his plane was damaged by fire last night shortly after he landed at the Buffalo control station.

OVER 8,000 VISIT NORWOOD FAIR

RECORD CROWD AND EXCELLENT EXHIBITS AND PROGRAMME DELIGHT VISITORS

Taking advantage of the ideal weather a record crowd of 8,000 attended the Norwood Fair, arriving from all directions. The farmers of the district were out in a body and a large number of people motored or took the train from Peterborough.

It was not only a record in attendance by over 1,000, but it was also a record for interest and excellent exhibits, The exhibits of poultry, live stock and agricultural products were considered the best in years and the excellent exhibits of fancy work and works of art attracted the interest of the women.

The races were keenly contested and fast, the large crowd going literally wild with delight over the close finishes.

The grand concert at night made a fitting close to an almost perfect day. Mr. H. Lewis, a provincial organizer of the G. W. V. spoke for about 10 minutes on the aim and objects of the association to help along the recently organized Norwood branch.

After-war conditions, and the telephone. No. 7

Progress in the Telephone Art

TELEPHONE apparatus, intricate and delicate as it is, requires continuous supervision and frequent replacement. It is constantly wearing out, becoming inadequate or obsolete.

Telephone switchboards, in particular, wear out in a comparatively short time and must be replaced. Research and inventions by telephone engineers are constantly producing improved apparatus. Much of the material taken out of service is mere junk.

Present-day development in telephone apparatus for the larger centres is along the line of mechanical, as opposed to manual, operation. Mechanically-operated central office equipment, under certain conditions, has proven its efficiency, and as soon as it is available, we must include it in our plans of replacement and extension. The immense changes that such development will necessitate must be faced and provided for.

Meanwhile, our aim is to keep service at the highest pre-war standard and thus to do our full part in the work of reconstruction.

BIG MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN AT Y.M.C.A.

TEAMS CHOSEN FOR THE GREAT RACE ACROSS CONTINENT

A great rally of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., took place last evening, when about 45 boys gathered to supper at 6:30. After each had settled accounts with the inner man the annual membership campaign for the Boys' Department was organized and launched.

The Campaign this year will take the form of a race across the Atlantic between the Olympic representing the White Star Line, sailing from Southampton, and the Empress of France of the C. P. R. Line sailing from Liverpool. Quite aptly the teams which are out to send the respective ships over the ocean—each resolved to be in the lead—are namde after the different departments of the vessel. The teams as chosen last evening are a sfollows:

Davidson, Capt.; Deck Hands, Howard Young, Capt.; Engineers, Horace Rose, Capt.; Stewards, Grant Miller, Capt.; Stokers, Not chosen.

Empress of France— Signallers, Bert Cowan, Capt.; Deck Hands, Jack Pulkinghorn, Capt.; Engineers, Harold Davidson, Capt.; Stewards, Bernard Graham, Capt.; Stokers, not chosen.

The campaign will last till the 25th. of the month and has for its objective 150 new or renewed memberships in the Boys' Department. The progress of the race may be seen daily on a large map hung on the wall of the Boys' Department. At the finish the side having the greater number of points shall be judged the winner. As the race proceeds the temporary results will be published for the information of the contestants and those interested.

DAD! YOUR HAIR IS FALLING FAST

"Danderine" will check that ugly dandruff and stop hair coming out

To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair usually stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Soon every hair on your scalp shows new life, vigor, brightness, thickness and more color.

PRESENTATION TO SCHOOL TEACHER

HILLIER WILLIAMSON APPRECIATED BY SUNDAY SCHOOL SCHOLARS OF OMEMEE

Recently a meeting of the Teachers and Officers of the Omemee Presbyterian Sabbath School was held for the purpose of planning the work for the new term, and also to say good bye to one of the late officers—Mr. Hillier Williamson, who has left to atend the Faculty of Education, of the University of Toronto.

After business was transacted two of the Sabbath School girls—Miss Jessie Lamb and Miss Gladys Smith entered the room, and Miss Jessie read the following address:—

Mr. C. Hillier Williamson,
Omemee, Ont.

Dear Hillier,

"We have learned that you are about to sever your connection with our Sunday School. Although it is with regret that we say good bye, we are glad to know that you are going out to a larger sphere of usefulness.

While you were amongst us you were always very willing to do your share in advancing God's work here. Whether it was organist at Sunday School or Church services, teaching a class, or whatever you were called upon to do, you were ever ready. It was indeed not necessary to call upon you as you were only too willing to take the lead. We remember when you were teaching in the North Country, you saw the need of a Sunday School, you were quick to organize one, thereby sowing seed which we know will bear fruit. Our Sunday School is indeed proud to be able to say that we had you for a member from your early childhood, and our prayers and good wishes will ever be for your continued success.

Please accept this umbrella as a slight token of our love and appreciation of your services, and we hope that wherever you are, each time you use it you will think of the Omemee Presbyterian Sunday School.

Signed on behalf of the School,
H. Lamb, Supt.; F. G. Landy, Asst. Supt.; Roy Windum, Secy.-Treas.

Miss G. Smith made the presentation. Mr. Hillier was completely taken by surprise, but thanked the School for the beautiful gift and hearty good wishes and promised he would often think of the old home Church and Sabbath School.

After the presentation refreshments were served and a very pleasant evening brought to a close.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE WEST RIDING OF PETERBOROUGH

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having again received the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Convention of West Peterborough as a candidate for Parliamentary honors at the ensuing Provincial Election, to be held on October 20th, I desire to solicit your hearty support in favor of my election.

WAR WORK

Having represented you for the past five years (war years), I can safely say that during that period, while every effort was being made to win the war—my record is known to you all, and on that record I ask you to judge me on the position I have taken on all measures affecting the war work.

TEMPERANCE QUESTION

When I was elected in 1914 I stated my views on the Temperance question during that campaign; I pledged myself to vote for Temperance legislation on all occasions brought forward by whatever party, and the record in the House will show that I carried out that pledge.

The Referendum vote is to be taken on the same date as the Provincial election, October 20, and if I am again elected your representative I promise to give my whole-hearted support to the Government elected to carry out the will of the people as expressed by their votes on the Referendum ballot.

AGRICULTURAL LEGISLATION.

During the years preceding 1914 every one agreed that the Department of Agriculture was asleep. The very first opportunity offered in the House I introduced the question of a forward movement in Agriculture, and, along with other Liberal members of the House, have earnestly advocated a more strenuous progressive policy in Agriculture.

The shortage of production, the problem of farm help, and the numerous perplexing questions affecting the farmer, cannot be solved unless we seriously consider the cause and apply the remedy.

During the past few years of unrest in the country, due mainly to excessive living costs, I have advocated that demonstration farms be established in different counties, and increased attention be paid to the education to be received in our Agricultural College and Experimental Farms, and that the knowledge gained at the Agricultural College be put into practice on Demonstration Farms, where a profit and loss account could be kept, and the costs of producing 100 pounds of milk or a pound of pork, or any of the many products of the farm, could be ascertained and established, such information being sadly lacking today. By such a system of education the farm would be looked upon as a business manufacturing plant, that would attract the best brains to the development of the greatest asset in Canada today—the farm. Our production is unlimited. The markets of the world are calling for food, and our own citizens living from hand to mouth at tremendous prices, wondering what the next six months have in store for them.

PROVINCIAL HIGHWAYS

Our highways need much repair. Auto and truck traffic is becoming daily increased, and we must develop a road policy which will make for hauling our produce to market as cheaply as possible. To this matter I promise to give my best thought.

EDUCATION

Education, I am pleased to say, is in the hands of a new Minister, in whom we hope for great things. I believe in a separate education for the city and rural districts. An education in the rural districts to educate the boy and girl in the great lessons of Agriculture, making two blades of grass grow where one grew before, developing the average cow of Ontario today, which gives 5,000 pounds of milk in a milking period of 10,000 pounds, producing a pound of pork or beef at a lower cost, and giving to the world the blessing which we most need—a reduction in the high cost of living.

THE LABOR QUESTION

Regarding the important question of Labor, my own policy has been to treat Labor as I would wish to be treated myself. I have had a good deal of experience with labor of various kinds and conditions, and have never had any trouble along that line, and do not expect to have any.

OUR RETURNED HEROES

To me, the welfare of the returned soldiers and soldiers' wives is one of the most essential duties of our country. Therefore I promise that I will give my hearty support to every movement calculated to promote their very best interests. The soldiers who fought for me for five years deserve, and may expect to receive, my earnest consideration during the remaining years of my life.

THE WOMAN VOTE

I am delighted to know that the women are to enjoy equal privileges with men in the use of the franchise at this election, and in the exercise of this privilege I have the greatest faith in their good judgment and purifying influence. Their power with the ballot on October 20, especially with the Prohibition and Labor problems, will, I feel certain, be of far-reaching effect. I will, therefore, consider the votes of the ladies counted in my favor at the approaching election to be instruction to take high grounds on all matters calculated to elevate the morals of this community as well as of the whole Dominion.

CONCLUSION

These questions I have dealt with are, to my mind, the outstanding questions of the day. If I am elected again as your representative, I promise to give the best of my ability, my mature judgment on all questions affecting the interests of the West Riding of Peterborough, the Province of Ontario, the Dominion of Canada, and the British Empire, of which we today are so justly proud.

Thanking you, ladies and gentlemen, for your support in the past, and soliciting your support again on the 20th day of October, I remain,

Your obedient servant,
GEO. A. GILLESPIE.

EXPORTS— Canada Must Build Up Trade Overseas

Aims of the NAVY LEAGUE OF CANADA

To emphasize Canada's opportunities and responsibilities on the sea.

To raise funds for the relief of our merchant seamen, injured in the war, and for dependents of those who were killed.

To maintain 'sailors' homes in our ports.

To train boys and young men for our merchant ships by the organization of Boys' Naval Brigades.

Patron
H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES
Dominion President
COMMODORE JEMILIUS JARVIS

CANADA is vitally interested in trade extension overseas, for this so closely affects our national wealth. We are daily losing export business in favor of foreign competitors, because we lack shipping facilities.

Our Dominion is undertaking a great shipbuilding program, recognizing that we must build a fleet to build our trade.

The Navy League of Canada is straining every effort to prepare Canadian boys to man Canada's ships which will carry Canada's goods to the waiting markets of the world.

This is the work of the Boys' Naval Brigades, and it is a matter of primary interest to every Canadian that this movement should not be handicapped by lack of funds.

Nelson Day Campaign for $500,000

OCTOBER 21st, 22nd, 23rd

"Canadians Must Sail the Seas"

Boys' Naval Brigades are already established and operating in Charlottetown, Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Saskatoon, Calgary, Victoria and Nanaimo, and many other branches must be organized from East to West in order that the younger generation of Canadians may have the opportunity for free training in seamanship and so will be ready to meet Canada's great need.

You will help. You cannot afford to withhold interest in the outcome of this campaign; it is too vital to future issues. For the sake of our boys and of our export trade you will give, and give liberally to the cause. By helping the work you will be helping yourself.

REAL "INSIDE" INFORMATION

When Constipated, Bilious, Headachy, Take "Cascarets" for Liver and Bowels—No "Shake Up"

Are you keeping your bowels, liver and stomach clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets, or merely whipping them into action every few days with salts, Cathartic Pills, Oil, or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets gently cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the colon and bowels all the constipated waste matter and poisons so you can straighten up.

Cascarets tonight will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, or cause any inconvenience, they cost so little too.

FASHION FANCIES

Black and white checks makes a smart lining for a cape.

New vanity cases are of French and American cloisonne.

There is a tendency to flatness both in front and back.

Shoes are perforated and decorated in quaint and ancient designs.

Flounces and panels are used to add width to skirts of thin material.

A flexible metal belt appears on some recent Paris creations.

Jet appears as a decoration on dresses, hats and even shoes.

All of the autumn suits accentuate the fullness about the hips.

Kid and oilcloth are among the most novel trimmings on dresses.

Bishop Philip J. Garrigan, 79, head of the Catholic See of Sioux City, Ia., is dead.

EFFECTS OF STEEL STRIKE

Much Wanted Lines From U. S. Are Failing to Come Through.

While in a general way, Canadian industry has not been seriously interfered with by the steel strike in the United States mills, it is a fact, says the Canadian Machinery and Manufacturing News, that shipments of much-wanted material are badly delayed, and in some lines are almost "off" altogether. Sheets, tubes and plates, in the order named fi are the lines being most effected, and in some cases where firms depend on black sheets for their raw product, things are looking serious.

The machine tool business is coming to be somewhat like the days of the war, when there was such an unprecedented demand for everything in this line. The fact that nearly all the machine tool builders are booked well into 1920 is pretty good evidence that business has been brisk.

The steel strike also keeps the scrap metal trade in Canada rather [illegible]. No shipments are being sent out. There is a marked [illegible] stove plate. Agricultural scrap is also in demand and scarce. Prices remain the same.

CAMP MEETINGS

Are They Dead?

The camp meeting at "Missionary Heights," Meyersburg, Ont., during July and August, conducted by Evangelist G. M. Sharpe, of Galt, assisted by Dr. Andrew Imrie, of Toronto, would seem to prove conclusively that the camp meeting spirit is still very much alive in Ontario.

During six weeks the crowd of eager listeners gathered from a radius of forty-five miles and filled the splendid tabernacle which is situated on a hill overlooking the fertile valley of the Trent, with its winding river and canal.

The funds raised will be used to support ten missionaries, Miss M Standen, of Barrie, a foreign missionary in China, eight native workers in China, and Miss Nelly Turner, of Campbellford, a home missionary who will recruit for the foreign field.

With such a motive for existing it is not surprising that the camp meeting spirit has revived.

STOP BACKACHE IN FEW MINUTES

RUB LUMBAGO, PAIN, SORENESS, STIFFNESS RIGHT OUT WITH "ST. JACOBS LINIMENT"

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or neuritis has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Liniment" at any drug store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right into the pain or ache, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness and lameness is gone.

Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating liniment takes the ache and pain right out and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica and lame back misery so promptly and surely. It never disappoints!

The fossil of a giant 32 feet 10 inches in height is reported discovered near Vera Cruz, Mexico.

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen;

Having received the unanimous nomination of the United Farmers of Ontario, of East Peterborough, and believing I can serve the electors of this riding in a manner satisfactory to them, I solicit your vote and kindly interest in my behalf.

I am a practical farmer and, as East Peterborough is a typical farmers' constituency, I believe a resident farmer would be of more service to the riding than a representative whose material interests are elsewhere.

Thanking you in advance for any favours you may do for me, I beg to remain,

Your obedient servant,

E. N. McDONALD

Pressed Olive Oil.

The olive oil produced in the region of Bordeaux, France, has a lightness, a perfume, and a particularly delicate savor which have given it a world-wide reputation and made it an important article of export and a source of wealth for its producers. Most popular is the oil from Nice imported under the Bordeaux trade mark.

Wires Underground.

The general scheme, planned before the war, of placing under ground all the wires acquired from the National Telephone Co. in 1912, has, according to the London Times, been started in the [illegible] district. Plans also have been made and contracts placed for many other big centers.

REAL DOGS OF WAR.

Heroic Acts of Canine Warriors Are Many.

Bob—evidently one of the noble army beasties named for the late Lord Roberts of Kandahar—has deservedly received the silver medal of the British National Canine Defence League for an heroic rescue. Like most Simon Pure, full blooded heroes, Bobs didn't stop to think whether he was playing the hero or not—he merely did his duty as he saw it, found himself a fellow-passenger on a raft with a lot of half-frozen, unconscious sailors, whose warship [illegible] the coast of Holland. In a frantic, distress signals were heard aboard a destroyer about to relinquish the search, and the ten men were saved.

Dog heroes of the war are numerous, and one likes to hear of Fend l'Air, who helped dig his master out of a caved-in trench; or Judge, who swam the river with the ends of ropes in his mouth to draw the boats over, till the German snipers got him; or little Veale, who went everywhere with Raymond Carroll; or the noble Red Cross dogs who sought out the wounded and led the rescuers to them; or the messenger dogs whom no temptation could seduce from duty. But in all these transactions the best of the four-footed friends of man was merely running true to form. You cannot imagine men at war and dogs failing to come forward and join them in the struggle as devoted partisans. You never heard of a dog deserting or refusing to go over the top at the zero hour.

Just as a dog would rush to the aid of his master in a battle with a burglar, he used his bark and bite to the last fibre of his being and the last breath in his shaggy body in resistance to his master's enemy at the front. If you attacked his master, you assailed him; and if the dogs of war could have had their own way, they would have fought it out among themselves.

Steward of the Chiltern Hundreds.

A member of the House of Commons at Westminster is forbidden by law to resign his seat; but if he accepts an office under the crown, his seat becomes legally vacant. So if he desires to retire from Parliament, he must get appointed to such an office, and he attains his purpose by applying for the "Stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds" (or the manors of East Hundred, Northstead, or Hempholme, which are of nominal value). A "hundred" is a division of an English country thus designated, it is believed, because originally it consisted of 100 resident families. Now, Buckinghamshire, as its name implies, is a section abounding in beech forest, and among its beech-clad hills, the hundreds of the Chiltern (or chalk hills), which belong to the crown, were so infested with robbers in the good old times that a Government functionary, styled the "Steward of the Chiltern Hundreds," was appointed to keep them in check. The duties of this office have long since ceased to be more than nominal, but its retention is useful for the purpose of enabling an M.P. to vacate his seat. Up to the nineteenth century there was a salary of 20 shillings attached to the post, but there is none now. The steward holds the position but a short time. The rule is that the Chilterns cannot be granted to more than one person on the same day and each new warrant (issued by the Chancellor of the Exchequer) expressly revokes the grant to the last holder, the new steward retaining it in his turn until another is appointed.

Brightening a Room.

The yellow gleam of brass always adds light to any dark nook and used with dark furniture, is most artistic. A pair of brass candlesticks on the mantel, andirons before an open fire, or even a brass jardiniere for ferns, are all especially attractive in a dark room.

Boston's Famous Church.

There were only 3,000 houses in Boston when the North church was built and many members of the congregation came from outlying districts. The corner stone was laid in April, 1723, and the first meeting was held in December of the same year.

The Poor in Italy.

The majority of the poorer class in Italy are noted for their general good health. This is to some extent attributed to the fact that the working people of Italy eat less meat than those of any other European nation.

Good Manners.

Some wise person has said that "good manners are surface Christianity," and an essential part of good manners is unselfishness, constant thought of others and study of the other person's viewpoint.

High and Low.

In model form an English inventor has succeeded in operating a railroad car that is raised above the track by the repelling force of electricity and drawn forward by magnets above it.

Don't Forget This.

According to an English scientist's estimate the world's total annual rainfall amounts to 29,457.4 cubic miles, of which less than one-fourth drains through rivers into the ocean.

Speak Up, Then.

Said the facetious feller, "You've all heard that old wheeze about hearing Pike Speak; but did any of you ever hear Jack and the Beans Talk?"

Uncle Eben.

"Some men find fault because dey're too wise," said Uncle Eben, "and others because dey ain' got sense enough."

Unreasonable.

"You are two-faced. You let another fellow kiss you." "Well, if I have two faces, what's your kick?"

Optimistic Thought.

He who knows nothing knows enough if he knows when to be silent.

J. C. TURNBULL CO., Ltd. PETERBOROUGH'S GREATEST STORE

BIG BOWLING TOURNEY AT COAST

WILL BOWL ON OWN DRIVES AND TELEGRAPH SCORES

San Deigo, Cal., Oct 16 - Tenpin knights in eleven western states are anxiously looking forward to the coming telegraph bowling tourney scheduled for Oct 22. It promises to be the largest affair of its kind ever staged west of Chicago. Bowlers from Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico will participate.

Entries are being received daily by the Pacific Coast Bowling association, under whose auspices the tournament will be held and every indication points to a field of at least 100 starters. The tourney will be open to five man teams only, and they will have the privilege of bowling on their home drives. Pacific Coast Bowling Association rules will govern regard to regulation alleys, tenpins etc.

There are Seven Prizes.

In a tournament of this kind where a team is bowling on its home alleys, three games, total pins to decide the winner, almost any team has a chance to win one of the seven prizes. In a recent telegraph tournament held on the Atlantic coast, the star teams failed to live up to their reputations, and in most cases the prize winners were mediocre fives that murdered the pins on the play, and teams will compete under the same conditions in maples on their own drives. New P. C. B. A. rules also prevent "ace-in-the hole bowlers" from forming an all star combination for the sole purpose of competing in the telegraph tourney, so any team that can shoot around 1750 average will have a chance.

Coast Champion Enters.

The savage Tires and Flor de Baltimore teams of San Deigo were the first to send in their entrance fees, but were closely followed by the Del Montes Cafe quintet of Los Angeles. The Del Montes won the Pacific coast championship in 1907 and 1918, but have since lost Darrow and Phelps, two of their best bowlers. These lads will be seen in San Francisco uniforms this winter.

King City will enter 2 teams and Taft will enter three, as will Anaheim, Venice, Stockton, Sacramento, San Jose and Richmond, Cal. Oakland expects to have 10 or 12 teams while Los Angeles and San Francisco are planning on sending 16 or 18 quintets to the foul line. San Deigo is sure of six teams and may enter eight. Large entries are expected from Butte, Cheyenne, Boise City, Salt Lake, Denver, Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma, Vancouver, Portland, Reno, Phoenix and Tibuquerque.

The bowling season will start in earnest the middle of this month and the interest displayed by the players indicates that the great American indoor game is due for its most prosperous season in the west.

AT THE POLICE COURT

Sidney Goodfellow was fined $10 and $3.10 costs for driving at a greater rate of speed than 20 miles an hour on South George street.

Mr. J. Roche was fined $5 and $3.10 costs for cutting a corner too close to the curb contrary to the traffic bylaw.

Magistrate Dumble resumed his duties this morning after a brief absence from the bench.

INTERESTS MEN WHO SMOKE CIGARETTES

PRICES TO GO UP NOW AND ANOTHER INCREASE SOON.

Cigarette smokers will receive some bad news this week. The price of nearly all the popular brands have jumped and at Toronto retail dealers say that retail prices would reflect the increased wholesale price almost immediately.

For instance, one brand which achieved popularity with the war through the residence of Canadian troops in England jumps to 18 cents a package from 15 cents. Other well-known makes will take a similar jump. This is not the worst. It is predicted that another two cents will probably be added before Christmas.

BICYCLE STEALING PREVALENT

Bicycle borrowing without permission from the owner seems to be a popular amusement among a large number of youths of the city. Within the last few days 10 wheels have been recovered by the police and given to the proper owners and there are still five unclaimed ones at the police station.

A Michigan man, charged with allowing a fire he started on his farm to spread to a Government forest was fined $298.

THE KITCHEN DOOR

Milk at 15 cents the quart argues the necessity of a cow in the back lot, and we think the tendency is in that direction, says The Chicago Tribune. Eggs at 60 cents a dozen—5 cents apiece—convinces the householder of the utility of a few hens; and potatoes at from 85 cents to $1 a bushel is making the housewife turn to the garden. The pendulum is swinging. In the trip from the garden to the kitchen the profits are too many. The people are finding it out and replacing the garden where once it was—at the kitchen door.

WILLIAM J. HOUSON

The death occurred yesterday at his home, lot 26, concession 11, Otonabee, of William J. Houson, in his 77th year. Deceased had been ill for some weeks and the end was not unexpected. An old resident of Otonabee having been born at Mathers' Corners, he was a well-known and highly-esteemed citizen.

He is survived by three sons, Cristopher, of Otonabee; John and Frederick, in the west, and four daughters, Mrs. M. S. Houtle, of Lakefield; Mrs. McConnel, of the West; Miss Josephine, of Kitchener, and Miss Gertrude, Nicholls Hospital. Also two brothers, Cristopher Houson, of Keene, and Joseph Houson, in the West.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon from his late residense in Otonabee to Norwood semetery for interment.

THEATRICALS

COMING TO THE GRAND FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, OCT. 24 AND 25

An attraction which promises to be quite a record in Canadian theatrical history is the "Dumbells" known and loved by the entire C.E.F. and B. E. F., for their admirable efforts and equally great accomplishments in providing diversion for the boys resting in billets just back of the line.

This entertainment organization was originally made up of boys from the third division, thereby getting the title of "Dumbells" which was the fiel dmarking of the third. However, they soon outgrew all divisional bounds and fast became the favorites of all the boys in France. One big element in their favor being that they were all men who had served at least sixteen months in the trenches before joining the party, and another was the fact that although they played over five hundred performances in France they never charged one cent for admission at any time. Their scenery, costumes and properties were furnished by the Canadian Y. M. C. A. and they played in everything from a "Y" hut to a deserted church.

On their home-coming tour, which will include all the larger cities of Canada, they are offering their original overseas revue "Biff, Bing, Bang." The performances here, as in France, are under the personal direction of Capt. M. W. Plunkett.

MANUEL SALAZON

UNQUESTIONABLY THE PREMIER TENOR SINGER OF SPAIN

On August 28th., at Madison Square Garden, New York, there occurred in honor of Admiral Hugo Cons, his staff officers and crew of the "Conte de Cavour" of the Italian Royal Navy, a grand opera performance of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." The production, incidentally, was given for the benefit of the Italian Babies Free Milk Fund. Among the celebrities to appear at this monstrous affair, which was witnessed by 12,000 people, was Manuel Salazar, the Spanish tenor of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company. He sang his new famous role of "Canio" (Pagliacci) in such manner as to receive sixteen recalls. Others who participated were Anna [illegible] the Chicago Opera soprano; Riccardo Stracciari, bariteno; Rosa Ponselle, the dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan, New York.

At the performance of "Pagliacci" at the Grand Opera House, this city, next Wednesday evening, Salazar will sing this identical role — one which has made him famous in the great opera centres of this country and of the Old World.

A CLASSIC OF FICTION SEEN ON THE SCREEN

FAMOUS STORY BY BRET HARTE LATEST UNIVERSAL PHOTOPLAY

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight"

The familiar first line of this well known poem surely must have kept ringing in the ears of more than one of the patrons of the Empire Theatre last night as the picturesque Western scenes and Western characters as filmed in Universal's screen adaption of Bret Harte's "The Outcasts of Poker Flat" were flashed on the screen. What man, woman or child who has read or heard of the Great West of the days gone by but hasn't said to himself, "Would that I could live among such scenes if but for only a few fleeting hours?" And the opportunity for the gratification of this wish presented itself at last.

"The Outcasts of Poker Flat" is more than a motion picture. It is the living portrait of the Great West itself, just as Bret Harte pictured it in his famous book, before your eyes. There are the gamblers and the rough miners seen on the streets of a picturesque village or at the gambling table the only entertainment afforded grownup humans in those days. And standing out like a jewel among all the other gamblers and miners, shone John Oakhurst, the gentleman gambler, one of Bret Harte's greatest characters. Portrayed by the noted screen star, Harry Carey, John Oakhurst lives and breathes again. Carey, who is probably the leading western actor on the screen today, must have studied Oakhurst as Harte painted him, over and over again, because he was so human and so realistic as the 'gentleman gambler" that millions have read about. His performance was well-nigh a masterpiece. The cast includes Cullen Landis, Gloria Hope, Joel Harris, Victor Potel, J. Farrell McDonald, J. Webster Dill, Charles Hill Mailes, Virginia Chester - and Louise Lester.

WELL-KNOWN COMEDIAN WITH MY SOLDIER GIRL

WM. MOORE IRRESISTIBLY FUNNY—SEE HIM AT GRAND TOMMOROW.

A comedian, who has caused the world to laugh at his many capers is William Moore, coming to the Grand Opera, Saturday matinee and evening, in the role of "Jasper Pebble,' a black-face comedy in the musical spectacle "My Soldier Girl." The burden of the comedy in this new play falls on Mr. Moore, who is properly cast in this black-face role and theatre-goers who have seen him in his many parts can readily appreciate the opportunity this particular role offers, to introduce his funny capers. In the story "Pebble" is a valet to Colonel Stone, wealthy Florida planter, who has just returned from France and upon returning to America arranges a grand fete in honor of his many friends whom he met abroad. It is in this act that "Jasper' ever endeavoring to please the Colonel's whims and fancies is seen at his best and theatregoers who imagine they have laughed at funny comedians should see Mr. Moore, as a typical Florida nigger in dress and character. Again in the last act which is a gorgeous Follies production on the roof of a New York theatre which Colonel Stone is producing "Jasper" is alone and his funny songs, dances and capers are without comparison.

Mr. Moore has devoted much study to the art of black-face and his interpretation of the Florida nigger stamps him as one of the best black face comedians on the stage today. His eccentric dancing is one of the real hits of the show and this clever comedian of nimble legs and funny faces begins to entertain where the average black-face leaves off. Of his many novelty numbers "Jasper's Ragtime Band," a syncopated rag sweeping the country just now is a riot and he "puts it over" with all the dialect of the typical Southern Darkey.

HE STOOD ON AMERICA ENGLAND THE SAME DAY

The Grand Opera House management have the rare privilege of presenting on Thursday evening, October 23rd., Lieut. Sir Arthur Whitten Brown, K. B. E. one of the only two men who have ever stood on the continents of America and Europe on the same day who will tell the original story of this great accomplishment of peacetimes—the story of the non-stop Transantlantic flight as made by Capt. Sir John Alcock and Lieut Sir. Arthur Whitten Brown.

The navigation Lieut. Sir Arthur Whitten Brown, K. B. E., A.M., E. E. M.I.M.E., A.M., F.A.T.E. was born in Glasgow, his parents were both American citizens. By profession he is an engineer. He received a thorough knowledge of surveying and being interested in aviation, devoted his time to the study of aerial navigation as applied to surveying. It was his hobby which on frequent crossings of the Atlantic by steamer, led him to pursuade the captains to allow him on the bridge to take a shot at the sun, that made it possible to so direct the course of the plane that notwithstanding the mists and fog he performed what is acknowledged to be the greatest feat of navigation in the history of this sicence.

The full story of the flight has never been read or told in America Sir Arthur tells details that are entirely unknown to us. His story will be illustrated with slides and pictures showing all parts of the flight that could be taken.

Blew Up Monument.

The German monument at Trial Bay in Australia has been blown up. The monument occupied a prominent position on the hill overlooking Trial Bay jail. Frequent protests were made against its presence in the district by local bodies and the Anzac [illegible] and threats to destroy it were made unless the Government took action.

An attempt was made to blow it up recently, a portion being blown away, but on the second effort it was demolished and it is now a heap of crumbling stone.

The monument was constructed of solid granite, twenty feet high and ten feet square at the base, with three tiers of solid granite each twelve inches thick. Interned men at the concentration camp did the work. A large tablet inscribed in German and four graves on each side, each with inscribed slabs of polished granite, were encircled by a curbing.

Sign Posts.

Profiting by war-time experience the French Ministry of Transport is replacing the familiar small metal direction signs by the large guide posts and notices which were found so useful in the battle zone. Some of the old battlefield signposts deserve preservation. There was the pathetic board on the Somme that announced: "Guillemont once stood here," the notice at Zillebeke Lake, "Don't waste bombs on fish—throw them at Fritz," and the board at Albert surmounting a heap of rubble [illegible] "Cathedral."

New Machine Gun.

At Bisley recently a demonstration was given of a new machine gun which has many astonishing features to recommend it. The gun is the Beardmore-Farquhar Light Machine Gun, and it is claimed that it is the lightest machine gun, that it is the cheapest to manufacture and to use, that it "cannot jam," that it has perfect breech-locking, that it can be used without any oil, and that the automatic mechanism is not affected by the heat of the barrel, and will continue to function even though the barrel be kept red hot.

The weight of the gun, complete with mounting, is 16¼ pounds. The self-loading mechanism is gas operated.

The demonstration at Bisley was given by the inventor, Col. Farquhar, and was witnessed by War Office experts and naval and military attaches of the Powers, including America, Italy, Japan, Belgium and China. An examination of the target showed that in emptying one rotary magazine, Col. Farquahar put 75 shots out of 81 on to the target.

The inventor also gave a demonstration of fire from the hip, and at the request of his audience, fired the gun upside down and sideways. The gun which he used has already fired over 20,000 rounds, and Col. Farquhar declared that although it had been thoroughly tested under all sorts of conditions, and that every effort had been made to cause it to jam, the gun had, in fact, never yet jammed.

A novel feature of the rotary magazine is that it indicates to the firer how many rounds have been fired.

Each Seeks His Kind.

Thrust an Emerson into any Concord, and his pungent presence will penetrate the entire region. Soon all who come within the radius of his life respond to his presence as flowers and trees respond with boughs, brilliant and fragrant, to the sunshine. After a little, each Emerson stands girt about with Hawthornes, Whittiers, Holmeses and Lowells.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

Custom Hard to Down.

Pens made of feathers were common in the seventh century, but so inveterate was the old habit of writing with reeds on parchment and paper that it continued a long time after the first use of quills. The custom of carrying a pen behind the ear is ancient, as may be seen in the life of St. Odo: "He saw a pen sticking in his ear in the manner of a writer."

Poor Relative's Figure.

She said with a sigh, "My, how glad I am that I have a poor relative's figure! I can wear anything from the frocks made for Cousin Anne, who is nearly six feet and looks like a clothespin, to the suits built for Cousin Jane, who is five feet and weighs one hundred and eighty."

BRITISH BABIES INCREASE

Specialist Declares More Boys Born After Wars Than Girls.

More babies were born in England during August than in any previous month since the beginning of the war. Official returns show the number to be 6,390 equivalent to an annual rate of eighteen a thousand, and 461 more babies than in the same month of 1918.

"I believe that during and after wars more boy babies are born than girls," said Dr Mary Scharlieb, a specialist, discussing this report. "I think official figures will prove that more boys are born during periods of stress, hardship and food shortage and more girls during periods of wealth, ease and luxury."

Discovery in Mexico Attracting Attention of Scientists.

Mexico City, Mexico, Oct. 16—The fossilized remains of a giant measuring thirty-two feet ten inches in height were, according to report, recently discovered by workmen near the little village of Nanacamilpa, state of Vera Cruz. The discovery attracted the attention of scientists here. Manuel Gamio, director of anthropology at the national museum, expects to leave soon for Ianacamilpa to investigate. He is inclined to believe the fossil is that of a prehistoric vertebrate not human.

3	Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one hundredths per cent. alcohol, weight measure, in standard hotels in local municipalities that by a majority vote favor such sale, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?	X
4	Are you in favor of the [illegible] and malt liquors through Government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?	X

The above is a sample of the referendum ballot which will be submitted to the voters on October 20. Any person who is in favor of prohibition for Ontario will be well advised to mark the ballot as above. If this is done, there can be no question as to the intention of the elector.

To make it certain that your wishes in this respect will be given effect, that the Ontario Temperance Act as endorsed by the people, will be rigidly enforced when it comes to voting for one of the three candidates before the people, mark your ballot as shown in the following sample. Women voting for the first time should understand that they have a right to vote both on the referendum and for one candidate. To vote on the first alone, even when noes are recorded, would be a duty only half performed. Vote for the candidate who will support the Premier whose worth has been proved. Vote for R. J. Soden.

PLAN ARMISTICE DAY SPORT

American Legion Officials Call Meeting to Arrange for Program.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Plans to celebrate the first anniversary of Armistice Day will be drawn up tonight at a meeting of the American Legion Athletic Association at A. L. headquarters, 120 West Adams street. The officials expect to make the affair a sort of an athletic carnival with various track and filed and army athletic events and augmented by an all-star football game. Negotiations for a ball park in which to conduct the event are now under way. Other plans for the winter indoor athletic season will also be laid as leagues are to be formed with teams from the various posts of the American Legion. Likewise, the organization will go in strong for wrestling, boxing, track and field sports, indoor ball and bowling.

Snake Story From Missouri.
(Platte City Landmark.)

One day this week at a house near Pleasant Ridge a man discovered his little five-year-old daughter seated in the yard intently interested with something. Upon investigation it was found the little one's interest was fastened upon a large rattlesnake which she was rubbing up and down the back with her hand. The father hardly knew how to separate the two, passing through several moments of terror lest the reptile should bite the baby. He secured a stick, and as he struck the snake quickly [illegible] ed the baby out of danger. The snake had five rattles and a button.

The Trail of the Ontario Temperance Act

WOULD is not be more in the interests of this Province to permit of the sale of light non-intoxicating beer in well regulated hotels than to continue the promotion of "swamp whiskey" made in illicit stills, and drugs smuggled into the country and dispensed in low dives.

The [illegible] which have appeared in the columns of the daily press show that there are no fewer than one hundred and twenty illicit stills in this Province and that the drug traffic has increased at an alarming rate since the Ontario Temperance Act came into effect.

Illicit Still Statistics Disclose Great Increase Since April 1st.

Although Just Twenty-Seven Were Discovered in Two Years, 1916-1918, the Total Number Located Since April 1, This Year, is 424

Canadian Press.

Ottawa, Oct. 14.—In the Senate to-night, in answer to an enquiry by Senator Watson, a statement was made of the number of illicit stills discovered in operation and the number seized since April, 1916.

The Drug Traffic

Table showing the increase in the consumption of drugs in Canada since the enaction of The Ontario Temperance Act in 1916.—Toronto Globe

		Quantity	Value
COCAINE	1916	5,381 ozs.	$ 18,307
	1919	12,333 ozs.	142,123
MORPHINE	1916	15,455 ozs.	72,199
	1919	50,087 ozs.	179,125
OPIUM	1915	1,741 ozs.	11,800
	1919	34,263 ozs.	564,535

These figures show only what came in legally—the enormous quantities known to have been smuggled in and sold through underground channels would swell the total to an appalling figure.

Remember that in voting for the Ontario Temperance Act you are voting for the continued spread of this deadly traffic. The despicable creatures of the underworld who live by pandering to the weakness of their doped whiskey and drug victims are hoping for a solid four No's on the Ballot. Responsibility must rest with you.

L. C. W. MONTHLY MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the L.C.W. was held at the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday, Oct 16th, at 3.30 p.m.

Several committees reported on work in hand or accomplished. Managers of several moving picture theatres had been interviewed by Miss Walton and expressed their willingness to put on special films for children whenever it was found possible to do so.

Regret was expressed that so many films now shown throughout the province are of no educational value, and too often help to degrade the taste of the people.

The Department of Education will be urged to provide films for children that will tend to educate the taste of the coming generation.

The appointment of women on the Provincial Boards of Censors will also, no doubt, cause the gradual elimination of films of doubtful character.

The L. C. W. have not yet been able to arrange a date for Mrs Pankhurst's lecture, but hope to do so in the near future.

A very interesting summary of the annual meeting of the N.C.W. was read by Mrs. Stevenson. Some of the most interesting points will be discussed at future meetings.

Several members expressed themselves in no uncertain terms upon the failure of the Board of Education to appoint Mrs Morris to the vacant seat on the Board.

The meeting then adjourned.

Vote For Hearst, Soden and Prohibition

HEARST GOVERNMENT WILL BE SUSTAINED BY BIG MAJORITY

This is the Expressed Opinion Throughout the Province According to Speaker at Mr. Soden's North Monaghan Meeting—Vote For Conservative Supporter of Coservative Administration.

Mr. Frank Dawson, secretary of the Liberal-Conservative Association, assured a representative gathering of electors in May's Schoolhouse, North Monaghan, last evening, that the general opinion throughout the country is that the Hearst Government will be sustained by a big majority on Monday. Mr. Dawson's business carries him all over the province, and he at last night's meeting merely expressed the conviction heard on every hand on the course of his travels. With a Conservative Government in office, Mr. Dawson consistently urged that West Peterborough's interests would be better by being represented by Mr. R. J. Soden, a Conservative, than by one of any other party—Liberal or Labor. Mr. Soden, he characterized as a citizen always loyal to his riding's interests, as exemplified in his having gone to Toronto at his own expense and secured grants for Peterborough from the Hearst Government although he suffered defeate in the last election.

Mr. Dawson declared that an unusual feature of this election is that the Liberal-Conservative party are banded together as one man in support of their candidate, Mr. R. J. Soden, a worthy supporter of a clean and honest administration.

Promises Carried Out.

Mr. T. E. Bradburn, ex-M.P., as a ratepayer of North Monaghan strongly endorsed the candidature of Mr. Soden, and eulogised the Hearst Government for carrying out the pledges of Sir. James Whitney. He gave a few figures showing economy and liberality (Where occasion called for such in the country's interests), under Conservative administration. During the Liberal regime, just prior to Sir James Whitney assuming office, the annual school grants to this riding were but $2,246; last year they amounted, he said, to $12,653. Then in 1905 Sir James Whitney promised reduction in the price of school books, and that pledges had been kept by the late Premeir and maintained by his successor, Sir William Hearst. Public school readers cost in 1904 to the purchaser $1.12. they have been reduced to 49c; a set of public school books selling at $4.55 in 1904, can now be bought for $2.87. (This price has been maintained by the Government in spite of increased of paper, and wages which had been trebled;, and Sir William Hearst promises no increase even if the Government has to print them in a Government office to keep down the price. A set of high school books under Liberal regime was sold at $13.35, the price now is only $9.02.

Mr. Bradburn referred to the Temperance Act, and declared that both the Toronto Star and Globe (Liberal organs) had admitted on several occasions that if the act is enforced in its entirety Sir William Hearst should be returned to power. He pointed out that while the four questions must be answered, it is not necessary to make four no's or four yea's.

In conclusion he looked for Peterborough townships to benefit fully before long from Hydro-Electric power and radials and contended that these systems are safer in the present Government's hands than with the party who opposed Hydro-Electri

The Candidate.

Mr. R. J. Soden spoke at length on the referendum, and stated that while he had no right to ask the electorate how they are going to vote, it was their privilege to enquire how he, a candidate, would mark his ballot, and his reply is "four no's" for liquor had broken more hearts, made destitute more homes, caused more misery and external damnation than any other agency in the whole world.

He pledged his allegiance to Sir William Hearst's agricultural policy and took exception to Mr. Gillespie's complaint that graduates from the Guelph College are not retained in the province to instruct farmers in drainage and other farm improvements. Mr. Gilespie forgets, he said, that a staff of engineers are maintained at this college for such purposes, and they can be secured at any time at a nominal charge.

The candidate alluded to the Government's encouragement of teachers to instruct scholars in the rudiments of agriculture, to discriminate between soils, the nature of weeds and how to select the best seeds. And when Mr. Gillespie says, agriculture is not receiving attention from the Government, he overlooks a few things, such as summer schools under men of technical education, and other measures.

As to schools, Mr. Soden explained that Government grants have sometimes decreased to individual schools by reason of unforseen circumstances For instance, they are based for one year on the preceding year's increase in buildings. But the desire for education has outrun the allotments, the increase in schools having exceded all anticipations, especially in New Ontario and thus necessitating a redistribution of grants allowed to West Peterborough for lowed for. Last year the Government alloted to West Peterborough for school purposes $36,829, of which North Monaghan received $547.90. City and Ennismore, received $793, technical schools $1,911.32, the Collegiate Institute $1,072 and the Normal school $23.842.

For Peterborough Normal School, Mr. Soden concluded, thanks are due to the Whitney Government and the untiring energy of Mr. J. E. Bradburn, then member for West Peterborough. And, he contended, if the Conservative Government did nothing else for this riding than to give it the Normal School, it is your duty to vote for Hearst's administration, for the benefits derived from that institution cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

ELECTION RETURNS AT THE REVIEW

The Review has arranged for full returns from all the constituencies of the Province to be thrown on a screen opposite The Review office on Hunter street Monday night. The wire service will be complete and allow of authentic publication of the figures as quickly as possible.

MR. SODEN CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE

The electors of West Peterborough will make no mistake by electing Mr. R. J. Soden as their representative in the Legislature. He has been a resident of the city for the past seventeen years, engaged in a business which has brought him in close touch with the residents not only in the city but in the townships as well, and in all sections of the community his commercial reputation is above suspicion. Not a single objection can be taken to his personal record, either.

Mr. Soden has been nominated as the unanimous choice of the party convention. He did not seek the honor, but was prevailed upon to accept the nomination when assured of a united party behind him. The reason for his defeat five years ago is well known, and that defeat stands him today as a distinction. He was in advance of his party. He remained firm to his principles in 1914 and has stood to his temperance guns ever since. Mr. Soden has now the satisfaction of finding himself vindicated. His own party has grown up to the standard which he set in 1914. The Liberals, too, have modified their policy to keep pace with public sentiment.

Mr. Soden is a man well posted in the history of the country and is perfectly familiar with all public questions. He understands the situation in Ontario as few men do. If elected to the Legislature he will not only make a diligent worker in committee, but will be able to take part in the debates in the House, as he is admittedly one of the best platform speakers in the riding. West Peterborough should be redeemed. R. J. Soden is the man for the task. If successful on Monday he will beyond all question be on the Government side of the House, and as such will be able to represent the riding other than in a nominal sense only.

Mr. Soden will, if elected, support the Hearst Government, not only on temperance but on all progressive measures. He will be found on the right side of every public question. Farmers in the riding are convinced that he is alive to their interests, that theirs is the basic industry of Canada, and that unless the farmers are prosperous no other line of business can hope to succeed. Mr. Soden is a friend of public ownership. He will work—work is right—for the extension of Hydro-Electric power and for the construction of radial railways in this district. He understands the resources of Eastern Ontario and the potentialities of the riding that can be developed through the construction of transportation lines linking up this city with outlying points. A vote for Mr. Soden will prove a good investment. It will mark further progress and reform. It will be an endorsation of the best Administration that the Province of Ontario has ever had.

ONTARIO ELECTIONS ON MONDAY WILL BE MEMORABLE IN HISTORY

Referendum, Soldier's and Women's Votes, Farmer Candidates and Other New Features Create Unusual Activities and Interest—Referendum is a Moral Issue.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto ,Oct. 18.— Sunday promises to be a day of vigorous campaigning throughout the province of Ontario. As a result of the very active part many church organizations are taking in the Ontario Temperance Act Referendum, which will be a direct issue for the people to decide at polling booths on Monday next, when they vote at the same time, in the general elections for the Ontario Legislature.

A Moral Issue.

The churches have adopted the referendum questions as a moral issue. A large number of services will be along that line. In adition there will be many public meetings also advocating the "Four Noes" on the referendum ballot, in an effort to keep Ontario dry. On the other hand anti-prohibition leaders, particularly branches of the Citizens' Liberty League in various points, will also carry on their campaign with several meetings tomorrow.

Both sides this morning express greatest confidence in their prospects of success.

Closes Tonight.

In regard to the general elections the campaign will be practically closed tonight. Sir William Hearst, Premier, and H. H. Dewart, K.C. Leader of the official Opposition, will speak in their own ridings, Sault Ste. Marie and Southwest Toronto, respectively, and there will be many other eleventh hour meetings of candidates of al various parties, to give their final arguments. Campaign managers of Conservatives, Liberals and U. F. O., express satisfaction with the prospects of election day, though neither Liberal or U. F. O. prominent men expect to obtain the election of sufficient members to oust the Conservative Government directly. But they express the hope of a commutation Opposition and Independant votes that will make the Government's tenure of office very short after election day.

Monday is expected to be one of the busiest election days in the history of Ontario. With the referendum, the women's vote, the activities of the returned soldiers and farmers and other new features, it is anticipated that the elections on October 20th, 1919, will be made memorable

In Petrograd's Suburbs.

Stockholm, Oct. 18.—Despatch received last night says General Yudenitch's army entered the suburbs of Petrograd at three o'clock Thursday afternoon.

No Confirmation.

London, Oct 18. Twelve-twenty a.m. up to this hour British authorities had received no confirmation of the fall of Kronstadt or the occupation of Petrograd.

Bolshevik Workingmen Offer to Join North-Western Russian Army if Petrograd is Spared Shelling—Forces of Bolsheviki are Still Desperately Defending Former Russian Capital.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 18.—The white flag was hoisted over the bolshevik fortress of Kronstadt Friday night, it is reported.

Desert Bolsheviki.

According to a Helsingfors despatch quoting a Finnish general staff report, Gen. Yudenitch has captured Krasnoye Selo and Gatchina, south of Petrograd, where he met working men from the city who asked that the northwestern Russian army refrain from shelling Petrograd, and pledging, if this promise was given, to join the anti-bolsheviki.

Defending Petrograd.

London, Oct. 18.—Forces of the Soviet Government of Russia are, according to latest advices, still desperately defending the city of Petrograd, toward which anti-bolshevik troops have been advancing since October 11. Confirmation of despatches telling of the fall of the former Russian capital has not been received in official quarters here.

Considerable Obscurity.

Over the whole situation around Petrograd there is considerable obscurity due to conflicting and contradictory reports. There seems to be little doubt that the army commanded by Gen. Yudenitch is within a comparatively short distance of the city.

Give Germans Advantage.

Paris, Oct. 18.—Reports of the capture of Kronstadt by the British, which have not been confirmed, and of further advances by Gen. Yudenitch toward Petrograd, have intensified the Peace Conference's interest in the Russian situation and emphasized the fear of the Entente, and especially of the French, that Gen. Von der Goltz may entrench himself in northern Russia nd give the Germans an important part in directing Russian affairs should the bolsheviki government fail.

MR. GILLESPIE'S APPEAL TO WOMEN VOTERS

When the temperance women of Peterborough organized to support the referendum some time ago they did so on non-partisan lines. It was believed at that time the vote on the referendum and the general election would be held on different dates These temperance workers are not now, nor have they ever been, in the field to support any political candidate. The Ontario Temperance Act is their chief concern.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie has evidently mistaken the purpose of the organization, and has addressed a letter to the temperance women of the city asking for their support. This is regarded by the members of the organization as an example of political assurance. Mr. Gillespie is fighting under the wrong leadership to justify such an appeal.

Members and officials of the Referendum Committee have authorized The Review to announce that they have no intention of supporting Mr. Gillespie, and this regardless of any former political leanings. To vote for Mr. Gillespie, they are not slow to perceive, is to vote for Hartley Dewart, and the latter is nowhere taken seriously as a friend of the cause in the advancement of which these temperance workers have devoted so much time and energy. They do not propose now to risk the loss of everything already achieved by helping to make Hartley Dewart Premier of Ontario.

This declaration is authorized. The organized temperance women of this city will support the Premier whose sincerity has been demonstrated by the enactment of the Ontario Temperance Act. To help depose that leader now would not only be an act of ingratitude but would endanger the very prohibitory law that the women are so devotedly supporting.

MR. SODEN GIVES PLEDGE THAT, IF ELECTED, HE WILL SUPPORT HYDRO

Hydro-Electric Association of Ontario Puts This Matter up to Every Candidate in the Field—Messrs Gillespie and Tooms Also Give Promise.

At the annual meeting of the Hydro-electric Association of Ontario in Toronto Thursday, September 4th, the following resolution, moved by Controller C. A. Maguire, of Toronto, and Willoughby Ellis, Hamilton, was carried unanimously:

"That this meeting of the Hydro-electric Railway Association are of the opinion that at the Provincial election a pledge should be submitted to every candidate offering for election as to his stand on Hydro-electric power and radials, and asking said candidates to sign same. Pledge to be drafted by Executive Committee and sent to different candidates by the secretary."

T. J. Hannigan, secretary Hydro-electric Railway Association, wires Ald. Edgar to get the following pledge from each of the candidates in this riding:

"I will, if elected, support Hydro-electric power expansion and railway construction where recommended by the Hydro Commission and endorsed by municipalities."

Mr. Soden, Mr. Gillespie and Mr Tooms' committee signed the pledge

MARKING THE BALLOT

		YES	NO
1	Are you in favor of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?		X
2	Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one hundredths per cent. alcohol, weight measure, through Government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
3	Are you in favor of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one hundredths per cent. alcohol, weight measure, in standard hotels in local municipalities that by a majority vote favor such sale, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
4	Are you in favor of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies, and amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X

The above is a sample of the referendum ballot which will be submitted to the voters on October 20. Any person who is in favor of prohibition for Ontario will be well advised to mark the ballot as above. If this is done, there can be no question as to the intention of the elector.

To make it certain that your wishes in this respect will be given effect, that the Ontario Temperence Act as endorsed by the people, will be rigidly enforced when it comes to voting for one of the three candidates before the people, mark your ballot as shown in the following sample. Women voting for the first time should understand that they have a right to vote both on the referendum and for one candidate. To vote on the first alone, even when noes are recorded, would be a duty only half performed. Vote for the candidate who will support the Premier whose worth has been proved. Vote for R. J. Soden.

GILLESPIE, G. A.
The Hartley Dewart Candidate.

SODEN, R. J. X
The Hearst Candidate.

TOOMS, THOMAS
The Labor Candidate.

GO EARLY TO POLLS MONDAY

The vote to be polled in the city on Monday is more than double that recorded at any previous election. It will be impossible in some districts to afford every elector a chance to vote unless there is co-operation between the voters and the officials. Prompt action on the part of the latter is essential. In some of the subdivisions it is estimated that it will be necessary to record a vote every two minutes in order to take care of all those on the list.

The polls will be open Monday morning at 9 o'clock (standard time). Find out today where you are to vote so there may be no confusion Monday. Then go to the polls early. Don't lose your chance to vote by leaving the duty to the last moment.

REASONS FOR SUPPORTING THE HEARST ADMINISTRATION.

THE CONSERVATIVE Government of Ontario was first elected to office in 1905. It has since then been sustained thrice with an increased majority on each occasion. It faces the electorate again satisfied to rely on its record. There has not and never has been a suspicion of scandal about the present Administration This is all the more remarkable when it is recalled that the revenuse of the Province have been increased five-fold during the past fourteen years, and the expenditures have been proportionately heavy. Even the new Government House, which has so aroused the democratic instincts in Mr. R. R. Hall, was erected and furnished without the talk of graft so common in connection with that class of public work.

The late Sir James Whitney left a clean heritage to his successor, and Premier Hearst has kept the pages of his official career free from stain. His has been an administration of progress such as Ontario never before experienced. He held the helm, too, during the trying years of the war, when the best that was in a leader was required. And now all classes in the community are asked to support the Premier who has measured up to the high standard set by his distinguished predecessor

Premier Hearst because he had the courage to stake his political life by giving the Province the only prohibitory law it has ever had, a measure complete in every detail and with adequate machinery supplied for its effective enforcement.

The farmers of Ontario will support the Administration that has given more attention to the agricultural industry than any provincial government in Canada.

The workingmen will not be unmindful of the fact that the present Government first enacted the Workmen's Compensation law and amended it at succeeding sessions in the interests of the wage-earners.

The school teachers of Ontario will support the Government that has raised the dignity of their profession by providing the means for increasing their compensation and has enacted a pension system which guarantees the veteran educationist against want when overtaken by old age. The child in the country is to be given the same educational advantages as the pupil in the cities if the various municipalities elect to avail themselves of the departmental provisions made to this end.

The returned soldiers will not forget what the Hearst Administration did for them to the limit of its jurisdiction in the trying days of the war. What chance in the face of this record, has the man who aspires to the Premiership, a man who deserted the cause of the men when their need was the direst, and used the soldiers of Canada as so many pawns in the political game?

The business men of Ontario know that Ontario is financially sound and that the administration of its monetary affairs is in safe and capable hands. There is not a weak spot in any department of the Government not one case of inefficiency that can be cited. No Administration ever appealed to the people under auspices so favorable.

Premier Hearst on his record is worthy of support The only way this can be rendered him is to vote for the candidate who stands four-square behind him. And that candidate in West Peterborough is Mr. R. J. Soden

INFORMATION SUPPLIED.

The temperance workers of West Peterborough are entitled to know whether the assistant secretary of the West Peterborough Conservative Association is still at the head of the local branch of the Citizens' Liberty League.—The Examiner.

OF COURSE the temperance workers of West Peterborough are entitled to the information for which the Examiner craves. The gentleman in question is, we believe, still at the head of the Citizens' Liberty League But he will not be a member, much less an official, in the Conservative Association after a meeting has been called to deal with his case. In the meantime he is no longer regarded as a member of the party, having been read out of that organization and told to take no part in any meetings either as a speaker or by occupying a seat on the platform. We trust that our contemporary will accept this explanation as sufficient to cover the case.

THE PEOPLE'S OPPORTUNITY.

THE ONTARIO Temperance Act, upon which the people of Ontario will pass judgment next Monday, after a trial extending over the past three years, is not the mushroom growth of a night, not a fad that has been sprung suddenly upon the public. Prohibition as provided for in that measure is the culmination of an agitation that has been carried on since the early days of civilization. Temperance workers have always been in evdence wherever liquor was sold.

Three times the people of Ontario have recorded their sentiments on the prohibition issue, in 1894, in 1898 and then again in 1902, and three times the verdict was strongly in favor of wiping out the liquor traffic. The party in power then, and under whose auspices the various plebiscites were taken, is today moving heaven and earth to regain office, pleading its temperance record as the reason why it should be supported. If that party had ever been sincere advocates of prohibition, if the leaders had regarded the temperance question as other than a political shuttlecock, Ontario would have been put under a prohibitory law in 1894. If the leaders had been sincere in their professions in 1898 the liquor traffic would have been banished from the Dominion of Canada. In 1902 the majority for prohibition was 96,201, or about thirty-two per cent. of the entire vote polled, but again political chicanery frustrated the emphatically expressed will of the people.

The temperance majority in Ontario have been the dupes of tricky politicians long enough. They have been working for, praying for prohibition all these years Mothers have for generations been pleading that their sons be saved from temptation. These friends of a better and purer province realized their hopes, received an answer to their prayers, and a reward for their untiring labor, when the Ontario Temperance Act became effective in 1916. That law has been in force for the past three years. The results are known, and now the people who have intently watched its operation are given the opportunity to sit in judgment upon it.

If the Ontario Temperance Act is repealed by a majority vote on Monday, all the moral and social progress that has been made as a result of the unselfish labor of years will be lost. In six months' time the former conditions will be restored. The fight will have to be taken up again, but the cause will have lost the prestige that it will require at least a generation to recover. Who can blame the temperance workers in that event if they become both discomfited and discouraged?

But the temperance people of Ontario have the golden opportunity of a lifetime to settle this vexed question once and forever. A prohibitory law endorsed by a majority vote will have more weight than an Act passed by a Legislature that was working under the thrill of a world-wide war. The legislators who voted unanimously for that Act have for three years borne the responsibility of its creation. This responsibility is now shifted to the shoulders of the men and women of Ontario who have the vote.

Let the verdict be emphatic. There is no question as to the general sentiments of the people. The prohibitionists are in the majority. The Act is as popular as it is possible for such a drastic measure to be. Get out the vote. No more is needed. The greater the majority the greater the moral effects of the victory, the less will there be heard from the opponents of the measure, whether these opponents be men who regard abstinence as a hardship or the apostles of a mistaken conception of human liberty.

Settle the issue Monday for all time. Do not trust the Act to the care of those who have no personal enthusiasm in its effective working. See to it that the future safety of the Act is assured and that this moral issue is removed in perpetuity from the jurisdiction of designing politicians.

OUR MORNING CONTEMPORARY.

TRUST THE EXAMINER to blunder at every opportunity and to lose itself every time it attempts to take up a political discussion. We are forced to the conclusion that in addition to its other deficiencies it is unable to distinguish between ridicule and sneers and honest argument. One of its editorial piffles last night says:

> The Review affects to ridicule the idea of Mr. Gillespie having a chance to be elected Minister of Agriculture. "The farmers of West Peterborough are encouraged to hope that if the Liberals are returned to power a milk dealer will be appointed Minister of Agriculture." The farmers have not forgotten, even if The Review's memory is bad, that the Government thought so little of the department that for many months the Premier, who is a lawyer, acted as Minister of Agriculture, as as a side line to his duties as Prime Minister.

Then, again, with consummate but rather puerile venom, it says in another effort:

> The possibilities of Mr. Gillespie being chosen as Minister of Agriculture, if the Liberal party is returned to power, are sneered at by The Review. "For Minister of Agriculture a practical farmer should be selected rather than a merchant" declares the Hearst paper. The Review ignores the fact that Mr. Gillespie was for years a farmer and that there are few men in the Province who have such an intensive knowledge of the dairying industry as the Liberal candidate.

We sneered at or ridiculed no one in this connection Premier Hearst is as much of a farmer as Mr. Gillespie is. Sir William was raised on a farm in Bruce County and this accounts for his interest in agriculture. He spent the best years of his youth in actual farm work before he took up his present profession. Premier Hearst certainly did fill the position of Minister of Agriculture for a few months until he found a worthy successor to the late Minister Duff. The industry suffered nothing by the Premier's service, and he has devoted more attention to the welfare of the farmer than any of his predecessors in office. If the Examiner had any idea of what it is talking about it would know that agricultural production in Ontario was more than doubled during the war under the administration of Sir William as head of that department.

Mr. Gillespie is a past farmer and an expert dairyman. Minister of Agriculture Henry is an active farmer and is also interested in a dairy company, just as Mr. Gillespie is. This latter fact has been seized upon by Opposition papers to show that Mr. Henry has a hand in keeping up the high cost of living, something that excites the wrath of our contemporary when the tables are turned.

We neither sneered nor ridiculed. When our contemporary attempts to do either it merely twaddles.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

FOR HEARST, SODEN, and Prohibition.

• • • • •

VOTE FOR Mr. Soden. A vote for him is a vote for Hearst, the champion of Ontario prohibition.

• • • • •

BEWARE of roorbacks. No man or party has faith in anything that is sprung at the last moment.

• • • • •

"THE HEARST organ in West Peterborough attempts to ridicule the argument of Mr. F. D. Kerr," remarks the Examiner. Wrong and malicious as usual. As we would never dream of placing Mr. Kerr in the same catalogue as our contemporary, we would attempt nothing of the kind.

MARK YOUR REFERENDUM BALLOT "NO"

(Mrs. A. F. Calder, Peterboro, in Toronto World.)

Mothers and sisters be it yours as erst in days gone by
To lend your aid to banish booze, and keep Ontario dry,
Ye, whom to suffering most it dooms, may well abhor and hate
The liquor traffic, that on you brings woe of crushing weight;
It robs sweet childhood's years of joy, their's by undoubted claim,
And leaves them but an heritage of poverty and shame.
But see, the dawn is breaking of the glorious day to be,
When from the curse all Canada shall be forever free;
Then, if success upon our cause, we'd have kind heaven bestow
On the twentieth of October we must mark our ballots "no."

A LAST WORD TO THE WOMEN VOTERS

Election day is on Monday, October 20th.

For the majority of the women of Ontario this will be their first appearance at the polls as voters.

Do not let anything prevent you from casting your vote on both the provincial elections and on the referendum.

If you are a mother and a housekeeper, remember that though duties at home seem pressing the half hour devoted to voting for the Hearst candidate in your riding is of far more importance to you and your children than that half hour would be if spent in washing, sweeping, dusting, cooking or any other household work. In fact the adventure of voting will add spice to your whole day's work.

Do not think that one vote less will make no difference. If every woman thought that where would prohibition go?

Do your voting early and it will take less time, as the polling booth is less likely to be crowded.

If this is your first time to vote, you may be interested to know the procedure.

First find out where your polling booth is located. Proclamations posted up in your district, will advise you where to find this. If you live in the city, and are still in doubt, ring up or go to any of the committee rooms, or information offices which you will find advertised in the daily papers.

Polling booths are open on Monday, October 20th, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

At the polling booth you will find the deputy returning officer, a poll clerk, and two or three agents of the candidates. Some of the agents may be women The returning officer is in charge of the ballots and ballot boxes.

Tell him that you want to vote. He will look up your name on the voters' list, and if it is there, will give you two slips of paper. These are the two ballot papers, one for the provincial elections and one for the referendum.

On the first you will find the names of the candidates of that riding. The ballot does not specify which is Conservative, Liberal or any other party. Thus it is absolutely necessary that you should know before going to the polls, who is the Conservative candidate endorsed by Sir William Hearst.

The only mark to be put on this ballot is a plain "x" in the white space to the right of the name of the candidate for whom you are voting Make no other mark or it will destroy the effectiveness of your ballot.

If a voter inadvertently spoils a ballot paper so that she cannot use it as she desires, she may return it to the district returning officer, who will give him another

The other ballot is for your vote on the referendum. On this place an "x" in the "no" column after each question if you are in favor of prohibition. All four questions on the referendum must be answered with the "x," otherwise that ballot will be spoiled.

Having marked your ballots, fold each so that the returning officer's initials are on the outside, and hand it back to the returning officer, and see that he drops it into the ballot box.

CANADA'S DUTY TO BRITISH NAVY WHICH SAVED THE WHOLE WORLD

Peter Wright Talks of Need For Keeping Navy Intact Canada Must Take Her Share of Responsiblity.

Toronto, Oct. 18.— Peter Wright has arrived here. He said he was on a flying trip to Canada, having been invited to address the National at Winnipeg, next week. He had arrived in Winnipeg on Friday last, and then the Navy League asked him to return down to Toronto to address the meeting at Massey Hall tonight in aid of the Nelson Day campaign.

Mr. Wright said he had had the honor of presenting the claims for reparation of the British sailors at the Peace Conference in Paris. He spent a month in Norway and Sweden in working for a minimum wage for sailors. In France, Holland and Denmark he observed how all the leading men had declared that the British navy had beaten the Hun.

"I have come to tell Canada of the great necessity of keeping intact the navy which saved the allied cause," he said. "Canada, to my mind, has a wonderful future depending on a consolidated Empire. That depends, too, on British sea power. This matter should be taken up by the Canadian people and not left to the politicians who sit on the fence and wait to see which way the cat jumps.

"I am pleased to have the opportunity of supporting the Navy League. Its manifest object is a United Empire and to create for Canada an opportunity to make a mercantile marine and also to protect her own shores and other parts like New Zealand and Australia. In producing her quota of ships for policing the sea highways. Canadians must take Nelson's motto and remember their duty."

Asked if he thought the Canadian boys would make good sailors, he said. "Experience in Britain shows that the finest sailors in the service come from the inland west. I found keen anxiety among the boys in Western Canada to have an opportunity to prove their mettle. In Calgary they have the finest system of training I have seen anywhere. They have to come all the way to Winnipeg to get on water at that."

Mr. Wright said his stay in Canada would not be longer than he could help, as he had scarcely been at home for a year.

WILL OF THE LATE JUDGE WINCHESTER

LEFT ESTATE OF $27,666— LAW LIBRARY GOES TO HIS SON

Judge John Winchester, for many years on the County Bench and the Surrogate judge who handled thousands of wills and administrations of estates in the County of Yorks at his chambers in the City Hall, Toronto, executed his own will on July 4, 1913. Judge Winchester, who died on May 8 last, left an estate which has been probated at $27,666.

"I notify and appoint my said wife, Minnie M. Winchester and my sons, Gordon Hossack Winchester and Arthur Scott Winchester, to be executors and trustees under this my will," states the document in part, which was witnessed by J. T. Evans an dJennie B. Webster. "To my eldest son, Gordon Hossack Winchester, my gold watch and chain. To my youngest son, Arthur Scott Winchester, my law library. To my remaining children, out of the remainder of my library, such books as they may choose, the value of each choice under this paragraph to be as nearly equal as possible."

The will directs that the remainder of the estate shall be directed to the support and maintenance of the testator's widow and such of the children who are unmarried and live at home.

HOT WATER FOR SICK HEADACHES

Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headaches are caused by au'o-intoxication—which means self-poisoning Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head, producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilid, aspirin or the bromides, which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drank before breakfast will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache but will cleanse, purify and freshen the alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Total production of bituminous coal in the U. S. since the beginning of the year is now 7,118,000 tons less than in same time last year.

Charges that Japan has introduced licensed vice and opium traffic into Korea were made by Dr. Syngman Khee, president of the "Republic of Korea," in an address to Princeton University students.

"The distribution among my children," instructs another paragraph of the will, "shall be as follows: To my daughter, Minnie Ethel Winchester, the sum of $1,000 and the balance of said estate then remaining in the hands of my trustees shall be equally divided among my children." In the event of any dying, their share shall go to their issue.

A Suggestion for Saving

CASH in the pocket encourages careless spending. You will find it a much easier task to save if you keep your "Spending" money in a Savings Account with The Bank of Toronto. There it is safe and can be drawn upon when really needed.

A reluctance to draw from that account will grow upon you, and protect you from many needless expenditures.

Once the saving habit is acquired, the account, with its earnings of interest, will steadily grow to a substantial amount.

Many young men and women are working out this scheme with us to advantage.

The Soul of a Vision

So then—
My part is ended. Other men,
And women, too, still play their part,
With courage resolute and dauntless heart.

My broken comrade—
Seared by scars that time can not efface,
Is not the jest of fortune; for his aid
A nation's mighty forces doth provide.

And those who live—
To carry on our story down the years,
Face not their "quiet days" in bitter pain;
(Forgotten, now they've stilled the nation's fears)
Dwarfed by the lust of pride and selfish gain.

My Canada—
Thou fair land for whom great love
Inspired my youth to ancient sacrifice;
Grant that our serried ranks in realms above
May witness bear thee, worthy of the Price.

To Pay Debts of Honour

TO the Dead and to the richness of their dying, we must give pause, and in humility confess a debt beyond redemption.

Before the altar of their sacrifice, Canada is consecrated to make its dominion worthy. The Torch that illumines Victory so dearly bought, must burn eternally. Each year of peace must record an added lustre to our heritage.

But to those who have come back in suffering, Canada owes a debt which money can, in part, repay.

It is a Debt of Honour. Canada was pledged to the end, that the wounded and the sick be adequately cared for, until they were fairly fitted for the competitive existence of civil life.

For this purpose, our medical services, and our vocational training schools must be maintained until the need for them is no more.

HUGGINS DID WELL TO FINISH THIRD

WILL MANAGE YANKIES AGAIN NEXT YEAR—TY COBB'S OPINION

Despite reports to the contrary Miller Huggins is to manage the New York Yankees again next year. Toward the end of the baseball season it was rumored he was to be ousted and replaced—possibly by Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyn dodgers. This story has been nailed to the floor as Huggins, before he left New York, came to an agreement with President Ruppert of the Yankees and will be at the helm for another season.

"Huggins is to be given another chance," said a New York baseball man while in Chicago to see the world's series. "When the season closed in the east he went to Ruppert and demanded to know whether he was to be retained or kicked out, adding that if he were to be supplanted he desired to know it immediately so that he would have a chance to cast about for a new position. Ruppert was satisfied with the results obtained and informed Huggins the job was his for one year more."

Panned by New York Critics.

Too much was expected of Huggins in the American League race. When the season opened critics in Gotham declared he had the best looking club in the league and ought to win the pennant. They praised his team to the skies but did not reckon with the strength of the other clubs, and when the Yankees disclosed no disposition to become pennant winners the experts began to ride Huggins and put the blame on his shoulders.

It was then that the story was circulated that the team was to have a new leader.

Huggins was criticised for the manner in which he handled his pitchers, it being asserted by men who watched his club daily that he used little or no judgement in working them. He had three excellent twirlers in Mogridge, Quinn and Thornahlen, but these three were unable to pitch well enough to withstand the power of the White Sox Tigers, and Indians. Huggins strove to maintain his fingers in winning fashion but found the opposition a bit too strong.

Ty Cobb Sizes it Up.

"Huggins came into the American league at a tough time to win the pennant," said Ty Cobb, shortly before the season closed. "It must be admitted he had a fine ball team, but there were three others just as good and perhaps a little bit better. We in Detroit had the greatest ball club I have seen Jennings manage in years and yet we could not win. Cleveland was a hard club to beat at any time and so was the White Sox. The American League has relatively stronger this last season than it has ever been. Therefore one should not blame Huggins or any other manager for not winning."

While it is known that Manager Huggins had a band of terrible sluggers with him it is also known that these same players were not fleet of foot and as agile as they might have been. This had something to do with the failure of the club to beat out the White Sox for the championship. Hits and many of them, had to be made for the Yankees to score as the players did not possess the speed on the bases to take advantage of a few hits made. Baker, Lewis and Pipp, three of the Yankees heavy hitters, are slow and it was proved that a club needs more than driving power in order to win.

Did Well to Get Third.

Huggins did very well with the Yankees in finishing third—if he is allowed to remain in third place, as he will probably be, despite the efforts of President Navin of Detroit club to have the game Carl Mays pitched thrown out of the records. Chances are that the records will not be changed although Mays was declared ineligible by President Johnson when he was suspended. The board of directors of the American League reinstated the pitcher and declared they had the power to do so under the rules of the league—therefore it is not likely Navin's complaint to the national commission will be allowed.

President Navin filed his complaint with the commission he says, to protect his players—as he thinks they are more entitled to a share in the world's series pool than the Yankees. Detroit was beaten for third place by a scant margin and would not have been defeated if Mays had not pitched and won nine games for New York. Therefore Navin asks the commission to ignore Maya' victories and vote the prize to the Tigers. To avoid complications in the American League this probably will not be done.

WELL SATISFIED WITH BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. A. Bernard, La Presentation, Que., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my baby and am well satisfied with them. I have recommended them to several of my friends who have also used them with beneficial results." The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the stomach and bowels and thus prove of benefit in cases of indigestion, constipation, colic, colds, etc. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Labor Reaffirms its Demands for a Better Beer

OVER 900 delegates of Organized Labor, representing every section of industrial Canada, reaffirmed at the big convention in Hamilton three weeks ago, their demand for a better, more palatable, non-intoxicating Beer.

President Tom Moore reviewed in a most comprehensive manner the resolution for better Beer adopted at the previous Congress and the representations made to the Dominion and Provincial Governments for the non-intoxicating 2.50 per cent. (alcohol by weight) Beer of the Ballot. He said in part:—"On the 3rd of March, this year, at the request of representatives of a number of affiliated organizations I arranged an interview with the Dominion Cabinet, and attended with them to present the resolution passed at our last Convention, relating to the increase in the alcoholic strength of beer. This resolution had been endorsed by many hundreds of affiliated bodies throughout the Dominion, and these endorsations were presented to the Government.".

The following statements by leaders of Organized Labor in Ontario, are at once a categorical refutation of false interviews credited to them and published in certain newspapers, and an indication of the practically unanimous stand of workmen in this Province:—

TOM MOORE,
President, Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

"Nearly 1500 of the organizations affiliated with the Trades and Labor Congress have passed resolutions in favor of the sale of light wines and beer. On this evidence and from my own personal observations I believe that the best aid would be given to true temperance by the granting of the above moderate request."

I. MUNROE,
President Ontario Provincial Council of Machinists, and President Toronto District Labor Council.

"I would not favor return to conditions we had before the Ontario Temperance Act came into effect, but am with the fifteen hundred Labor organizations in Canada who favor the manufacture and sale of light Beer and Wine (The Beer of the Ballot) and believe best aid would be given true temperance by voting for legislation to this effect."

JOHN DOGGETT,
Secretary, Toronto Building Trades League.

"The present Prohibition Law on the statute books of Ontario is, in my opinion, class legislation. A law that is applied to operate against the workers and not against the wealthy is an unfair law and should be repealed by the votes of the people. I believe the workers who desire to have a glass of beer should have the opportunity of obtaining same."

JOHN NOBLE,
International Organizer, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

"In reference to statements appearing in many Toronto papers, I desire to emphatically deny having given such statements, or even having been interviewed in the matter. I voted for a Resolution in the American Federation of Labor Convention, held in Atlantic City in June last, for the right of the workers to have beer if they desired it. I contend that the worker should have this right."

HERBERT WRIGHT,
Business Agent, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, and Helpers of America, Local 128.

"In traveling around Ontario since the Ontario Temperance Act came into force, I am firmly convinced that the workers are only asking their rights when asking for a better beer. I personally believe that if the people could obtain a better beer there would be less dope in use in Ontario."

W. F. BUSH,
Organizer, United Garment Workers of America.

"The Labor movement has gone on record repeatedly in favor of a stronger beer and protesting against that right being taken away. Last Spring no less than 1500 labor organizations, out of a total of 1900 organizations in Canada, voted in favor of a stronger beer. I think that in this question, as in the great majority of questions they have been called upon to decide, that they have been proven to be absolutely in the right. As the prohibitionists have not seen fit to compromise on a stronger beer, the way that the workers can teach THEM a lesson is to defeat them absolutely by voting 'Yes' four times."

JOHN SUTHERLAND,
Ex-President, Bricklayers' International Union No. 2.

"I have always been opposed to prohibition. After seeing three years of the Ontario Temperance Act in operation I am more than ever convinced that it is a direct attempt to take away the comfort and pleasure of the worker more than of the leisured or privileged class—and I will vote four times 'Yes.'"

JOHN T. VICK,
President of Industrial Banner.

"I am in favor of a better beer for the workers, with proper facilities for handling same. Knowing the workers as I do, there are times when a glass of beer would be beneficial."

JAS. T. GUNN,
Electrical Workers' Union.

"I am opposed to prohibition because I believe that the individual does not derive his rights from the State, but that the State is created to preserve the individual's right.

"Prohibition is affirmed in general by those who have reasons to continue the exploitation of the masses. No thought is given to the matter as to the right or wrong of it, but it is urged—and it is urged in general—because of economic efficiency. In other words, because if enacted it will bring greater profits to the manufacturer, the financier, and the capitalist generally. Prohibitory legislation as to what one eats or drinks is the earmark of a servile State and therefore in antagonism to working-class interest."

J. A. YOUNG,
Secretary, Provincial Council of Machinists

"I have no desire to see a return to the conditions that obtained previous to September 1916. At the same time I am far from satisfied with the measure of temperance now in effect in this Province.

"I would favor a measure whereby it would be possible for a citizen to obtain a light, refreshing and palatable beer as well as wholesome, pure liquor for medicinal purposes and for use in his own home. I am therefore in favor of substantial amendments to the present Ontario Temperance Act."

JAMES J. RALPH,
Chairman, Ontario Executive, Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

"I desire to say that as Chairman of the Ontario Executive of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada I am following out the declared policy of the Trades Congress and the A. F. of L. in protesting against prohibitory legislation."

WILLIAM FORDHAM,
Supt. Labor Temple.

"This is to certify that I will personally vote four 'Yes's,' regardless of what any paper says, in the coming Referendum."

The workmen of Ontario do not ask for intoxicating or harmful liquors they only want a more wholesome, nourishing and palatable beverage that has been incontestably proven absolutely non-intoxicating.

Is there any fair or just reason why you should not grant this fair request of Labor? Even though YOU do not care for beer as a beverage, is this a time for selfish insistence that OTHERS SHALL NOT have it?

Look at this matter in a broad light intolerance will breed widespread discontent and resentment among workingmen. Ontario cannot afford to have her workmen dissatisfied. Support Labor in its just and reasonable request.

THE RESOLUTION

"Resolution No. 31.—By John Young, Lodge No. 235, International Association of Machinists, Toronto: Whereas, the Ontario Executive of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada did on the 28th day of January last, wait upon the Premier of the Province of Ontario, the Hon. Sir William Hearst, and the members of his Government, and asked that a proper definition of an intoxicating liquor be made.

"And, whereas, the said Committee were able to show that a beverage containing up to 2.50 per cent. of alcohol by weight was a non-intoxicant, and were therefore justified in asking that beverages containing up to 2.50 per cent. of alcohol be allowed to be sold under the Ontario Temperance Act.

"And, whereas, at a convention of upwards of ten thousand labor men from all parts of the Province of Ontario, held in Toronto on Saturday, March 2nd, for the purpose of considering the question of Provincial and Dominion temperance legislation, a resolution was unanimously passed appointing a committee to go to Ottawa to wait on Sir Robert Borden and the members of his Government, and ask that a uniform definition of an intoxicating liquor be made for the whole Dominion, and that 2.50 per cent. of alcohol by weight be fixed as such standard, and that it may be legal to manufacture and sell anywhere in Canada any beverage not exceeding 2.50 per cent. of alcohol by weight.

"And, whereas, at the annual conference of the representatives of the different International Trade Union Organizations held in Ottawa on Monday, the 15th of April last, for the purpose of considering legislative matters, the resolution above referred to passed by the labor men at the Convention in Toronto on the 2nd day of March last, was endorsed by the Conference, and a copy of the resolution handed by the Conference to the War Committee of the Government; and whereas, the working men of Canada have been asked by the Government to co-operate with them in increasing production, and the working men have expressed a willingness to do so, even to the extent of working longer hours.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved, that this Convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada endorses the action of its Ontario Executive and other resolutions as above referred to, and requests the Dominion and Provincial Governments to enact legislation whereby it may be legal to manufacture and sell anywhere in Canada any beverage not exceeding 2.50 per cent. of alcohol by weight."

Earliest Rifle Known

To be of English Make

Has Recently Been Found

THERE is likely to be a revival of the one-time hotly fought question as to whether the British only learned their art of rifle shooting after their experience of the deadly shooting of the backwoodsmen in the War of Independence.

A rifle said to have been made during the reign of Queen Anne has been on exhibition at the National Rifle Association meeting at Bisley. It is the earliest rifle known to have been made in England, and it is also the earliest known English breech-loading flintlock rifle.

The weapon is a long, slightly bell-mouthed rifle made in London by a maker called Willmore. It is equipped with a solid silver butt-plate, carved silver escutcheons, and sideplates, and is loaded from the breech by unscrewing the trigger-guard. The rifle must have been made between 1700 and 1720.

A certain amount of interest attaches to the discovery of the piece. The owner, a well-known collector and authority on firearms, bought it for a few shillings in a curiosity shop because he saw it was a breech-loader of early pattern. Not until he had carried it home and cleaned it thoroughly did he discover that all the mounts were of solid silver and that the piece was actually a Queen Anne rifle.

As the only rifle known in England till 1775 were imported continental arms the discovery of an undubitable Queen Anne piece made in London and bearing proof marks of the London Gunmakers' Company was a matter of considerable surprise.

The following day he went to a well-known armor and firearms dealer in Holborn and told him of his find. The dealer suggested that a breech-loading Queen Anne rifle was an impossibility. "I thought so, too," said the collector, "but it is pure Queen Anne just as much as this pistol is."

He leaned forward and picked up an old silver-mounted cannon barrelled pistol that lay on the dealer's desk. "What do you want for this?" said the collector, examining the pistol.

The dealer said so many pounds, and the collector wrote out a cheque at once. By this extreme edge of coincidence the pistol was the companion piece to the rifle, and was signed by the same maker and decorated in the same style.

The rifle is of extreme interest to experts, as it has a folding aperture back sight, identical in principle with modern aperture sights. It's interest to historians will be more so owing to the date placed upon it.

"Flappers" Work on Sewers.

You may be under the impression that you know your mother tongue, but just pick up a trade paper, run through the advertisements, and you will speedily discover that there is a lot of English of which you have never heard.

It was seeing an advertisement for a "goffer" that started the writer of this article on the track, says Tit-Bits. Though by experts golf is frequently pronounced "goff," this contributor had a shrewd suspicion that no one advertises for a golfer in a paper devoted to the metal trades. He began to ask questions, and here are some of the results.

As a matter of fact, a "goffer" is a gentleman who makes knife blades, while as for a "snarler," he is anything but what the name implies. He is simply a man who makes metal teapots.

Still pursuing the nomenclature of the metal traders, we find "bumpers" and "buffers." The former is more fully described as a leaf bumper, and his special job is bumping up the leaves which commonly ornament metal work. As for the "buffer," she—for a buffer is usually a woman—works a kind of revolving wheel which is covered with sand and oil, and is used for the purpose of taking the file marks off silver goods which are in process of manufacture.

The London County Council just before the war granted an advance of two shillings a week to all its "flappers." Now, if this had happened since 1914 no one would have been surprised, for all offices were full of young ladies of the type so described. These "flappers," however, turned out to be a very different brand. They are stalwart men in big boots who regulate the storm flaps of the sewers which open on the Thames and so allow the water to escape evenly in times of heavy rain.

A recent witness at the City Summons Court, London, described himself as a "trouncer." When the magistrate asked whom he trounced, the man look mildly surprised and explained that he helping his mate on an ice van.

His Eyes.

Sir Rosslyn Wemyss is one of the comparatively few British public men who does not mind telling a story against himself. This is one that was heard from him recently. The embryo admiral, having picked up a red-hot cinder during his watch appeared on deck wearing a green shade in addition to his customary eye-glass. Upon which a bold A.B. was heard to remark: "Lumme, Bill! There's a guy with a dashed conservatory over one eye, and a dashed verandah over the other."

White Gloves for Judges.

The custom of presenting a judge with a pair of white gloves when the court assembles with no case to try owes its origin to the fact that in olden days judges were forbidden to wear gloves on the bench for fear of bribes being dropped into them.

Trial by Writing.

If a theft takes place in a Japanese household all the servants are required to write a certain word with the same brush. The conscience is supposed to betray its workings in the waves of the ideographs written.

ANCIENTS PLAYED TENNIS.

In Twelfth Century, Margot, a Woman, Was a Champion.

One must go back to the Greeks and Romans for the origin of tennis, which descended to England by way of France, says the National Geographic Magazine. In the twelfth century a game with ball and plaited gut bat was played on horseback. Then came "L boude,' in which the horses were abandoned. This was a "royal game," at least from the time that Louis X died after excessive playing had induced chills. Chaucer wrote: "But canstow playen racket to and fro," while the church found it necessary to prohibit priests on the continent from spending too much time upon it.

Margot was the Molla Bjurstedt of the twelfth century, famed especially for her back handstroke. Henry VIII of England was a youthful devotee, while Louis XIV's heavy expense accounts show salaries paid to caretakers of his courts. Complaint was heard at one time that there were "more tennis players in Paris than drunkards in England." In Shakespeare's Henry V are these lines:—

"When we have match'd our rackets to these balls
We will, in France, by God's grace play a set
Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard."

Manufacture of the accessories of the game became so flourishing an industry in England in the sixteenth century that appeal was made for a protective tariff against imported balls.

Until that century the hand continued to be used for batting, but soon the racket came into general use. A match, probably played on a Windsor Castle court, is recorded in which the King of Castile gave his opponent "fifteen" because the latter used his hand.

Even tennis, like all medieval sport, was not free from the taint of gambling and charlatanism. It was charged that "certayne craftie persons arranged for crack Lombard players to meet Henry VIII." The monarch was induced to make wagers with these players until, losing large sums, he became suspicious and played only with amateurs. In one famous match the Emperor Maximilian was his partner, the two playing against the Prince of Orange and the Marquis of Brandenborow.

THE VISIT OF THE PRINCE.

The Prince of Wales' visit to Canada is about to end. The thousands who have seen him want to see him again. He has certainly won the hearts of all Canada. The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal with characteristic enterprise have secured a real life-like portrait of the Prince, 16 x 22 inches, that should be in every Canadian home. It is a very pleasing portrait and bears a copy of the Prince's autograph. The Family Herald sends a copy of this portrait free to all Family Herald subscribers for 1920. The subscription price of that great family paper is $1.25 a year, big value in itself, but with the Prince's portrait certainly is the greatest value ever offered. The Family Herald and Weekly Star will be kept busy booking orders, as the demand has set in with a rush. People who are not subscribers to the Family Herald and Weekly Star, have no idea of the treat they are missing.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE WEST RIDING OF PETERBOROUGH

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

Having again received the unanimous nomination of the Liberal Convention of West Peterborough as a candidate for Parliamentary honors at the ensuing Provincial Election, to be held on October 20th, I desire to solicit your hearty support in favor of my election.

WAR WORK

Having represented you for the past five years (war years), I can safely say that during that period, while every effort was being made to win the war—my record is known to you all, and on that record I ask you to judge me on the position I have taken on all measures affecting the war work.

TEMPERANCE QUESTION

When I was elected in 1914 I stated my views on the Temperance question during that campaign; I pledged myself to vote for Temperance legislation on all occasions brought forward by whatever party, and the record in the House will show that I carried out that pledge.

The Referendum vote is to be taken on the same date as the Provincial election, October 20, and if I am again elected your representative I promise to give my whole hearted support to the Government elected to carry out the will of the people as expressed by their votes on the Referendum ballot.

AGRICULTURAL LEGISLATION.

During the years preceding 1914 every one agreed that the Department of Agriculture was asleep. The very first opportunity offered in the House I introduced the question of a forward movement in Agriculture, and, along with other Liberal members of the House, have earnestly advocated a more strenuous progressive policy in Agriculture.

The shortage of production, the problem of farm help, and the numerous perplexing questions affecting the farmer, cannot be solved unless we seriously consider the cause and apply the remedy.

During the past few years of unrest in the country, due mainly to excessive living costs, I have advocated that demonstration farms be established in different counties, and increased attention be paid to the education to be received in our Agricultural College and Experimental Farms, and that the knowledge gained at the Agricultural College be put into practice on Demonstration Farms, where a profit and loss account could be kept, and the costs of producing 100 pounds of milk or a pound of pork, or any of the many products of the farm, could be ascertained and established, such information being sadly lacking today. By such a system of education the farm would be looked upon as a business manufacturing plant, that would attract the best brains to the development of the greatest asset in Canada today - the farm. Our production is unlimited. The markets of the world are calling for food, and our own citizens living from hand to mouth at the enormous prices, wondering what the next six months have in store for them.

PROVINCIAL HIGHWAYS

Our highways need much repair. Auto and truck traffic is becoming daily increased, and we must develop a road policy which will make for hauling our produce to market as cheaply as possible. To this matter I promise to give my best thought.

EDUCATION

Education, I am pleased to say, is in the hands of a new Minister, in whom we hope for great things. I believe in a separate education for the city and rural districts. An education in the rural districts to educate the boy and girl in the great lessons of Agriculture, making two blades of grass grow where one grew before, developing the average cow of Ontario today, which gives 5,000 pounds of milk in a milking period of 10,000 pounds, producing a pound of pork or beef at a lower cost, and giving to the world the blessing which we most need—a reduction in the high cost of living.

THE LABOR QUESTION

Regarding the important question of Labor, my own policy has been to treat Labor as I would wish to be treated myself. I have had a good deal of experience with labor of various kinds and conditions, and have never had any trouble along that line, and do not expect to have any.

OUR RETURNED HEROES

To me, the welfare of the returned soldiers and soldiers' wives is one of the most essential duties of our country. Therefore I promise that I will give my hearty support to every movement calculated to promote their very best interests. The soldiers who fought for me for five years deserve, and may expect to receive, my earnest consideration during the remaining years of my life.

THE WOMAN VOTE

I am delighted to know that the women are to enjoy equal privileges with men in the use of the franchise at this election, and in the exercise of this privilege I have the greatest faith in their good judgment and purifying influence. Their power with the ballot on October 20, especially with the Prohibition and Labor problems, will, I feel certain, be of far-reaching effect. I will, therefore consider the vote of the ladies counted in my favor at the approaching election to be instruction to take high grounds on all matters calculated to elevate the morals of this community as well as of the whole Dominion.

CONCLUSION

These questions I have dealt with are, to my mind, the outstanding questions of the day. If I am elected again as your representative, I promise to give the best of my ability, my mature judgment on all questions affecting the interests of the West Riding of Peterborough, the Province of Ontario, the Dominion of Canada and the British Empire, of which we today are so justly proud.

Thanking you, ladies and gentlemen, for your support in the past, and soliciting your support again on the 20th day of October, I remain,

Your obedient servant,
GEO. A. GILLESPIE.

Ingersoll On Alcohol

One of the greatest temperance operations ever delivered in the English language was delivered by Ingersoll in a case where he was defending a liquor dealer. It was as follows:

"I am aware that there is a perjudice against any man engaged in the manufacture of alcohol. I believe that from the time it issues from the coiled and poisonous worm in the distillery, until it empties into the hell of death, dishonor and crime, it demoralises everybody that touches it, from its source to where it ends. I do not believe anybody can contemplate the subject without becoming prejudiced against that liquor crime.

"All we have to do gentlemen, is to think of the wrecks on either bank of the stream of death; of the suicides, of the insanity; of the poverty, of the ignorance, of the destitution; of the little children tugging at the faded and weary breasts of weeping wives, asking for bread; of the talented men of genius it has wrecked, the men strugglnig with imaginary serpents produced by this devilish thing; and when you think of the jails the almshouses, of the asylums, of the prisons, of the scaffolds upon either bank, I do not wonder that every thoughtful man is prejudiced against this stuff called alcohol.

"Intemperance cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength, and age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affections, erases conjugal loves, blots out filial attachments blights parental hope, and brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; death, not life. It makes wives widows; children orphans; fathers fiends, and all of them paupers and beggars. It feeds rheumatism, nurses gout, welcomes epidemics, invites cholera, imports pestilence, and embraces consumption. It covers the land with idleness, misery and crime. It fills your jails supplies your almshouses; and demands your asylums. It engenders controversies, fosters quarrels and cherishes riots. It crowds your penitentiaries and furnishes victims to your scaffolds. It is the lifeblood of the gambler, the ele-

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW

Look to the Future

Begin with the Boys

THE glorious victories of Drake and Nelson were destined to be the foundation of our Empire and the guarantee of the freedom of the seas, which makes possible the vast international trade of Britain and her Dominions.

And yet when Drake and Nelson chose the sea as their life-work, who was there to know what would be the overwhelming consequences of their decision?

Today, if you have any question in your mind as to whether you should support the work of the Boys' Naval Brigades, study the matter with an eye to the future. Get clearly in mind the tremendous importance of Canadian products reaching foreign markets, which can only be assured by the building of a great Canadian Mercantile Fleet, manned with Canadian Seamen!

We may build ships by the thousand, but if we cannot man them ourselves our position is still economically unsound. If we do not train Canadian lads to man our merchant fleet, we shall be left behind in the race for export markets—we shall have missed the greatest opportunity for trade expansion in all history!

What will YOU do to help some Canadian boy who is anxious to learn seamanship, and so be of the greatest service to his country?

Let your contribution to the fund be a worthy answer. Help them by giving!

Aims of the NAVY LEAGUE OF CANADA

To emphasize Canada's opportunities and responsibilities on the sea.

To raise funds for the relief of our merchant seamen, injured in the war, and for dependents of those who were killed.

To maintain sailors' homes in our ports.

To train boys and young men for our merchant ships by the organization of Boys' Naval Brigades.

VOTE FOR THOMPSON

JAMES THOMPSON.

1 It means a vote for clean, progressive government.

2 It means a vote for a good roads policy which will bring good roads to all the people.

3 It means a vote for a Government that has given and will continue to give the people real temperance.

4 It means a vote for a Hydro-Electric policy that will bring power and light to every farm at a low cost, the Government sharing the cost of installation.

5 It means a vote for a Compensation Law that provides compensation without cost to the workman.

6 It means an advanced educational policy with liberal grants.

PETERBORO ART ASSOCIATION MEETING

ANNUAL GATHERING—REPORTS OF YEAR'S BUSINESS—OFFICERS ARE ELECTED.

The Annual Meeting of the Peterboro branch of the Women's Art Association was held on Tuesday Evening. The President Mrs. Eastwood occupied the chair.

The secretary's report for the year 1918-1919 was read and adopted.

The election of officers then took place and resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres., Mrs. Mercer; President Mrs. A. E. Sherwood; 1st. Vice Pres., Mrs. V. Eastwood; 2nd. Vice Pres. Mrs. Mowat; 3rd. Vice Pres., Mrs. Roland Waddell; Secretary, Mrs. Roland Denne; Treas., Mrs. C. E. Jamieson; Archivist, Miss M. Rush.

Honorary members' representatives Mrs. Goodwill, Mrs. Neal, Mrs. George MacDonald, Mrs. Pretty, Mrs. Gordon Mrs. K. S. Wightman. Lecture Mrs. F. J. A. Morris; Exhibition Miss Hutton; Social, Mrs R. H. Turner; Musical, Mrs. Gliddon; Public, School Medals, Mrs. Rush; Reading Club, Mrs. Rollins; Press Com. Mrs Kenner.

A hearty vote of thanks and appreciation was voted to Mrs. V. Eastwood for her untiring efforts on behalf of the Association during the four trying years of the war, in keeping the society together as in so many places the Women's Association died out entirely. A vote of thanks was tendered to all the Executive who had assisted the President during that time.

The 14th. Annual Report of the Peterboro Branch of the Women's Art Association of Canada.

Members of the local branch have every reason to be gratified with the success which attended their efforts throughout the past year, to fulfil the purposes for which the Association exists. During the period of the war they carried on in a very restricted manner, but when the war came to an end an energetic campaign was launched to arouse interest in the association.

For four days beginning February 19th, an exhibition was held which was well attended. Old members express themselves as delighted at the revival of the local branch, and many new names were added to the members list. We must thank Miss Bertram of Toronto, for getting together this most interesting collection of members' pictures.

On March 11th, Dr. Jessie Birnie delivered an exceedingly instructive address on "The Great Drama of Napoleon's Life."

About the middle of March we had on view, in the studio, a collection of charming etchings by Canadian Artists. This exhibition was open during one week and was much admired On March 25th Mr. Frank J. A Morris of the Collegiate Institute staff gave a lecture entitled "Wordsworth and the Romantic Revival," which was a delight to those who listened to it.

On April 1st, "The Pioneer Literature of Canada and the United States" was very ably dealt with by Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Langley, and on May 1st, the Rev. F. C. Malott delivered an address entitled "A little trip to the Art Galleries of Europe," which was both interesting and instructive and beautifully illustrated During the year there were nine executive meetings.

Our Treasurer reports a balance on hand of $73 93.

Medals were again donated to the Public Schools and there were many competitors, which shows that prizes act as a stimulus to childish effort.

One of the goals for which the local branch strives, is that it may give to our fair city a picture worthy of it, and of the association.

The picture is to be the work of a recognized Canadian Artist, and it is hoped will be the nucleus of a future gallery.

Miss Defries of Washington, when speaking in Toronto, before the Social Service Department of the University said, "The cry of the people for shorter hours was that they might have time to work at the things they love." Might one not add that it also is that they may have time to see and enjoy that which is beautiful and thus satisfy the unconscious craving of their souls and develop the authetic and spiritual side of their nature?

Every city should have some good pictures which belong to the people

Is it not possible that our progressive city fathers will help us in our efforts to have the city possess a gallery?

Canadians have yet to learn to cease to regard art as a luxury.

A life devoid of beauty is a starved life. To quote in this connection the words of Him who planted in each one a love of the beautiful were surely not irreverent.

"Man shall not live by bread alone."

His Description.

"Sam," said the Judge, "I wonder if you know what liquor is."

PAINFUL NEURALGIA

Most people think of neuralgia as a pain in the head or in the face but neuralgia may affect any nerve in the body. Different names are given to it when it affects certain nerves Thus neuralgia of the sciatic nerve is called sciatica, but the character of the pain and the nature of the disease are the same. The cause being the same, the cure to be effective must be the same. The pain in neuralgia is caused by starved nerves. The blood which carries nourishment to the nerves has become thin and impure and no longer does so, and the pain you feel is the cry of the nerves for their natural food. You may ease the pains of neuralgia with hot applications, but you can only cure the trouble by enriching and purifying the blood. For this purpose we know of no medicine that can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich blood and thus act as the most efficient of nerve tonics. If you are suffering from this most dreaded of troubles, or any form of nerve trouble, give these pills a fair trial and see how speedily you will be restored to good health.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE DAILY MISERY OF ILL-HEALTH

Three Years of Suffering Quickly Relieved by "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. GASPARD DUBORD

139 Avenue Pius IX, Montreal.

"For three years, I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and my general health was very bad. I consulted a physician and took his medicine and faithfully carried out his instructions; but I did not improve and finally the doctor told me I could not be cured.

At this time, a friend advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and I did so. After taking two boxes of 'Fruit-a-tives', I was greatly relieved; and gradually this marvelous fruit medicine made me completely well.

My digestion and general health are splendid—all of which I owe to "Fruit-a-tives".

BIG ADVANCE IN PRICE OF MILK

HAS BEEN INCREASED BY $5 A TON AT CHEESE FACTORIES IN COMBINE COUNTIES OF ONTARIO

The following is a summary of reports made by agricultural representatives of the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

Elgin reports that livestock have been gaining in general condition on the improved fall pastures, but that some cattle are being marketed rather unfit. There is also an increased demand for pure-bred stock in that country, as American buyers are picking up some good shorthorns. In Renfrew a number of cattle are being sold off the pasture. Waterloo states that few feeders are being bought, as farmers are short of grain, and are afraid of the markets.

The milk flow is keeping up well for the time of the year. Producers have advanced prices to winter rates in many parts of the province. Leeds reports that during the last month prices for milk ran from $39 to $40 a ton at cheese factories, and $6 to $7 at the condenseries.

Leeds, Hastings and Victoria complain that many brood sows are being put on the market, while Waterloo reports that "young pigs can be bought almost at your own price at present."

Frontenac observes a tendency towards an increase of at least five or ten per cent in the number of sheep kept.

The honey yield in Renfrew has been most satisfactory, averaging about 100 lbs. to the hive.

Potatoes are uneven in yield, and will run considerably below the average per acre. So far there has been unusual freedom from scab or rot.

well advanced, and a good supply of excellent ensilage is assured.

Fall wheat at present looks most promising. It has some along rapidly during the last two weeks, and has a good top; some are afraid that it may get too heavy if growing weather continues.

Comparatively little grain has yet been marketed, adn it is likely that less than usual will be, as the yields of spring grains have been rather light. Renfrew states that some farmers may have to buy oats. Hay is seling at from $20 to $22 a ton. Straw is very scarce and very hard to procure.

Farm ploughing is well on, the favorable weather permitting a large acreage to be done. Other field work is also well forward.

Never eat pie with a knife. It's all right to eat cheese with pie, but knives should be eaten alone.

TO THE ELECTORS OF EAST PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen;

Having received the unanimous nomination of the United Farmers of Ontario, of East Peterborough, and believing I can serve the electors of this riding in a manner satisfactory to them, I solicit your vote and kindly interest in my behalf.

I am a practical farmer and, as East Peterborough is a typical farmers' constituency, I believe a resident farmer would be of more service to the riding than a representative whose material interests are elsewhere.

Thanking you in advance for any favours you may do for me, I beg to remain,

Your obedient servant,

E. N. McDONALD

ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"

For Colds, Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Toothache, Earache, and for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuritis, take Aspirin marked with the name "Bayer" or you are not taking Aspirin at all.

Handy tin boxes containing 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists sell larger "Bayer" packages.

Accept only "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in an unbroken "Bayer" package which contains complete directions. Then you are getting real Aspirin—the genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nine-teen years. Now made in Canada.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

A List of Words That Often "Back-Fire."

Poor phrasing, and the careless selection of words, is noticeable in a great deal of retail-store advertising. It is so easy to slip into terms of exaggeration and shadings of the truth that one department store head has issued a little booooklet o frules on the subject. In it are set forth the customary words and phrases of the trade, with reasons why they may or may not be used. The following are a few examples:

"All sizes." The use of this phrase is permitted only when a complete stock of all sizes is on hand.

"Bargain." (as aplied to goods quoted below regular price) is a word the public understands, and its use is permitted where circumstances warrant.

"Best" is prohibited. Frequent mis-use of the word has deprived it of its meaning, and it is impossible to tell just when its application is correct.

"Choice of the House" or "Entire Stock." These phrases are only permitted where every articles is in stock and where no reserve supply is held back.

"Cost," "At Cost" or "Below Cost" are not allowed because the public is very likely to look upon them with suspicion.

"Ever Before" is a meaningless phrase and is not used.

"Fortunate Purchase," "Sample Lot" and "Manufacturers' Overstock" are not allowed to stimulate interest in goods from regular stock. When used they must apply truthfully to conditions

"Half Price," "One-third Off" and similar phrases are only permitted where prices are actually one-half, one-third or more off.

"Last Season's" is O. K. I fit expresses the truth.

"Limited Quantity." The use of this is encouraged where the suply is likely to be exhausted before the end of the day.

"Never Before," "Never Again" are prohibited.

"Not All Sizes" is misleading. Sizes should be stated, if possible giving the amount of each, if all sizes are not on hand.

"Not the Latest" to be used only when the goods are not entirely out of date.

"Regular Price Should Be" or "Would Be" or "Made to Sell For" are phrases used when goods are advertised that were bought below the market price.

"Seconds" or "Run of the Mill" should always be used in an advertisement of such goods.

"Sold Everywhere At" is misleading and therefore not accepted.

"Special," "Special Price" or "Special Sale" must be complied with literally. Price in each instance must be below regular.

"The Latest" "The Newest" must express absolute truth.

"Usually Sold For" does not refer to competitors' prices, but to the store's own, and means the same as regular price.

"Value" is another meaningless word because of overuse. It is also difficult to judge the exact value of any particular article.

"Width of Merchandise" should only be used in stating width as it is at that time; not as it was before bleaching or shrinking.

"Worth Up To" is forbidden because it allows for too much misrepresentation. Lowest as well as highest price must be stated.

These are simple rules of precaution, but they no doubt account in no small degree for this store's remarkable following.

Ambulance Required, But Goods Arrived

One day when a new salesman fell down because conditions were not as per the regular program the proprietor of a Denver store said to him: "Use your head. Get it done some way. There is always a way and the young man who figures things out quickly is the one who gets to the top."

The salesman said he would try to do better.

That was Saturday

The very next Tuesday his opportunity came. The boss had taken one of the cars to run down to market. The other was out. Mrs. Watkins had called up to have a dinner order delivered at once. There was no boy there and the cashier was too new to trust. "My kingdom for a jitney," the salesman thought as he went to the door and looked up and down the street, knowing full well that Mrs. Watkins was pacing the floor. What had happened to the car?

Then he saw a solution—one that would have appealed to Fatty Arbuckle. A gray ambulance was being fed some gas at the oil station on the corner about a block down. The salesman ran over. "Got a trip ahead?" he asked. No, the man had just finished one and had found his gas too low. Would he come over to make a special rush trip for the store?

"Somebody hurt?"

"No, just a delivery—one that has to be made within the next ten minutes, or I lose my job."

"What! Oh, well, I'll help you out. Where is it?"

Five minutes later Mrs. Watkins saw the big gray ambulance drive to her curbing. That was all she saw for fifteen minutes—for she was not aware that it was a basket of groceries rather than a stretcher with her husband on it that was to be taken from the rear. When she became normal it was too late to prepare any dinner. And what the ambulance driver said to the salesman was not fit language to quote, but what could the boss say?

The young man had shown initiative by the wholesale.

"Grab-Bag Sale" Clears Odds and Ends.

Once a year the offices in St. Joseph, Mo., are very much cluttered up with bags of merchandise. And they originate with the Kirkpatrick Jewelry Company, Eighth and Felix streets, of that city.

At clearance sale time, once a year for a good many years, this store has selected the odds and ends and "lemons" from its stock preparatory to the heavy selling in the fall. These are put into paper bags which fill the windows and the showcases. Some are worth many times the price asked for a selection "sight unseen"; but for the most part the bags contain articles which the store is glad enough to sell at the price of a quarter, good value though each be. As soon as the doors open the early shoppers swarm in and begin to pick. At noon office workers begin to visit the store. And almost every one takes more than the one selection. When a lucky party secures an unusually good bargain it adds to the zest of the others; and by evening the mountain of bags has melted.

Clerks Must Know Multiplication Table.

Each fraction of an inch given over the correct yardage and each fraction wrongly multiplied spels a considerable loss at the end of a year. If such errors were made by a number of clerks, the loss would assume gigantic proportions.

To overcome this, however, Mandel Brothers supply applicants for the position with a test sheet giving several examples in fractional multiplication. No clerk is permitted to sell this class of merchandise unless he can pass the somewhat intricate test contained on the forms. This test, according to the vocational director of Mandel Brothers, has saved the concern thousands of dollars since its inception.

NOW FEELS 20 YEARS YOUNGER

"TANLAC IS FINEST THING I EVER HEARD OF," SAYS WILLIAM THOMPSON

"After eight years of suffering Tanlac has put me on my feet and made me feel twenty years younger," said William Thompson, a well known mechanic, employed by the City of Berkeley, Cal., and who lives at 1116 Glen Ave., the other day.

"Acute indigestion bothered me so bad," he continued, "that I would have violent pains in my left side, and I was afraid to eat anything because it always caused me awful suffering. Gas would form on my stomach and I would feel as tight as a drum, and I would get so short of breath I thought every minute would be my last one. I was so constipated that I had to take a laxative every night, and at times I would get so dizzy I couldn't walk and would have to lean up against a building until this feeling passed over and I came to myself. I never slept good at night and my kidneys were out of order and many a night I would have to get up four or five times and I had awful pains in my back that were caused by my kidneys.

"This was my condition and I might have still been in this shape now, if it hadn't been for a friend who reccommended Tanlac to me so highly that I decided to try it at once. It seems too good to be true that after all these years I finally found a medicine that can do what Tanlac has done for me. Why, I never have the sign of a pain now and no matter what I eat I digest it perfectly and don't suffer from gas or from pains in my stomach. Those dizzy spells never come on me, and I'm not constipated, and sleep like a log every night and get up feeling like a young man. Tanlac is the finest medicine I ever heard of and you can count on me to pass the good word along whenever I get the chance."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd., in Havelock by A. C. Denike, in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd., in Fowlers Corners by W. A. Hunter, in Gelert by A. J. Scott, in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

About Bathing.

Frequent bathing is conducive to good health as well as comfort. It keeps the pores of the skin clear, so that they can perform their proper function of clearing the system, through the skin, of excretions which are not discharged through the mouth, nose, kidneys or alimentary canal. Rinse with cold water. A brisk rub after the bath promotes circulation of blood.

In Piccadilly.

Piccadilly is believed to have got its name from pickadelles or piccadillies, a variety of turnover collar. A tailor named Higgins, who had made a fortune selling these articles of apparel, built a home in that particular part of London in 1630 and called it Piccadilly hall, hence the name Piccadilly.

Flax.

It has been pointed out to the farmers that the growing of flax, when planted in rotation with other crops, caused no more exhaustion of the soil than other cereals and not so much as oats. Flax takes considerably more nitrogen from the soil than wheat or oats, but that chemical property can be replaced by rotating the flax with clover.

A Twisted Chimney.

A "twisted chimney" distinguishes an Elizabeth manor house in the ancient town of Buckingham, England, which is to be offered for sale shortly, and the auctioneers assert that the secret of this mode of construction is lost, and that the only other "twisted chimney," and that less perfect, is at Hampton Court.

The Way to say "No"

Mark Your Ballot with an X after Each Question under the word "No."

		YES	NO
1	Are you in favour of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?		X
2	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
3	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure in standard hotels in local municipalities that by a majority vote favour such sale and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X
4	Are you in favour of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?		X

Above is an exact reproduction of the Referendum ballot, showing the correct way to Vote in order to sustain the Ontario Temperance Act as it stands.

Everybody should study the four questions and realize exactly what they mean. Do not be misled by the insidious demand for "light" beer.

The beer of the ballot is 118% stronger than the Ontario Temperance Act now allows, and over five times as strong as the limit allowed for beer defined as non-intoxicating in Great Britain and the United States.

Must Answer Each Question

1. Unless you vote on every question your ballot is spoiled.
2. You must mark your answer to each question with an "X" only. Anything else would spoil your ballot.
3. Unless a majority vote "No" on question 1 the bars will be restored and the sale of all kinds of intoxicants permitted.
4. Unless a majority vote "No" on questions 2, 3 and 4 the Ontario Temperance Act will become almost worthless.
5. The only SAFE course is to mark your ballot as shown above.

"No!"—Four Times—"No!"

INDEPENDENT LABOR PARTY HOLD CAMPAIGN MEETING AT G. W. V. HALL

Several Speak in Support of Mr. Tooms and the Candidate Explains His Position

The G.W.V.A. assembly hall was the scene of a very enthusiastic Labor meeting in the interests of Mr. Thomas Tooms last evening. Mr. Peter McArthur, president of the local Independent Labor party, occupied the chair and spoke briefly of the aims and objects of the organization and voiced his appreciation of Mr. Tooms as the candidate.

He spoke of the great future ahead of the Labor party and hoped that before they were engaged in another campaign they would have a paper of their own to compete with the capitalistic press of the city.

Mr. Tooms' Address.

Mr. Tooms, in delivering his first address to the electors of the city of Peterborough since receiving the nomination of the Independent Labor for Labor because Labor stands for political and industrial democracy. By industrial democracy Mr. Tooms explained that he meant a fair return for the wage-earners' work.

"We are the real basis of the country," declared Mr. Tooms. "What the country needs is fair, strong initiative in the legislature and it is time the people took advantage of their opportunity and elect laborers who stand for this strong initiative."

He did not claim to belong to a perfect party but Labor is willing to learn and profit by its mistakes, and if it does not make a better showing than either other party, then it will not deserve to be returned at the next election.

Mr. Tooms thought the idea of the farmer and the industrial worker not getting together is a decided mistake. The farmer and laborer are both essentially producers and desire the same reforms. He spoke of the very encouraging reception he had received during the campaign in the country.

"Laborers are behind Sir Adam Beck in the hydro electric campaign" declared Mr Tooms. He spoke of how the farmers and laborers are working together for the public ownership of power.

He considered it would be a credit to Peterborough to elect independent candidates in both east and west ridings.

platform of both parties. "But they were stolen from the platform of the Independent Labor party," he declared.

"This party is not a revolutionary party, but an evolutionary party, no matter what you may hear to the contrary.

"The liquor traffic has nothing to do with politics. The political parties are merely using this question as a football to hide some of the more important issues. You have to decide that by the referendum ballot and I do not see how a party can go against the will of the people as they appear to be doing. The Labor party is in favor of a referendum to the people on all important questions.

"We stand for free and compulsory education. We also want equal opportunities for all.

"We stand for Government cold storage plants and grain elevators." Then he said that at the present time these are the curse to the country but they could be a blessing if used in the interests of the people.

Mr. Tooms explained the platform of referendum and recall. He declared that if elected he would make periodical visits to all parts of the constituency and explain what was going on in Toronto and what work he had accomplished while there.

P. C. Lloyd delivered a very animated address in favor of Mr. Tooms and Labor's interests.

Mr. Thomas McMurray also spoke on behalf of Mr. Tooms and told of the excellent reception the Labor campaigners had received in the country.

The speakers all expressed themselves as being confident of the success of their candidate and are looking forward to Mr. Tooms' election and the celebration of the "funeral" of the old political parties.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

JAPAN ENCOURAGES FLYING

Tokio, Sept. 18. — The Japanese Government is preparing to appropriate the equivalent of $125,000,000 for the development of aviation, the amount to be expended over four or five years. Interest in aviation has been stimulated here by the special French aviation corps which is teaching the Japanese army.

REBELLION IN STOMACH

"Pape's Diapepsin" at once ends Indigestion and Sour, Acid Stomach

Lumps of undigested food cause pain. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sick, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented and turned sour; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food—just take a tablet or two of Pape's Diapepsin to help neutralize acidity and in five minutes you wonder what became of the pain, acidity, indigestion and distress.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless stomach antacid is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs so little at drug stores.

LAKEFIELD

(Special Correspondence.)

Harvest Festival

Lakefield, Oct. 17—The Harvest Festival Services were held in St. John's Church, on Sunday, Oct. 12. The church was suitably decorated for the occasion, with fruits, vegetables, corn and flowers.

The morning service was in charge of Rev. W. Archbold, D. D., rector of the parish, who delivered a Thanksgiving address, impressing on the people the importance of Thanksgiving this year.

In the evening Rev. W. H. White of St. Lukes' Church, Peterboro, spoke on the words of our Lord. "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

Both services were well attended. The choir rendered special music. The Anthem being "O praise ye the Lord," Mr. H. Fitzgerald taking the solo part.

Thanksgiving.

The services in the Lakefield Methodist Church on Sunday, were well attended, and the church full of people listeden with great interest to the addresses which were full of Thanksgiving and praise for the great joy and happiness the Lord has given the people.

The choir rendered Harvest music in an acceptable manner. In the evening there was no services in the Presbyterian church, to allow its members to unite with the Methodist.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to flush Kidneys if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

has stood the test of the most exacting musical critics at home and abroad. It is what they say that is worth while telling:

"It afforded me the greatest pleasure to know that so fine an instrument as the Grand Piano of Heintzman & Co., used at my concert in the armories, is manufactured in Canada." —Pol Plancon, the great French Basso.

"The tone is delightful, the elasticity of touch marvellous; every note ringing out in clear, pearly and limpid quality."—Albani.

"I found the tone massive in its sonority, and of very excellent quality, with a particularly limpid tone in its mezzo tints."—Friedheim.

"I don't hesitate to say that the Heintzman & Co. piano surpassed in beauty of tone any piano I have used anywhere."—Is Pachmann

Words equally as appreciative have come from Tetrazzini, Calve, Nordica, Melba, the Chernlavsky Brothers, and many others who have used and know this world-famed piano.

Nothing is ever withheld that can add to the completeness of this piano, whether in architectural construction, or in beauty, power, sweetness and perfect rounding out of tone, making it the choice of those who are satisfied only with the highest in a piano.

COAL IS SHORT IN WESTERN CANADA

SERIOUS SITUATION THREATENED SHOULD U.S. STRIKE MATERIALIZE.

Winnipeg, Oct. 18.—Local dealers predict a serious shortage of coal in the event of the threatened strike of coal miners in the United States becoming a reality on November 1. There is a slight shortage of coal in Western Canada at the present time, and all chances of getting more would be automatically cancelled by a strike, they say.

Although there is said to be a large quantity of American bituminous coal on the docks at Fort William, it is believed that railroads, factories, apartment blocks and large buildings would soon use it up Western coal mines would be unable to cope with the increased demand which would follow a serious shortage of American coal, dealers said.

Why She Worries.

"Jim's wife is never at peace when he is out of her sight."

"Is it because she loves him so?"

"No; it's because she knows him so."

Corduroy trousers and blue chambray shirts will be the class attire until the cost of living decreases, according to the resolution adopted by the senior boys of Valparaiso Ind., high school.

New York Sun estimates number of idlers in that city at 220,000, of whom 130,000 are classified as striking unionists, 50,000 unclassed, and 50,000 non-strikers forced out of work by strikes.

A Paris despatch says 40,000 motor cars taken over by the French from the U. S. army are rotting in a small park in the Landes region.

FOR THOSE PESKY PIMPLES

There are Handsome Complexions in Almost Every Village That Prove the Remarkable Value of Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Nature decreed that every woman should have a clear, smooth, delicate skin. If it is blotched with pimples, blackheads and other such eruptions, it is simply an evidence that the skin lacks certain elements that promote and preserve skin health. And the greatest of these is the wonderful calcium sulphide in Stuart's Calcium Wafers. Calcium is one of the natural constituents of the human body. Your skin requires it to be healthy. It invigorates the skin health, dries up the pimples, boils and blotches, enables healthy skin of fine texture to form and become clear, pinkish, and smooth. Stop using creams, lotions, powders, and bleaches which merely hide for the moment. Get a 50-cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store today.

HOW COHEN PULLED OFF 13 ROUND BOUT

GOOD PUGILISTIC CONTESTS WERE GREATLY ENJOYED IN THE OLD DAYS

Chicago, Oct 17—Back in the early days, especially during the world's fair, Chicago was a mecca for pugilists. The Columbia Athletic club, a mammoth wooden structure, was built by John Condon south of the board walk leading to the Roby race track for the purpose of holding championship battles during the summer months while the fair was going on.

Numerous contests were held but just as the game commenced to get good the reformers commenced to wire and write to Gov. Matthews of Indiana that all the crooks and burglars were attending the events. The consequence was that the governor was not willing to lend Indiana for a purpose that Illinois would not stand for.

John Condon had a gay fellow Dominick O'Malley, looking after his interests at the time. Dominick hailed from Louisana, and did not care particularly about the sheriff or the county constable, for he figured he could beat them.

Bout Is Called Off.

Bouts were scheduled between Young Griffo and Kid Lavigne and Jimmy Barry, at that time the undisputed bantam weight champion of America and Pete Shea. Shea was a much heavier man than Barry, but the little north side fighter did not care about a few pounds.

All arrangements were complete for the evening's entertainment, but when the first special train arrived over the Lake Shore the clubhouse was in the hands of the militia and other trains were called off.

Naturally the fight fans were discouraged, but while coming home on the train that night Louis Cohen said he thought he could switch the program to Chicago. We all laughed. Cohen had plenty of pep and ability and he went ahead and arranged to bring Griffo and Lavigne together at Battery D, on the lake front. He delivered the goods and the contest was a corker. The house was filled and everybody was satisfied.

Sets Up Stakeless Ring.

A few days later, Cohen announced a fifteen round contest between Jimmy Barry and Casper Leon on the Lake front. Everybody thought he was crazy but he also announced that he would bring the stakeless ring from Roby complete and set it up in the hall. By the way, it will not be out of place to say right here that the writer was the inventor of the stakeless ring. The one put up at the Columbia Athletic Club was the first in the country. It had a floor of corrugated rubber with a canvas cover cemented to the rubber. The original cost as I remember was about $800. The ring was the fastest constructed.

Mr. Cohen again made good, the contest game off and Barry knocked Leon out in the thirteenth round, a clean and scientific contest. Thus what Indiana would not stand for was pulled off in our own front yard. This fifteen round bout was the longest public boxing exhibition ever held in Chicago by a margin of nine rounds.

The following spring the old battery was torn down, so there was no place for contests outside of Tattersalls. Fighting lagged for a time and most of the local affairs were held in small halls around the city.

WHAT BOXERS ARE DOING

Chicago, Oct. 17—Jack Sharkey, New York bantamweight, won the decision over Kid Regan last night at St. Louis in an eight round bout. Sharkey fought an aggressive battle and outpointed his opponent throughout the eight rounds. Sharkey will arrive here to-day and start training for his match with Joe Burman, whom he meets for ten rounds at Detroit in a few days. Joe Wagner, Sharkey's manager, is negotiating with Pete Herman's manager for a championship bout in December.

Beny Volgar, crack featherweight mitter, put the kayo to his opponent, Jimmy Hill, in the sixth round of a scheduled ten round mix last night at Boston.

Stockyards Tommy Murphy middle weight, is matched to meet Frankie Brennan Friday night in a ten round bout at Kalamazoo. If Murphy is successful in this match he will jump down to Cincinnati for a scrap with either George Chip or Len Rowlands. Murphy is training at the Arcade gym and is in topnotch condition.

Words Most In Use.

It is declared by a philologist that nine words do one-fourth of the verbal work, and 34 words one-half. The nine most useful words are: And, be, have, it, of, the, to, will, you. The 34 more that, with these nine, do half our literary work are: About, all, as, at, but, can, come, day, dear, for, get, go, hear, her, if, in, me, much, not, no, on, one, say, she, so, that, there, they, this, though, time, we, with, write, your.

Pretty Thought.

The conception of the past and the future is well illustrated in the case of a little boy who said to his mother one day: "Mother, I know why it is that babies cannot speak until they are twelve months old or more. It is because they come straight from heaven, and if they were able to talk as soon as they were born they would tell the secrets, and so God doesn't let them speak until they have almost forgotten them."

How He Averages Up.

"De man dat kain't do no work his ownself," said Uncle Eben, "generally averages up by makin' a whole lot o' trouble foh other people."

High-Priced Goats.

Oregon is noted as a breeding state for goats, pure-bred signs often bringing prices in excess of $500.

Daily Thought.

I will be as harsh as truth and as uncompromising as justice.—William Lloyd Garrison.

PLAY FAIR.

DON'T JUMP TO CONCLUSIONS.

What is the difference between remedy and cure? Any disease which is liable to recur cannot be indefinitely "cured." You may dispel the germs from the system—but that is simply remedying it.

A man suffers for years with Rheumatism. After trying numerous treatments without success, he takes Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules, and is restored to perfect health again.

A year or so later Rheumatic symptoms appear again. What does he immediately conclude? That it is his old trouble returned; that the medicine he took had only a temporary effect; that he will never again be well. This impression is the one we wish to eradicate—because it is entirely false. Wherever Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules are given a fair trial they remedy Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuritis, Neuralgia, or any of their kindred diseases.

T.R.C.'s won't make you immune from the above diseases. They will remedy them and drive them from your system, but whenever you feel an attack coming on, start using T.R.C.'s again.

Ask your Druggist or write us for our new booklet; it is interesting and costs you nothing (Templetons, 142 King West, Toronto). We mail T.R.C.'s anywhere on receipt of $1.00.

New Word.

One of our exchanges tells about a man who "unthoughtedly" left his pocketbook, containing $5, on a counter in a railway station. As an addition to the English language we maintain that unthoughtedly is unthinkable.—St. Louis Republic.

Now You'll Take Better.

Because flashlight powders are not swift enough for the most rapid photography an electrical device has been invented which lights the powder and then snaps the camera shutter when the burning powder is at its greatest brilliancy.

The "Classic."

Perhaps [illegible] definition of classic is that given by Lowell: "Something that can be simple without being vulgar, elevated without being distant, that is neither ancient nor modern, always new and incapable of growing old."

"WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE" A MABEL NORMAND "RIOT"

Goldwyn Comedienne Surpasses All Her Previous Characterizations in New Vehicle of Mirth, Coming to Grand Monday

Mabel Normand in "When Doctors Disagree" follows the success of her "Sis Hopkins" and "The Pest" in a decidedly different way. The new Goldwyn Picture embodies all the elements that go to make a typical Mabel Normand production and at the same time it surpasses them all. There are undeniable reasons for this.

"When Doctors Disagree" is a real farce. Its basis is one of the most laughable situations ever conceived; its interpretation and pictorial aspects are flawless.

Imagine the comedienne being raced to a sanitarium for an operation, prescribed by a bogus physician and made apparently necessary because Millie Martin has swallowed a toothache remedy. It happened to be a wad of chewing tobacco. Only Mabel Normand could do justice to this whimsical conceit. Yet it is only one of a score of laughable episodes in the new play.

Besides the comic story many other outstanding merits recommend it to exhibitors. Directed by Victor L. Schertzinger, it has that human quality found in all his productions. Millie Martin is made a real character at all times. Exquisite photoplay and lighting effects add to its beauty and accomplished comedians fall not far behind Mable Normand in evoking laughter.

Millie Martin, (Mabel Normand) is scoffed at by the townspeople of Ferville because her father is too stingy to dress her properly. The sartorial honors are carried off by Violet Henny (Fritzie Ridgeway), daughter of the town's richest man. A repertoire of sashes and bead necklaces make her the belle.

Millie watches from a distance the May party of which Violet is to be queen and when the latter approaches Millie to gloat over her coming triumph, the village bolshevik pushes her into a muddy pool. She confesses to her father (George Nichols) and is rewarded with a dollar because Violet's father sold the old man cotton undershirts for wool. Millie promptly invests it in beauty aids and has the time of her life smearing her face with creams and lotions in preparation for the railway journey—her first—she is to take with her parent.

On the same train is John Turner (Walter Hiers), a hard-working carpet layer. Possessed of a doctor's pass and bag of instruments, he is fleeing from a fancied crime. He is terrified when addressed as "doctor" too frightened, even, to respond to Millie's flirtatious eyes. But the minx determines to make an opportunity to snare him. She screams in agony with a feigned toothache and implores her father to summon the doctor. Instead the old man forces into her mouth a simple home remedy. It is a fat quid of his chewing tobacco. Millie's agony becomes very real, increased when the train gives a violent lurch and the "medicine" jumps from her mouth to her stomach. Then the doctor has to come.

To save himself, he orders an operation. The conductor suggests a nice sanitarium in the next town. Millie is wild with fright. So is John Turner when he is forced along too. Kicking and crying the girl is carried into a room, while John confers with the staff physician about the operation, all the while trying to make a getaway. Millie has darted from one room to another, and when John finally discovers her she is in bed with an infant. Of course, he imagined the wrong thing.

At last Millie makes him understand and he explains, too. They escape out of the window and dash across country in an automobile. The head physician is sure he has been hoaxed by thieves and follows with the sherfff. All meet at Millie's home and explanations bring out the truth. John Turner is innocent and Millie has forgotten she swallowed the tobacco. They only think of their future as sweethearts.

"DUMBELLS" COMING HOORAY! HOORAY!!

"The Dumbells" are comin', hooray, hooray. All the way from France, where they played to over five hundred audiences of Canadian and English soldiers, via Belgium, where they played a season of light opera and musical comedy revue, under the patronage of King Albert, and after stopping for a month in London where they played to over 133,000 people and hung up a record at the Coliseum, that most famous of all soldier-entertainers company, "The Dumbells," have arrived in Canada.

They are playing a limited homecoming tour now, of the larger Canadian cities, presenting their original overseas revue, "Biff, Bing Bang," under the personal direction of Capt. M. W. Plunkett. Their initial appearance here will be at the Grand, on Friday, where they will commence an engagement of two nights and one matinee, Saturday.

"The Dumbells," as they were called in France, need no introduction to the vast army of returned soldiers in Canada, and their best introduction to those of us who had to remain at home is that they were recognized as the foremost aggregation of all fighting men entertainers at the front. When they appear here it will be an event unprecedented in the history of the local theatre, all surviving members of the original cast being numbered among the performers. Just imagine an all-an "girl show" of soldier-actors who have average more than sixteen months apiece of trench fighting, donning Lucille costumes and playing sweet young ingenues for the entertainment of their fellow comrades. "Marjorie," the star of "leading ladies," says it took more courage to appear before the gang in corsets the first time than it should to win a V.C. "Majorie" off stage, is R. D. Hamilton, of Montreal, while "Marie," the dainty soubrette, is also of that city and answers to the name of A. G. Murray. But to the boys back from France they will always be "Majorie and "Marie."

"THE MAN WHO WON" POWERFUL STORY OF MYSTERY AND LOVE

HARRY T. MOREY AT HIS BEST IN DRAMA THAT CALLS FOR REAL ACTION.

The story of a fearless American who fights his way through Russia and across the Pacific in order to furnish the United States with one of the largest supplies of platinum ever known is told in "The Man Who Won," featuring Harry T. Morey. The picture will be shown at the Empire Theatre on October 20-21-22.

It is a story that will please anyone who likes to be held from the first flash until the final close out. Filled with suspense, mystery and the surprise element, "The Man Who Won" appeals to all who see it.

The story was written by Cyrus Townsend Brady and combines the outdoor life of the west with the polish of San Francisco society. The play opens with Mr. Morey in combat with five Malays on the shores of Oregon. He is wounded, but wins the battle. Barbara Le Moyne, who witnesses the conflict, comes to Keene's (Morey's) aid. While she has gone to get help Keene escapes. He is seen in wild delirium guarding his treasure.

When his health is restored he has lost his memory and forgotten where his treasure is concealed. He starts out in search of the girl who aided him after the conflict. She is the only person who can set him aright. From this point the action is fast, an element of mystery and love is introduced and cleverly woven into the plot.

MY SOLDIER GIRL IS NOVEL, ENTERTAINING

A tuneful musical comedy of fun and fashion best describes the latest musical comedy success, "My Soldier Girl," at the Grand today, with its scenes laid in two novel acts. The first scene opens at Colonel Stone's home in Miami, Florida, overlooking Biscayne Bay. There is a lawn fete in progress in honor of boys and girls who the Colonel met in Europe during the recent struggle and to whom he extended an invitation to visit his home once they were back in America. Many clever professionals are among the invited guests and the night is one of gayest festivities.

The second act opens on the roof of a New York theatre, presenting a gorgeous production of the Follies in rehearsal. Colonel Stone is the producer and the scene as presented shows the big company in all its merry-making. There are many marchs and dance ensembles participated in by the excellent cast and big chorus who are responsible for the success of this big spectacle.

"My Soldier Girl" should live up to its phenomenal magnet for the playgoer when it appears here. The excellent cast, including Dorothy Garrique, Maude Baxter, Billy Moore, James Baber, Leslie Jones, Billy Murphy and many other talented musical comedy players, are supported by a brigade of wonderful girls, who sing and dance so cleverly that the audience wonder if the management have cornered all the pretty girls in this country. There are some twenty big song hits, among the favorites are "My Soldier Girl," "That Dixie Wedding Tune," "Wrap Me Up in a Bundle of Love," "Jasper's Ragtime Band," "Won't You Be My Beau" and "Just For You."

New York Tribune cable says Germany, selling at two-fifths of regular prices, is flooding Scandinavian countries with toys glass, china and machine tools.

Caught on a trolley track at New York a man threw his three-year-old daughter from his arms a moment before a car struck him. He was fatally injured, the child being unhurt.

GEORGE WALSH PLAY ON EMPIRE BILL

Now that they are making special decollette safety razor sets for women and that men pretty generally are shaving themselves, almost every one in town, except the babies, probably will be interested in George Walsh's close shaves. Mr. Walsh's latest picture is a William Fox production entitled "Help! Help! Police!" and it will be shown for 3 days, beginning Monday at the Empire Theatre. Strangely enough, too, it deals largely with razors, the star being the son of the head of a concern manufacturing these implements and the leading woman playing the role of a daughter of a rival manufacturer. The efforts of this son and daughter to merge their happiness in matrimony are repeatedly frustrated by the police, who have taken an aversion to [illegible] who keep him busy employing his well known athletic proclivities in dodging them.

The picture, like most of those featuring George Walsh is of the comedy drama type and is said to be humorous in theme and incident as well as in action. George, it appears, does not need hot water for his shaving—the police keep him constantly immersed in it. Most of his troubles, however, rightfully should rest on the shoulders of a Western sharper, and eventually it appears, they get there, whereupon George is freed of suspicion in a whole catalogue of criminal offenses.

Piping Over the Side.

When the Hun Admiral Meurer came aboard Admiral Beatty's flagship to arrange for handing over the German ships to be interned he was "piped over the side" by the Queen Elizabeth's boatswain.

This curious custom is a survival of the old days of sailing ships when officers holding flag rank, instead of having to clamber up the rickety rope ladder dependent from the vessel's side, were hoisted on board in a "bosun's chair."

In those primitive times the boatswain took up his position by the rail where he could see over the side, and by means of his "pipe" gave the signal to the sailors to haul away as soon as the great man was comfortably seated in his "chair."

Nowadays, of course, gangways are fitted to all men-of-war. Nevertheless the old custom is still kept up, the various whistle signals denoting "hoist away," "high enough," "lower away," and so forth, being played by the boatswain upon his pipe.

Suffragettes of Nippon.

Mrs. Yosano, Japanese feminist and mother of ten children, says "Equality is incomplete, of course, without the vote. In Japan it will take some time, but we shall have it." Ten years after European women take their places at the voting booth is her prophecy for the women of Nippon.—Bessie Beatty, in World Looker.

MORE BIRDS IN ENGLAND.

British Isles Swarming With Them After Year of Absence.

One part of the population of the British Isles has increased out of all reckoning since the spring, says an English exchange. When winter was over birds were found down to the smallest community known since 1882. In some places a small bird was almost an event. The frosts had killed in multitudes both native birds and winter migrants.

To-day the countryside swarms with native birds. The nesting season was ideal, and seldom, if ever, were so many big clutches successfully reared. Some birds had produced two families before the drouth broke, and are producing a third.

There are fruit growers who were prophesying terrible plagues owing to the absence of birds, but are now saying that they wonder whether too many caterpillars are not a lesser evil than too many birds. It is hard, though you know the benefit is greater than the loss, to see your raspberries vanishing as they ripen.

A rather inexplicable fact may be noted in respect of some of the summer visitors. In general they have been very numerous, but there were exceptions, of which the most notable was the apparent absence of flycatchers. They have now unaccountably reappeared in many haunts where they had been missed. Was there a late migration or did the birds prove more than their usual skill in evading detection?

EMINENT CRITICS ALL PRAISE SAN CARLO

A GRAND OPERA COMPANY COMPOSED OF NOTED SONG-BIRDS

The seasoned, experienced critics of the New York dailies and other big city newspapers, so the exchanges prove, are writing some remarkably fine reviews of the performances of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, whose forces are soon to appear here. Prospective patrons of the interesting event (and it is confidently believed that practically the entire community and its environs will gather at the local theatre to greet the noted song-birds), will find a measure of interest in a better realization of the splendid achievements of the San Carlo Company, its individual stars and the organization in all its various departments.

"It was a brilliant evening for both singers and audience at the Belasco last night when the San Carlo stars presented Verdi's 'Aida' before President Wilson and a distinguished audience. The annual visit of this organization is anticipated with keen pleasure by music-lovers of the Capital."

The N. Y. American, in its review of Ponchielli's Opera, La Gioconda said:

"'House Sold Out' was the San Carlo announcement at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre. The performances will deserved the immense patronage!"

The N. Y. Herald, reviewing a performance of "Rigoletto," said:

"The favorite Verdi opera was sung and acted last evening by the San Carlo Company with spirit and dash, before an audience that demanded so many encores that the performance was prolonged until after midnight."

The Pittsburgh Gazette-Times critic wrote the following:

"The theatre was filled and hundreds stood throughout the performance. That the people were more [illegible] from the repeated ovations, but even more in the tense silence while the singing was going on. The stage pictures were beautiful and the ensemble charmingly effective."

The Cleveland Press (Mr. Wilson G. Smith, critics), said:

"The San Carlo performances sound to me very much like what is retailed at the corner of Thirty-ninth and Broadway, New York, at $5 per seat. I cast my critical vocabulary into the waste basket."

The St. Louis Republic had this to say about the San Carlo productions:

"The San Carlo organization possesses one very excellent characteristic. It is precisely what it pretends to be. Every singing teacher and singing pupil should attend the performances as a part of his or her musical education."

The Quebec Chronicle wrote:

"The San Carloans scored a triumph in 'Carmen.' One thousand people were turned away. It was the largest audience ever seen at Grand Opera in Quebec."

OBITUARY

MRS. ANGUS FERGUSON.

Mr. P. A. Freguson, of the Dominion Life Assurance Company, well known here since his term of service commenced six years ago, recently suffered the extreme loss in the death of his mother. Mrs. Ferguson was aresident of Woodville, Victoria Conuty, esteemed and revered by all who knew her during the increasing years of her life. She was a life-long member of the Presbyterian Church which she zealously and regularly attended. Born at Inverness, Scotland, in 1848, she came with her father, Mr. Donald Nicholson, at nine years of age to Canada, where they settled in Glengarry. Miss Ferguson was a resident of Woodville, where she married Angus Ferguson, who has pre-deceased her by twenty-three years. The first break in the family was suffered in the death of a daughter in June six years ago. Another daughter's death preceeded her mother's by just three weeks. Mrs. Ferguson enjoyed the best of health all her life until Friday, October 10th, she underwent a serious operation from which she did not recover. Her death on Tuesday, October 14th, came as a sudden shock to the remaining members of the family and the sympathy of all is extended to them. Besides Mr. P. A. Ferguson, there survive to honor the memory of their mother five sons and two daughters.

LARGE THEATRICAL MERGER PLANNED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Oct. 18.—A big theatrical merger is outlined in local papers. It is reported that a local syndicate has secured possession of a chain of theatres from Montreal to the Pacific coast. It plans to make Canadian productions, establishing a theatre in London and bring British productions to Canada.

Deal of Four Millions.

The deal involves four millon dollars. Among the interests taken over, report states, will be those of A. J. Small in Toronto, Hamilton, London, Peterboro, St. Thomas and Kingston and several in the West. Montreal will be the head office of the concern but producing centres will be established for Canadian plays in Toronto as well as Montreal.

DEFORGE FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Oct. 18.—W. J. Deforge, who was attached to the military intelligence department during the war, was found at 1:30 o'clock this morning shot through the heart and it is believed that he was the victim of a murder.

Robbery, apparently, was not the motive for the crime, as $300 was found on his person.

FULL OF PRAISE FOR BRITISH ARMY

FOUGHT A MAN'S BATTLE AND NEVER LOST CONFIDENCE SAYS HAIG.

A MORAL FOR WHOLE EMPIRE

PRESERVE CONFIDENCE, ORGANIZE FOR SUCCESS TO THE LAST DETAIL

London, Oct. 18.—Field Marshal Haig was made a freeman of the Bourough of Wolverhampton yesterday. In acknowledging the hon[illegible] endorff's memoirs and one of the things there that struck him was the mental distress and hopelessness that had overcome the German command when he realized that the great German army had been broken to pieces. That was an experience which he (Haig) had never had to contemplate, even though the men he had commanded had been almost hopelessly outnumbered, their numbers reduced and their strength tried by the strain of a great unequal battle.

A Man's Battle.

Of those who had remained with him, each man had fought a man's battle and had fought the more desperately the more desperate conditions became. The gallant story of the British campaign offered a moral which should be applied to every corner of the Empire at the present day: "Preserve your confidence, not merely in yourselves, but in each other, and organize for success to the last detail."

Alluding to the recent railway strike, Field Marshal Haig said that he was glad that soldiers had not been called upon, for that was not their job. They existed to fight external, not internal foes.

CAMPAIGN CLOSES THIS EVENING

Tonight the Conservative Party will wind up their campigns with a mass meeting at Victoria Hall where Miss Constance Boulton will deliver an address. Mr. Soden and others will also make addresses.

The supoprters of Mr. Gilleapie have been over practically the whole riding. They will hold a meeting in the G. W. V. A. Hall tonight.

ONTARIO ALWAYS VOTED FOR PROHIBITION

Peterboro County so far as the townships are concerned, was under local option before the Ontario Temperance Act became effective. The city twice voted on the question, and each time secured a majority, but not the necessary three-fifths of the vote polled.

Ontario has [illegible] the prohibition issue, and three times the drys won. In 1894 the vote was 192,489 for, and 110,720 against prohibition, a majority of 81,769.

In 1898 when the Dominion plebiscite was taken, when Ontario's majority for prohibition was 39,214. Quebec at that time gave an immense majority of 40,000 and the Laurier Administration seized upon this as an excuse for shelving the question.

On Dec. 4, 1902, the province voted on prohibition, the "drys" being required to poll 213,000 votes to carry it, that requirement being based on provincial election returns. The re[illegible] against, 103,548; a dry majority of 6,201. Eight cities voted "for" and seven "against." Toronto gave a favorable majority of 1,531 in a total vote of 27, 679.

This should set at rest all doubts as to the fate of the referendum on Monday.

PREPARING FOR THE NEW VICTORY LOAN

Messrs. Harold Fry and F. N. Blackader, both of Toronto, who were appointed Victory Loan organizers for the city and county of Peterborough, have arrived in the city and are busy with the preliminary work of preparing the way for the Victory Loan campaign which will open throughout Peterborough on Monday, October 27th, and continue for two weeks.

The headquarters for the local campaign are at 336 George street, which premises have been secured through the courtesy of Mr. J. Wells Fraser, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, the bank having removed to the original quarters across the street.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, who, as city and county chairman, carried the Victory Loan to success in 1917 and again in 1918, has consented to act as chairman for a third term. Mr. Vincent Eastwood, manager of the Royal Bank, and Mr. J. J. Turner, president of the Board of Trade will act as vice-presidents, and the secretarial work will once more be in the capable hands of Mr. Felix Brownscombe. Assisting them will be a strong organization of committees and canvassers.

The Government in this—its third appeal to the people of the Dominion for money to help meet Canada's obligations arising out of the war and to provide for peace times—is asking for $300,000,000. Peterborough's share is $1,800,000.

GERMANY ANXIOUS THAT COMMISSIONORS UNDER TREATY BEGIN WORK AT ONCE

Delegates May Sit on Such Bodies Whether Their Countries Have Ratified Peace or not.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Oct. 18. — The Supreme Council today adopted a resolution that delegates of the great powers may sit on various commissions created under the German Peace Treaty and may vote on questions before these Commissions, whether or not their Governments have ratified the treaty.

If the United States Senate does not object, it is stated to be [illegible] that American delegates will take places assigned to the United States on such commissions.

Germany Anxious.

Germany is anxious to have commissions begin their work fully organized, it is declared. Signor Tittoni Italian Foreign Minister, sat in Council today for the first time since his recent return from Rome. He has been ill for the past two days. The subject of Fiume was not taken up by the Council at this meeting.

THE VISIT OF THE PRINCE.

The Prince of Wales' visit to Canada is about to end. The thousands who have seen him want to see him again. He has certainly won the hearts of all Canada. The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal with characteristic enterprise have secured a real life-like portrait of the Prince, 16 x 22 inches, that should be in every Canadian home. It is a very pleasing portrait and bears a copy of the Prince's autograph. The Family Herald sends a copy of this portrait free to all Family Herald subscribers for 1920. The subscription price of that great family paper is $1.25 a year, big value in itself, but with the Prince's portrait certainly is the greatest value ever offered. The Family Herald and Weekly Star will be kept busy booking orders, as the demand has set in with a rush. People who are not subscribers to the Family Herald and Weekly Star, have no idea of the treat they are missing.

FALL OF RUSS. FORTRESS OF KRONSTADT CONFERMED BY BRITISH WAR OFFICE

Petrograd Virtually Isolated—All Railroad Lines to Former Capital Cut—Bolshevik War Minister Complains That a Pack of Bourgeois Curs is Worrying Soviet Russia.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 20.—The white flag was hoisted over the Russian fortress of Kronstadt on Friday, it was announced by the British war office today.

Railroads Cut.

Petrograd is virtually isolated, the war office announces today, anti-bolshevik cavalry having cut the railroads leading from Petrograd to Citebak ,Moscow and Vologda. The Petrograd-Vitebek road is cut at Viritza, and the Petrograd-Moscow railroad at Tosna, south and southeast of Petrograd, respectively. The line at Volgoda is cut south of Lake Ladoga.

Worried on All Sides.

The following description of the situation in the Baltic is attributed to Leon Tirotzky, Bolshevik minister of war, by a wireless message from Moscow:

"A pack of Bourgeois curs is worrying the body of Soviet Russia on all sides. Polish knights are gnashing their teeth. The German general von der Goltz, under instructions by the stock exchange and the offscourings of all lands, is seizing the Baltic country with the help of mourarchistic bands in order to attack Moscow from there.

"The army defending the approaches to Petrograd failed to withstand the first blow and danger has again come to Petrograd. The English and French radio stations announce with joy the fact of our fallurea on the road to Petrograd. The stock exchange and the press of the whole world are sharing the joy and predicting the speedy fall of Petrograd. But they are wrong this time. Petrograd will not fall. It will stand. We shall not surrender Petrograd.

"For the defence of the first town of the proletarian revolution, sufficient strength will be found in the peasantry and the workers of the land. Yudenitch's successes are those of a cavalry raid. Troops are being sent to the assistance of Petrograd, and the Petrograd workers, who rose first of all. We must break the skulls of Yudenitch's bands and the Anglo-French Imperialists."

QUITE EXCITED OVER ONE BIRTH

FIRST REGISTERED AT HAMLET OF ELMLEY IN SEVEN YEARS

The first birth for seven years has just been registered at Elmley, an out-of-the-way hamlet in the Isle of Sheppey. Mrs. Edward Williams of Tim's Hill is the mother. The villagers, who are few and far between are quite excited at the event, and already there is a stir in the educational department of the district, for the local school built to accommodate thirty students, has for years past had no more than four, three being the children of the head teacher. Little Miss Williams bids fair to be thoroughly spoiled by the women folk of the neighborhood. "The youngest child in Elmley." said a resident, "is about eight years old, and came into the village when it was three." Incidentally it is said that there is not a prambulator or a push cart in the locality. "It is so long since we had any use for them," explained a local man.

BRITAIN LEADING WORLD IN THE AIR

MAKING MORE HEADWAY IN AVIATION THAN ANY OTHER NATION

Washington, D.C., Oct. 19.—Great Britain is making more headway than any nation in promoting aviation. Assistant Secretary of War Crowell yesterday told the senate military committee in supporting the new bill for the establishment of a separate department of aeronautics.

Mr. Crowell was a member of the special aviation commission representing this country which recently visited Europe, and this was his first appearance before a congressional committee since his return. In urging the creation of a separate department, which he classed as "a tactical necessity," Mr. Crowell said the United States was allowing aviation to die now the war is over. Encouragement of commercial aviation was urged by the witness.

PROSECUTIONS BY COMMERCE BOARD

ACTION AGAINST TWO SUGAR DEALERS ABOUT TO BE ENTERED

PUBLIC DEMAND RESULTS

BOARD SITTING MONTHS WITH BUT ONE SINGLE PROSECUTION AS YET

Toronto, Oct. 20.—It was said Saturday that J. S. Lundy, the representative of the attorney general of Ontario with the Board of Commerce is about to enter two more sugar prosecutions. It is a peculiar fact that, although the board have held all their enquiries in Toronto and nearly all the firms brought before them have been from the Queen City, not one single prosecution in any branch of trade has been undetarken. The one single prosecution in a sugar case in Ottawa is so far the only legal resultant of the board, and they ha e been sitting for some months now. There is an order against the packers to become effective next week, but that has been held over until November 1, and by all accounts it will be again futrher extended. The public want action not words, promises or orders. The board should have at least power to enforce their own mandates. Mr. Lundy says he has ordered the prosecution of a grocer of Niagara Falls for selling sugar above the limit, and has ordered the crown attorney of Hamilton to investigate another complaint. If this [illegible] successful" as the one threatened by W. F. O'Connor some months ago the public will draw a blank.

Col. Price said Saturday he thought there was enough evidence before the board on the clothing subject to justify them in making an order, and then qualifies his statement by saying there will be some more witnesses called.

VIS. ASTOR TO BE CREMATED

London, Oct. 20.—Viscount Astor of Hever Castle, died of heart disease Saturday morning. He had been in failing health for a year.

The body of Viscount Astor is lying in the residence of his son, Waldorf Astor, member of Parliament, in St. James' Square.

Through Viscount Astor's wish his body will be cremated, and it is understood his ashes will be placed in the private chapel of his one-time country home, Cliveden, at Taplow, Bucks, now occupied by Waldorf Astor.

INDEPENDANT OPINION SAYS HEARST GOVERNMENT WILL BE SUSTAINED

Women Take Advantage of Franchise and Turn Out in Great Numbers, Better Posted and More Interested in Referendum Than Men—Thought That Four Noes Have It.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 20.—Reports from all corners of the Province of Ontario, as received this morning, indicate a bumper crop of votes in the elections today for the fifteenth Ontario Legislature and balloting on the referendum for repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act and its three kindred questions.

Weather Fair and Cool.

Generally fair and cool weather throughout the Province, with harvesting completed and roads in good shape in country districts, are contributing in some measure to a big vote being brought out today. The principal incentives, however, are the additional interest of the referendum and the general extension of the franchise to women.

Four "No's" Had It.

Polls opened in Toronto and neighboring ridings at six a.m., (Standard Time) and at 9 a.m. in all other parts of the Province. This meant 7 a.m. in Toronto, where daylight saving time is still being used. At that hour there was at a large percentage of polling booths in Toronto quite a line up of men and women awaiting the advent of the D.R.O. and his staff, to record their votes. Indeed, so men were nearly as prominent as the men in the early hours at the polling booths; they were acting as scrutineers as well as voters, and it was no ballot box secret that they were more posted and more interested in the referendum than in the general elections, and as far as most of them were concerned, the four "no's" had it.

Conservative Great Favorite.

Independent opinion here, and betting, of which there seems to be little this morning, is that the Conservative Government of Sir Wm. Hearst will be returned with a largely decreased majority, due mostly to the election of United Farmers of Ontario. As to the referendum, opinion is considerably mixed. It is believed that voting generally all over the Province will be four "yes's" or four "no's," and that the split ballot voter has been in most cases won over to one side or the other as a result of the campaign of the last week or two. Both sides of the prohibition question express greatest confidence this morning, and the leaders of all parties in the general elections are likewise in high hopes of success. The polls closes all over the Province at 5 p.m. (Standard Time).

TRAFALGAR DAY OCT. 21ST

Without Trafalgar there could have been no Waterloo; without either there could have been no Armistice day. It established the sacred right of mankind to breathe the breath of freedom the world over.

The Navy League of Canada is celebrating Nelson Day by launching its Dominion wide campaign to secure funds to educate the people to the vital necessity of sea power and to the creation of a vast merchant marine.

The Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire will hold a tag day for this purpose on Saturday, Oct. 25. Will you do your share?

England expects every man to do his duty.

SEARCH VESSELS FROM U. S.

Irish Authorities Issued These Secret Orders.

London, Oct. 20.—The correspondent at Manchester of the Daily Herald, the Labor organ, in a despatch dated Sunday, says:

In the course of a speech at an impressive demonstration held here today in favor of self-determination for Ireland, Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sinn Fein organization and a Sinn Fein member of Parliament, read two secret documents issued by Dublin Castle, one ordering detectives to search the belongings of the crews of all vessels arriving in Ireland from the United States, and the other declaring that sailors in all American ships coming to Ireland be treated as suspects. "Surely," said Mr. Griffith, "America will have something to say to this."

R. C. TEACHERS ASK $400 INCREASE

MINIMUM SALARY $700— PETITION PROVINCIAL SECRETARY OF QUEBEC PROVINCE

Montreal, Oct. 19.—Following the motion made at the meeting of the Central Catholic School Board that 238 male teachers should be dismissed and replaced by female teachers, a delegation representing the Association of Roman Catholic School Teachers interviewed Hon. L. A. David, Quebec provincial secretary, who is also the head of the department of public instruction. The head of the delegation showed that the annual minimum salary for teachers in Montreal is $700 for males and $500 for females and that the maximum is $1,400 for elementary degree $1500 for model degree, and $17 0 paid teachers in Montreal was $1100 for academic degree. Average salary The teachers had petitioned for an increase of $400 per annum and had been told they would be dismissed and replaced by female teachers Hon. Mr. David was sympathetic in his reply and the delegates left the government offices satisfied taht they had gained more points that were apparent.

CANADA AND THE NATIONS' LEAGUE

UNITED STATES WOULD WELCOME DOMINION'S INTERPRETATION OF OWN STATUS

New York, Oct. 19. — The New York Tribune, commenting editorially on "Canada and the League," asks where the Dominion will rank in a national sense as a result of gaining unqualified independence through equal voting power in the league of nations, and in view of the transformation of Canada's relations with Great Britain.

The Tribune says that Americans would welcome Canada's own interpretation of her status in the league.

OVATION FOR PPINCE AT NIAGARA FALLS

ADMIRED PERSONALITY OF PEOPLE MORE THAN THE GORGEOUS SCENERY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 20.—The Prince of Wales was given an ovation which drowned out the roar of the big cataract when he was officially received by this city today.

His Royal Highness in replying said he admired the gorgeous scenery and miraculous machinery, but more than all he admired the spirit and personality of the people. He regretted that he could not visit Buffalo at this time.

GREAT FUTURE FOR SOBER, TEMPERANCE CANADA IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY

Rev. R. B. Grobb at All Saints' Church last evening delivered a forceful sermon on "The Citizens' Liberty League," which body, he said, had beclouded the main issue of today—that of liquor—by enlarging on the curtailing of one's personal liberty generally. He had to admit extreme cleverness in the man who had selected that word "Liberty" as a name for this league, especially at a time following the late war in Europe for the liberty of nations; but he thought it a tragedy that a host of people should be clamoring about liberty to drink intoxicants at a moment of question whether Canada should in future be whiskey-soddened or not.

The reverend gentleman declared strong drink the greatest curse with which any land had ever been afflicted, and considered it a crime that Liberty Leaguers had attempted to becloud the issue of whether it should be wiped out or liquor traffic legalized, by harping on the possibility of restriction of liberty in other directions should the temperance cause gain control. While there are cranks in all organizations, he insisted that the temperance movement is not dominated by cranks, but by people who know that liquor has been the greatest millstone around the necks of nations and men. It damns the whole world, he said, and arouses the worst passions in men.

In conclusion of a timely discourse on a question which not only affects Ontario, but the whole Dominion, Mr. Grobb expressed n ounced views on the liberty of a majority to restrict a minority in an issue which makes for the weal of all generally. The greatest privilege of man, under God, he said, is that liberty of restriction for the sake of others, and liberty should not be resorted to for selfish reasons but to serve. Hhe saw a great future for a sober and temperance Canada in the twentieth century.

WOMEN FLOCK TO POLLING BOOTHS VOTE HEAVY IN ALL PARTS OF CITY

New Electors Waiting in Many Places for Polls to Open to Get a Chance to Excercise Franchise---Rush is Expected Near Closing Hours and Many May be Disappointed.

One of the quietest election campaigns in the history of West Peterborough came to a close Saturday night, but the apparent apathy was not due to lack of interest on the part of the electors. This was demonstrated today in the heavy vote which all day was being polled. Booths in all parts of the city were at noon reported to be crowded, and the new women voters were everywhere in evidence.

The day was ideal, bright and dry, and before the polls opened at nine o'clock many women were awaiting a chance to exercise the franchise. There were women scrutineers on behalf of the referendum at every polling subdivision.

There are two ballot boxes, the additional one being for the referendum votes. These will be counted last when the polls close tonight, but the general result should be known on this issue before midnight. It is altogether likely that at least 75 per cent. of the referendum ballots will be marked straight, either yes or no, and this will lighten the labors of the election officials. As in a majority of constituencies there are three candidates in the field, this will delay the count in some cases.

The instructions issued as to the counting of the vote appear to have been based on the supposition that there would be only one box for both classes of ballots. In that case the officials were directed to follow this plan when they began their count:

Open the ballot box, as provided by the Election Act, and empty the ballots on to the table and show the box empty to those present.

Sort the ballots into two piles, one of election ballots and the other of referendum ballots, opening each ballot and spreading it out face upward on its proper pile.

Then run over each pile so as to be certain that it contains only election or referendum ballots, as the case may be. Now put the referendum ballots back in the ballot box and lock it.

The referendum scrutineers should then be requested to withdraw, as their presence during the counting of the election ballots is illegal.

When the referendum scrutineers have withdrawn proceed to examine and count the election ballots, make up your return and seal up the envelopes following exactly the procedure laid down in the Act.

Now call in the referendum scrutineers, open the ballot box and take the same course with respect to the referendum ballots.

In any event, the election ballots will be counted first, and while this work is in progress the referendum

G. T. R. PURCHASE TO BE PRESSED NOW

PARLIAMENT MAY NOT CONCLUDE SESSION UNTIL DECISION IS REACHED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—There is no prospect that Parliament can conclude its session this week.

The debate on the Grand Trunk deal is likely to take up several days and the Senate has to tackle it yet.

Will Press Issue.

Sir George Foster, representing the Dominion Government, today stated that legislation for government acquirement of the Grand Trunk would be pressed to a conclusion.

This was in reply to a Montreal deputation which interviewed members of the Cabinet and expressed strong opposition to the proposal.

COALITION UNIONIST WINS.

ASK A SHARE IN RY. MANAGEMENT

Experience and Ability of Employees Should Prove Valuable, Says Thomas.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 20.—Railway employees ask a share in the management of companies, and it is hoped the companies will consider this proposal, said D. J. H. Thomas, secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, in a speech at Derby last night. He expressed his belief that the railway employees could contribute to the management by reason of their experiences and ability, and that in this capacity their services would be valuable to both railroads and country.

SUGGESTS THAT UNITED STATES SHARE CONTROL OF GIBRALTAR

ALLIES TO OCCUPY UPPER SILESIA

ALSO SCHLESWIG AND MERMEL —MILITARY MEASURES TO OUST GERMANS

Paris, Oct. 19. — The supreme council yesterday drew up a scheme of distribution of the allied military forces which will be used to occupy upper Silesia, Schleswig and Memel, according to the terms of the treaty. The council further approved the military measures necessary for the evacuation of these territories by the German troops and the immediate occupation by those of the allies.

The council further decided upon the form of protocol to be used at the exchange of ratification, which will occur only when it will be possible to carry out the prescribed military measures.

London Morning Post Characterizes Morganthau's Proposition as a "Naive Suggestion."

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 20.—The statement made by Henry Morgenthau, on his return to the United States, suggesting that Great Britain share control of Gibraltar with the United States was not generally report here.

The Press Silent.

The Morning Post alone carries something like a full report under the headlines "Gibraltar, a Naive Suggestion," but does not comment on Mr Morgenthau's words. A brief agency account is printed by The Graphic, which refers somewhat vaguely to "The Gibraltar proposal." This paper comments in general terms, urging the United States to accept a mandate for Constantinople, Armenia and Anatolia, but passing by the Gibraltar recommendation "as a little obscure."

Other papers do not mention Morgenthau's statement in any way.

ELECTION RETURNS BY REVIEW TONIGHT

The Review tonight will flash the election returns upon a screen that will be placed on the Oriental Hotel building opposite this office. This service will be complete and will be continued until the last man is elected. The result so far as the Provincial election is concerned, should be known by 9 o'clock unless the number of candidates in the field delays the work of the election officials in counting the vote. Complete returns on the referendum will not be available tonight as counting the votes on such a ballot will prove a new experience to the officials who make the count. Enough should be known, however, by midnight to indicate whether the Act has been sustained or received an adverse vote.

Residents of the city who may be unable to get down town to watch the returns on the screen are invited to use the telephone to call up The Review for any information they may desire. Call 189 or 435 and you will receive a prompt reply.

Two years ago at the time of the Federal election it will be remembered that the election returns as published by The Review, were complete and up to the minute. We will endeavor tonight to maintain this record. The vote from the various constituencies will be shown as quickly as received.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

MONDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1919.

IF SOLDIERS LOSE THE VOTE.

IF ANY SOLDIER returned from overseas too late to register, the fault cannot be laid at the door of the Provincial Government. There is, it seems, nothing in the Act to allow a soldier to vote on his discharge papers or on the strength of his service button, if his name was not on the list. The Government, however, did make it possible for the Court of Revision to remain in session, or to reconvene, in order to take the names of veterans who got back after the registration had been completed.

Mr. Soden and the workers who managed his campaign did their utmost to afford every soldier a chance to vote. The Court of Revision was asked to assemble again for this purpose. Crown Attorney Hatton promised that this would be done if it could be shown that a sufficient number of veterans had been overlooked to warrant such action. The Court did not reconvene, so that it would appear that in this riding at least there were few if any soldiers whose names were not on the polling list. However that may be, the fact remains that the machinery was provided for taking care of such cases.

CADDISH JOURNALISM.

IT IS REGRETTABLE that there is living in Peterborough any individual capable of writing an anonymous letter reflecting upon a distinguished lady who came here to speak on behalf of the Ontario Temperance Act and who was really the guest of the city. It is even still more regrettable that such an individual should be able to find a newspaper willing to print such an article.

There is no excuse for the personal anonymous letter even if the writer deals in facts. If sure of his ground he should have no hesitation in backing up his statements by signing his name. His action, however, is all the more reprehensible if he makes insinuations which the victim of his mendacity brands as false on the first public opportunity. There is even less justification for the newspaper that publishes such a screed with no other object than to gain what it erroneously imagines would be a political advantage. If the writer, a man—for no one believes that a woman wrote the letter in question—tries to conceal his identity further and to give additional force to his statements by temporarily assuming feminine garb for the occasion, the venture into literature, is beneath the contempt of any honest man or woman.

The English language contains words enough to aptly describe every specimen of humanity who moves and breathes in the sunlight of heaven. For example, Webster's dictionary defines a cad as "a low bred, presuming person; a mean, vulgar person." The public will not require assistance in making the proper application.

GIVE ALL CLASSES A CHANCE.

EVERY PATRIOT, every man who appreciates the sacrifices that the veterans made when they left home for military service in Europe and who have even a faint conception of the dangers and hardships through which they passed, believes that these unselfish services should now meet with reward to the extent of the resources of the nation these men suffered to save. No effort should be spared to reinstate them in civil life on at least the same basis—but in better positions so far as possible—as that on which they stood when they enlisted.

But it is not the laborers and mechanics alone who deserve consideration in this regard, although none will deny that they are entitled to the first claim upon the public. Many of these men left everything they had to do their duty as they saw it. They came back poorer than they went away—many of them shattered in health and unable to earn a living as they did before the war. It is the men who are called upon to perform manual labor or who work at the exacting tasks of skilled mechanics who feel most directly the effects of several years of military duty.

But the case of the professional and business men who enlisted must not be forgotten. Many a doctor who returns finds his practice gone. Business men, too, have lost all their trade while they were away. Are these men, especially doctors who gave up lucrative connections, to secure no assistance in order to re-establish themselves?

When these doctors volunteered for the Empire's service they left with the assurance that their fellow-professionals who remained at home would look after their interests during their absence, and that on their return they would find everything practically as they left it. But there has been disappointment very often in this regard. Doctors of Ontario complain that while they were away, working for wages little if any better than the pay of street sweepers in Peterborough today, they came back to find that their practice had been absorbed by others who, while in the security of home, earned incomes in some cases as high as $16,000 a year. And the doctor who has walked the military hospitals of Europe finds himself practically bankrupt.

Surely, the doctors who saw military service have been, professionally, benefited by the experience, and for that very reason are entitled to special consideration. While in Europe they practically lived in a new world and their experience was extensive. They have dealt with nervous diseases in all their forms. Uncommon types of fever among the soldiers were frequent. In every form of surgery they have had more practice in a short time than the average doctor at home could hope to meet with in a lifetime. The records of the military hospitals, showing the number of successful operations and the high percentage of recovery among the patients is one of the best possible commendations of the men who helped to achieve all these triumphs in medical jurisprudence.

By all means, help the laborers and the mechanics to regain their status, but the professional men should not be forgotten by those in a position to extend them assistance.

THE NEW VICTORY LOAN.

THE WAR IS OVER, but the bills are yet to be paid. Peace has its responsibilities and obligations no less than conflict, responsibilities and obligations that are intensified by such strife as Canada was engaged in for over four years. The duties of citizenship should not be neglected, patriotic ardor should not be allowed to cool, now that peace has been assured. The credit and reputation of Canada must be upheld now just as devotedly as it was when the whole world rocked with the shock of battle. In this task all classes can help just as they did by unselfish co-operation to bring victory and peace to the arms of the Allies.

The war has left a gigantic national debt. It is necessary to borrow money in order to meet these obligations. Just as they did on two former occasions, the Government of Canada have decided to raise money among its own citizens instead of negotiating a foreign loan. On Monday next the campaign will open for the new Victory Loan, the third in as many years. It is proposed to raise three hundred million dollars in this way, and of this total the sum of one million eight hundred thousand has been allotted to Peterborough County.

In 1917 and 1918 the loans were oversubscribed, in the Dominion as a whole and in this county as well. The response was ready. Perhaps the fact that the country was at war was an incentive to the people to render financial aid. The reasons are just as good why this assistance should be given now. The entire economic fabric of Canada must be reconstructed.

The same arguments used to such effective purpose in 1917 and 1918 still hold good. There is no denying the fact that the money asked for is required. There is no criticism of the policy which piled up these tremendous obligations. It was necessary to spend million after million of dollars; either that or drop dishonorably out of the conflict. Seeing that the money is needed, it is admittedly the part of wisdom to raise it from the people of Canada. The interest on three hundred million dollars at five and one-half per cent., the rate which the Government intends to pay, will amount to sixteen and a half million dollars a year. It is not hard to perceive the advisability of keeping this interest charge at home instead of sending it abroad to foreign capitalists.

Every man who buys a Victory bond will receive his interest every half year, and the payments are always prompt. The investment is gilt-edged. The plan is commendable, as nothing that the Canadian Government has ever done has so encouraged thrift as this floating of domestic loans. The security is ample, better than you can obtain in any other investment. The Government is not asking for a gift, not seeking charitable contributions, but is submitting to you a sound business proposition

HELP CANADA TO REDEEM HER PLEDGES

This is the "period of re-adjustment." You will recollect that there was much speculation regarding it when the war was in progress. Dire things has been predicted by pessimists. Hard times and that sort of thing. Fortunately, these unpleasantnesses have been averted. Canada prospers.

Economic depression has been prevented by the people of this Dominion. Industrial and agricultural activities prevail to a large extent through the generous response to the last Victory Loan which made possible credits to countries requiring Canada's surplus products. These credits must be continued and in order that it may be done, all classes of citizens require to invest every dollar at their disposal in the Victory Loan 1919.

The Victory loan holds place in the first rank of the world's investments. The principal and the attractive rate of interest are certain of payment, being backed by the guarantee and all the assets of the nation. There is every reason to believe that Canada's Victory Bonds 1919 will increase in value in the open market as here Victory Bonds of all previous issues. Victory Bonds are convertible into cash at any time without trouble or delay.

All the money secured through the new Victory Loan will be spent in Canada and every Canadian will benefit from it. Unstinted subscription to the Victory Loan 1919 will effectively dispose of the re-adjustment bogey."

AN EIGHT HOUR DOMESTIC SERVICE

The housekeeper was talking about the plan by which house servants or domestic workers should be trained and should give thorough efficiency in return for a specified high wage and an eight hour day at the end of which eight-hour day she should leave her employer's house for her lodging.

Said the housekeeper: "I'm not saying it won't work. It may—so far as it goes. But it won't solve all the problems of either housekeeper or maid, and it won't bring Utopia.

'For what, may I ask, is become of the woman of moderate means who cannot afford to pay for eight hours a day help? And the great mass of women can't afford it at the present wage rate. What will become of the girls who can never reach the efficiency to make them warth that rate? Now don't tell me there are none, or I'll answer you haven't kept house as long as I have. What about the girls who do housework because they like the home feeling? Oh, yes, there are many such. I've talked with them.

Education in Housework

"Many is the green girl I have taken into my home and taught to do housework, to cook, to wash dishes right— to make beds, to sweep and to wait on table. She gave me her unskilled labor, and I gave her room and board, $3 a week—it would be wise that much now—and her education in housework. After she was thoroughly trained and had given me her service for perhaps a year or two she would leave and get a position with some richer woman who could pay for efficiency.

"Sometimes I rebelled at my lot, but my husband used to say: 'That is your province as a housekeeper of limited income, to run a training school for the servants of the rich. When she copied your cooking rules and learned all you could teach. Now she graduates, being an efficient worker, and it is time for you to start training another one.'

"I little thought then that I should live to see the day when my chief fear would be losing my position as trainer of the servants of the rich. But so it is. I understand the new system is to provide a training school for girls, so that each one will be capable and experienced when taking a position. Then I should be out of a job. Furthermore, I shall be out of a maid for I can't afford to pay the suggested rate of wages.'"

Here the housekeeper was interrupted by her listeners, who, with one accord, believing they at last had a week spot in her argument, said: "But you are practically paying that now, if you include room and board with the wages."

"To be sure. But I have the house and the furniture. I won't gain anything by having that room empty and the overhead expenses will not change much, so that the saving will be comparatively small. As for the girl, $10 a week extra will not enable her to live half as well as she now does. For that price she will have difficulty in getting a hall bedroom and cheap food, not to be compared with our meals in a boarding house or restaurant. As she cannot live in this neighborhood for that price, she will have to pay carfare, and she will find a laundry bill a new item of expense with which to reckon. Now she does her laundry here in my house, using my fire and soap and water and starch and irons, and doing it during working hours. By the new scheme I shall be paying more and the girl will be receiving less.

The Home Feeling.

As for the housekeeper's theory that many girls do housework because they like the feeling that they have a real home, instead of living in a boarding house, we thought we would see if that were true, and so we visited some general servants.

The first was the old type who had come over from the "auld countrie" as a "green girl," had taken a position with a woman who had taught her everything, and had been with the family so long that to quote the number of years to a housekeeper of today would be to awaken the skepticism and label oneself an Ananias.

"What do you think of this eight hour a day plan," we asked her.

"It won't amount to anything," she answered. "You can't get your work done in eight hours a day."

It never occurred to her that the idea was for her to work her eight hours, as a girl in a factory would, and then go home, leaving it to her employer to either finish the work herself or hire some one else to do it. There is a satisfaction greater than that of the day's work of the factory girl, limited by the measure of the eight-hour day, this cook claims, and that is the feeling that the work for which she is responsible is well and thoroughly done.

To be sure, the old type of "family servant" is obsolescent, but the species is still in evidence in many households.

PLACING THE BLAME
(Kansas City Star.)

"H'm, h'm," grumbled Farmer Hornbeak, gazing down the rows. "So that's the way you planted the corn, eh? Looks like you were staggering full of hard cider when you done it."

"Aw, them rows was straight when I planted 'em," doggedly replied the hired man. "The hot sun has warped 'em; that's all."

DREDGER'S LONG OCEAN TRIP
(National Marine.)

Boarded up with heavy planking to protect her from battering by heavy seas, a big dredger was towed from San Pedro, in southern California, to Cuba, a distance of more than 3,000 miles. The frame that carried the dredging apparatus was arranged as a sort of rudder, and she passed through some very severe storms without damage. The crew employed in operating the dredger lived in quarters on board.

WIT AND WISDOM

Willie: "Say, pa, what is meant by 'courting danger?'"

Pa: "Wh—er—any kind of courting, my son."

"Yes," said the newspaper reporter, "I always carry my notes in my hat."

"I see," replied Fogg; "news in a nutshell."

Younge: "And what is Jones doing, now that the war is over."

Clarke: "Oh, he has some back to his old job."

Younge: "What's that?"

Clarke: "Looking for a job."

"My dear, I don't think the guests liked your seed-cake."

"Why? It's all gone from the table!"

"Yes. I found most of it inside the grand piano."

Ella (fond of cheap airs): "Now that you have looked over my music what would you like to have me play?"

Tom: "Cards."

Given a Chance.

"I am in need of a boy about your size. I would pay you ten shillings a week."

"Will I have a chance to rise?"

"Oh, yes; I want you to be here at four every morning."

DON'TS BY TORONTO DOCTOR

In the Health Bulletin, Dr. Hastings, M.O.H. of Toronto, urges the people to "beware of the so-called common cold." In order to avoid colds he recommends that the following "Don'ts" be observed:

Don't sit or work in an over-heated room.

Don't use sprays or douches for your nose unless under the doctor's orders or instructions.

Don't sneeze or cough except into a handkerchief.

Don't allow anyone else to sneeze or cough toward you.

Don't allow any member of the family who has an acute cold to come into contact with other members of the household.

Don't go to any public meeting if you have a cold.

Don't talk into anyone's face if you have a cold and don't under any circumstances, shake hands with anyone while you have an acute cold.

Don't neglect or treat lightly a cold. It may be the beginning of influenza, pneumonia, measles, tuberculosis.

"Hundreds of lives could be saved and thousands of cases of sickness prevented if people were as afraid of colds as they are of smallpox," he concludes.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

Sells Food Direct From Front Window

Another new idea in merchandise and bringing down the cost of living was used in New Castle, Pa., on a recent Saturday by an enterprising firm, the Harry Gross Company.

In connection with the department store, a groceteria, cash-and-carry proposition, is in operation on the second floor.

On Saturday the big plate glass windows of the main window on Washington street were taken out, the window was piled full of groceries and clerks were placed in the window selling the goods direct from the window.

Reduced prices were offered on all goods sold from the window, the reason being given that it was possible because it was not necessary to have goods carted to the second floor.

The novelty of the plan and the real bargains offered served to clear the supplies from the window in short order. There was a large crowd of eager buyers at the window all day.

The plan had been well advertised in the newspapers previously.

Manager H. Lindsay, of the company, said that the store is to be remodeled and the glass was taken out for that purpose, then the idea of selling direct from the window was hit upon. It worked so well that it may be tried again, he said.

Pushes Bread as An Economical Food

"Eat more bread and cut down the cost of living" has proved a slogan that brought considerable new business to the Kolb Bakery Company of Scranton, Pa., and which C. J. Layfield, owner of the bakery, is pushing through porters, dodgers, letters, and newspaper space. He seized upon the suggestion by the government to people to cut out other food and stick to bread as economical, nourishing and satisfying. His action has proved a money-maker.

Two Ideas That Sold Many Films

Foster's store, of Miami, Fla., specializing in developing and printing films, found there was too much competition—so much, in fact, that there was small profit in handling this line for any one. Drug stores offered service, but so did framing houses.

A man in the developing room threw out the original hint that has since been adopted elsewhere. The little yellow boxes in which the films are received were saved until, in the aggregate, they filled a window. These were dumped there, without rhyme or reason and the significant announcement made that this shop must have given satisfaction to secure so much trade.

The mountain of empty cartons was in itself a unique eye-catcher.

But this led to a still more profitable venture. When sets of prints were made permission was received in writing to reproduce any that were of unusual interest.

Then sets of these prints were made up in thousand lots, when there was a full, and neatly packed in a little card-board container. The cover design stated that here were twelve bully good kodak snap shots of human interest value.

Cost of production was figured up and the sets sold for twenty-five cents each. A frame held the twelve samples so that they could be glimpsed quickly.

They sold like hot cakes.

Helping the Basement

The Boston Store, of Chicago, takes a novel means to attract customers to its subway and downstairs store. On each floor is a handsomely trimmed showcase in which are displayed various articles sold in the downstairs store, placarded "Hints from our Subway Store."

This case serves to attract to the downstairs store shoppers who would perhaps not visit it or know of its existence. It is also claimed that the display does not detract from the sale of better merchandise on the upper floors.

The Human Touch That Holds Customers

By a streak of good luck I have been on the inside of a little story how a merchant succeeded in overcoming competition and held his trade in spite of some of the most heart-breaking obstacles that ever confronted a retailer.

This man had gone out on the edge of his city and commenced several years ago to build up a business upon service, quality goods and right prices.

He had been shrewd. He had located right in the path of the city's development. Each year his business had grown better until he was the envy of his competitors.

Needless to say, he was not permitted long to go without competition on such a field. First, a downtown store established a branch in the same block. They understood him for a while. Then a big chain store organization saw what was being done. They got a corner directly opposite my friend, put in a big new building, established a store there, marked prices way down, and advertised their heads off. There was of course, a pretty little war on.

Had Fighting Spirit.

Most men would have been content to sell out at the first opportunity and set the white elephant off their hands. But not so with my friend. He had been there for years he had earned a chance to serve the community; he liked the people, and he was a fighter!

I watched the matter with a great deal of interest. What would my friend do? Would he mark down the prices and try to beat them at their own game, and go down himself? I wondered if there would be a "cut-throat" competition affair staged here.

Then came aletter in the mail one morning. Among other things, it said:

Dear George—I've noticed for a long time that people are not as friendly as they might be when they come into the store nowadays.

When we started out in our present location a number of years ago all of us in the store knew every one by their first names, and we used to call each other by their first names.

I got to thinking it over the other night and decided that it was too good a habit to lose, so we are all going to start in again calling you by your first name when you come to the store.

And to make the fun merrier we are going to give a dollar's worth of merchandise to every one of our customers whom we call by the wrong name, or fail to call at all. How does that strike you?

And so it came about that people were called by their first names when they entered the store. It was "Hello, Agnes" (to the little girls) for you have to be careful with the big girls ,you know.

Many Amusing Incidents

There were many mistakes made, and a lot of fun had at the expense of the management during the succeeding two or three weeks. Women commenced to demand that they be called by their first names, too.

Why I heard one of them say to another:

"Believe me, I made him come across with a dollar's worth of sugar! He tried to get out of it by saying that it didn't apply to women, that they thought he was getting fresh with them when he called them by their first names. But I told him that didn't go with me."

When I asked the merchant about this particular case, he winked and smiled.

"Sure I gave her the dollar's worth of sugar. It isn't such a bad piece of advertising is it? I'd spend a whole lot more than that if I tried any other method. Look what the fellows across the street are spending and they don't seem to be getting the trade."

By informing himself about his customers, this merchant constantly got closer to his customers. And such a relation as that will weather any business storm that may arise.

New Insulating Material.

A new insulating material that is incombustible is made by mixing 51.7 per cent powdered asbestos, 14 per cent powdered mica, 20 per cent mineral rubber (a soft substance found in deposits of oleaginous schist); 1 per cent rosin and 0.3 per cent of bisulphide of selenium. After washing and evaporating in the air, a hard, non absorbent substance is obtained which, on heating, becomes plastic and can be molded to any shape.

Anatolia.

Anatolia, mentioned in the news from the peace conference in Paris, is the name of one of the five large provinces or districts into which Turkey is divided. It lies between the Mediterranean and Black seas, and the district is the home of the greater part of the Turkish population, numbering about 7,000,000 people. The other four great districts of Turkey are Armenia, Syria, Mesopotamia and Kurdistan.

Women who suffer from any form of weakness, as indicated by displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues," should do as Mrs. DeVine did, and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a thorough trial.

For over forty years this famous remedy, which contains the curative, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, has been correcting just such ailments. If you have mysterious complications write for advice to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

WASN'T ASKING FOR MUCH

All Buffalo Wife Wanted of the Husband was Just "One of These Regional Banks."

Stevenson, we believe it was—our memory isn't as good as it was before the income tax passed—tried to locate the greatest happiness in married life, remarks a writer in Buffalo News. He said the greatest meed of joy comes from recounting tales of courtship, didn't he? Or is the pinnacle of happiness found in social contact with others, whereby husband and wife are spurred by the law of contrast to love one another more dearly? We forget which was his conclusion.

'Tennyrate, both are wrong and unworthy of so great a master of literature. Our notion, you may say, is unimportant, and very probably you speak within the law when you say so. But to us the greatest joy comes in that mystic hour beside the evening lamp, when the gray moss hangs low from the nuptial tree, casting shadowy fancies about the heart of the home. To sing to her, to write odes to her, to recount the day's work to her—all are pleasant occupations.

To read to her, though, is the very height of evening enjoyment; she is so attentive, hangs so interestedly upon every word, and then her refreshing woman's views on what has been read! For example, last night, when he read two columns of comprehensive matter on the currency innovation, after which she yawned, wound up the clock and said:

"I wish you would stop tomorrow and get one of those regional banks and bring it home. I have one of the A. M. & A. banks and a dime bank, too. But I think one of those regional banks would be so much more desirable for larger money."

BRITISH ADVANCE IN AFRICA

Plan to Open Country Which the Huns Had Picked as Worthy of Exploitation.

Railway development in Africa is evidently to be prosecuted with vigor. At any rate, preliminaries are under discussion for a branch railway into Ruanda from the trunk line that German engineers had but just completed from the Indian ocean to Lake Tanganyika. The new line will advance into a country where the war in Europe probably saved the natives from German attack. Ruanda had remained an undeveloped part of the German possession, but had been examined and written down as particularly worth while to develop for the variety of its products. The new railway had brought German military force within striking distance, and the history of German management in Africa gives every reason to believe that the opening up of the Ruanda country would have been a disaster for the Watussi who inhabit it. From the British viewpoint, these natives are to be conciliated rather than antagonized. They are, in fact, one of the superior races of Africa, held to be related to the Egyptians, Assyrians, or some other ancient African people, and should be benefited rather than injured by the coming of the iron horse and the opening up of their country under British auspices.—Christian Science Monitor.

Appreciated American Spirit.

Here is an anecdote from Maj. Ian Hay Beith's "The Last Million," that shows the feeling of one British officer toward the American doughboy. "I like the young American's passionate affection for his country," said the officer, "and his fixed determination to boost everything connected with her. One day I was waiting in a village for an American staff car which was being sent for me from Chaumont. I found one standing at the corner of the street, so I asked the chauffeur thinking he might be from headquarters, 'Where are you from?' And he sat up and replied all in one breath as if I had pressed a button, 'Sir, I am from Marion, Ohio, the greatest steam shovel producing center in the world.' Just like that. That is what I call the right spirit."

CLAIM DESCENT FROM CELTS

Writer Asserts Scotsmen Are a Unit in Denying Stories of Their Saxon Origin.

It was that deadly flower of Saxon chivalry, Edward I, who caused the early records of Scotland to be destroyed. Fortunately, the Irish Celtic annalists' writings remain, and as historians none were more competent or able to form an impartial judgment of Scotland's early history than they were. Nowhere in their annals do they make the slightest mention of the silly theory of the Saxon origin of the people of southern or eastern Scotland, and they also know nothing of the fictitious division of Highlanders and Lowlanders. Hector Boece is also silent on the supposed Saxon descent of the Lowlander and the expulsion of the Celt. Instead he says we who have our abode on the confines of England, through much commercial intercourse and wars, have learned the Saxon speech, and have forsaken our own. Our place names prove the essential Celticity of Scotland, as the Celtic forms outnumber the English by ten to one, and the latter are mostly modern or corruptions of the Gaelic. The English language pushed out our native Gaelic, but neither Saxon nor English displaced the men, and any outsiders who fifteen hundred years ago were permitted to survive within our borders would soon be fused into the whole, and today we are a nation or race or breed second to none, and as Professor Keith, the eminent ethnologist, says, "the Scot is the fertilizer of the British empire."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

MUST BE BORN A SINGER

Certain Formation of Throat and Nostrils Imperative for Utterance of Sweet Sounds.

According to recent scientific discoveries, singing birds, like human singers, must have a certain type of throat and nostrils. A full throat, large thorax, open nostrils and slightly protruding lips with good length from the point of the nose to the point of the chin and full cheeks are, say the scientists, positive signs in a human being of the power to give forth tone.

If the ears are round and well set to the head it is a sign not only of the power to sing, but to appreciate, and the combination shows the great artist.

With feathered songsters much the same rules hold good. The round, somewhat pointed beak of the canary opens wide and his thorax and throat are exceedingly big for so tiny a bird, according to the Philadelphia North American. He can hear and appreciate the smallest sound and his trills and the beauty of his tone are due to his throat, to the roundness of his head and the shape of his bill.

The duck, on the other hand, having a flat bill and a small throat can only quack. Even if he longed to sing he could not acquire any pleasant notes, and it is the same way with some people. The most careful training cannot give the sound box which nature provides for those to whom she gives the great gift of vocal powers.

May Mean War on Rats.

There is not enough leather to go round. Fish skins are susceptible to tanning, and there are rat skins which make good leather, large enough for many purposes. They would do for some kinds of gloves and mittens, says the Little Journal. They may be sewed together to make cloaks and other garments, and they are not too small to be available for parts of boots and shoes. The general rule as to leather is that the thicker the fur is the poorer the hide, and vice versa. According to this, rat hide would produce superior leather.

Somebody with the gift of guessing computes that there are 100,000,000 rats in this country, and the damage they do would feed a good-sized army. It would take at least 5,000 skins a day to supply a small modern tannery. Nobody wants the rats; they belong to anybody that can catch them. That is the only problem—to catch them and skin them, and then deliver the goods.

Crow Has Earned Farmer's Hate.

Most commonly the crow is hated by the farmer because it pulls up the young corn to get the soft seed kernels at the root, and everywhere is to be seen the scarecrow in the newly planted corn fields. Later on the damage they do to the corn crop can hardly be estimated, because they peck the end of the young ears, allowing the water to enter the shuck and rot the corn.

Home-Made Martyr.

John G. says, in a long letter of misery, that nobody understands him in this world. If you take up that role, John, then nobody can be expected to understand you. Don't try to make yourself out a martyr. Put your back into life and carry a burden for another. You'll soon find then that you are understood and appreciated.—Exchange.

Algerian Grain Regions.

Grain is produced in Algeria chiefly in valleys interspersed among the mountain ranges near the Mediterranean coast and on the high plateaus lying between the coastal mountain region and the less elevated ranges which form the northern border of the Sahara desert.

Carved in Algerian Rocks.

A huge buffalo with enormous horns is conspicuous in prehistoric rock drawings lately found in Algeria. The African elephant is also a striking feature, and other animals include the lion, leopard, gazelle and domestic goats and sheep.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Monarch's Compliment.

A pretty compliment was that Philip IV of Spain, himself a painter, tendered to a greater artist, Velasquez. When Velasquez had finished his famous picture "Las Meninas," which includes not only Philip and his queen but the artist himself, brush in hand he asked of the king, "Is anything wanting?" "One thing only," answered Philip; and taking the palette from Velasquez's hands, he painted on the breast of the artist's figure in the picture the Cross of the Order of Santiago, the most distinguished in Spain.

Animal's Strong Instinct.

Some animals are remarkable, indeed, for the wonderful development of love and devotion they possess and show toward men. They are so acute in the sense of their affections that they seem to perceive the feelings of their master in advance of his expressions. Masters of dumb animals have often been heard to declare that their animals were quicker to detect in them a spirit of anger than were their fellow men.

Trinidad Lizard Farm.

On the island of Trinidad there is today a veritable lizard farm which has all the equipment for the successful breeding of these none too numerous members of the reptile family which are now known to be indispensable to the sugar planters. In addition to this enterprise a wider search is being made for toads to help increase the world's sugar output.

Where Women Shave.

In the New East (Tokio), of which J. W. Robertson Scott is editor, there is given an entertaining list of things "the Japanese do differently" from ourselves. For example:

Ladies sit with their hands folded palms upward. Every lady shaves. Ladies never brush their hair; they only comb it.

It is polite to make a noise with the mouth when eating certain food. It shows one appreciates the food. Ladies, however, rarely do so, as they are supposed to suppress their feelings.

A bride calls on her neighbors and friends, instead of the neighbors and friends calling on her.

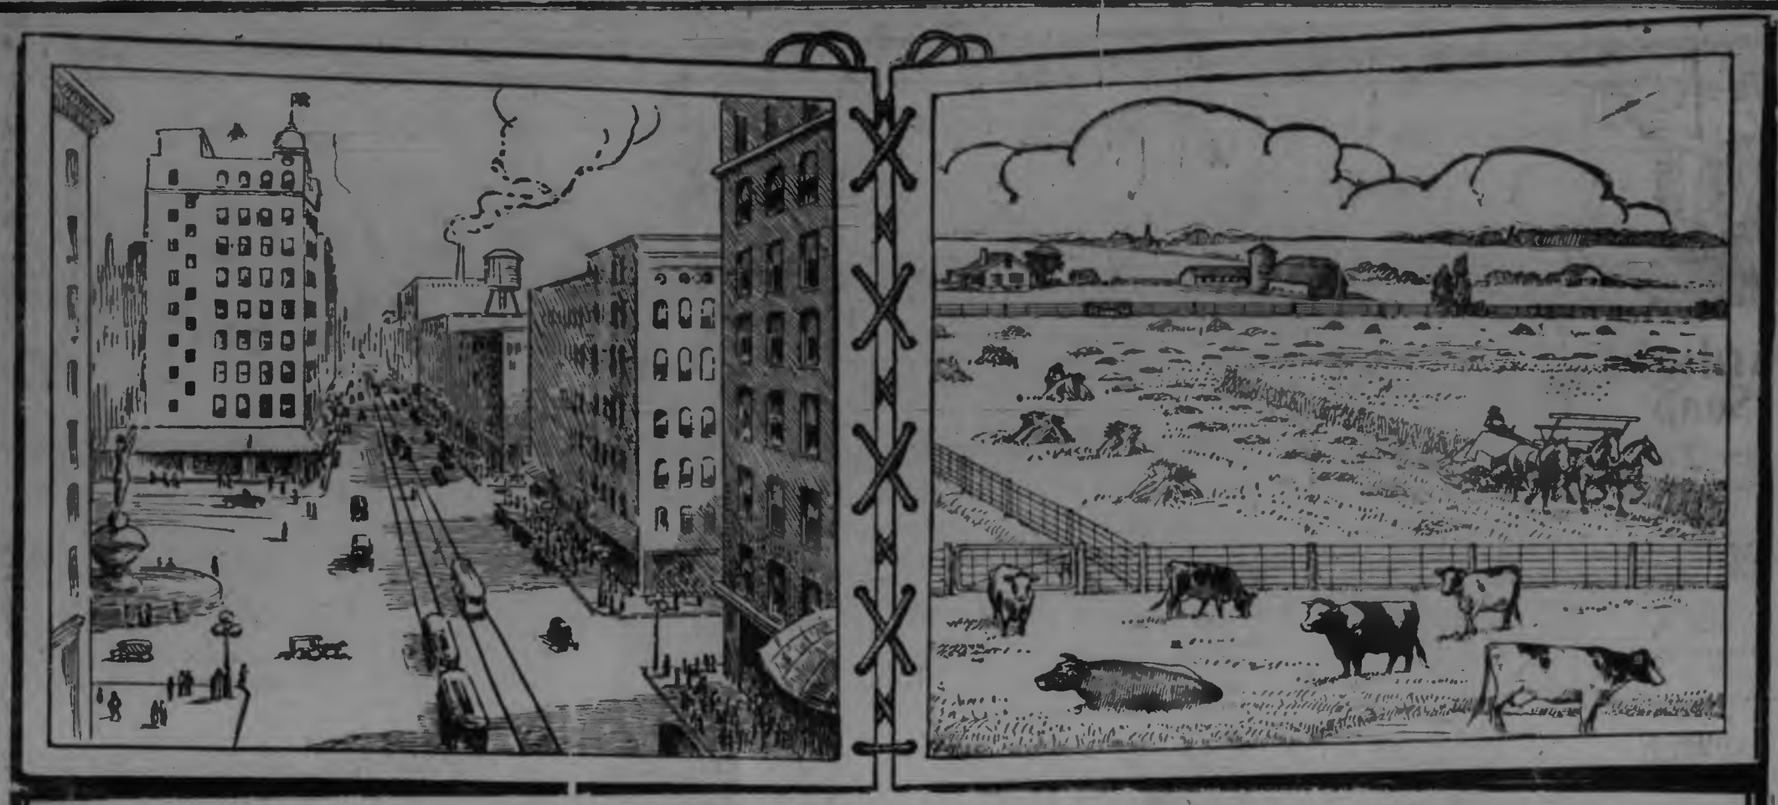
Where we speak of a thimbleful Japanese speak of a sparrow's tear. Number three is always lucky, excepting in takuwan (pickled radish). To offer a person three pieces would be rude.

We speak of putting a thing on the fire to cook. The Japanese speak of putting the fire through it ("hi wo tosu").

A man never wishes his wife "good morning" first. She greets him and he replies. A woman never speaks of her husband as such; she speaks of "the house."

The Japanese Farm.

No one but a Japanese farmer could raise enough rice to go around in a country where there are 56,000,000 people and only 25,000 square miles of farm lands. The Government is helping by experiments which have increased the yield by one-third during the past twenty years. But where a "farm" is two and a half acres and where an additional acre costs $600, every inch and every minute must be used. Even then one-third of the farmers' families have to add to their incomes by silk-raising. No wonder there is a drift toward the city factories, especially since the old order which gave the farmer social prestige is being replaced by one founded upon a financial basis.—World Outlook.



City and Farm Equally Benefit

The man in the city and the man on the farm is each concerned with the other's prosperity, and each has equally strong personal reasons for supporting the Victory Loan 1919.

Last year Canada shipped to Great Britain and our European Allies $496,932,191 worth of the products of our farms.

The future of Canadian Agriculture depends upon holding and extending its export trade in farm products, and the future of city and town prosperity is interwoven with agricultural prosperity.

Great Britain and our European Allies provide a ready market. But as a result of the strain of war, they are short of cash. They must buy on credit for a time.

The British market particularly, we must not,—dare not—lose, because we have spent many long years in cultivating it, and establishing a prestige there for Canadian products.

Great Britain asks for a credit to buy our surplus food stuffs, and Britain always pays her debts. Our ability to extend this credit depends upon the success of the Victory Loan 1919.

Just think what it means to all of us to keep Canadian agriculture prosperous.

Canadian farmers form a large porportion of the buyers of Canada's manufactured products, resulting in trade for the manufacturer and retailer, and employment for the man in city and town.

With the money from the sale of his products the farmer buys agricultural implements, gasoline engines, tractors, wagons, seed, wire fences, fertilizers, milk cans, building material, roofing, furniture, carpets, furnishings, stoves, clothing, boots and shoes, groceries, drugs, pianos, talking machines, automobiles, papers, and scores of other things.

The city and town man makes these goods, and his wages are spent in his local stores, so that starting with the farmer the chain of trade travels through every class of the community.

The city again furnishes a home market for the farmers. Our cities have been built by our farmers—by those farm boys who have developed genius in organization, business and finance, and who do not have to leave Canada to find a field for their activities. The farm and city are interdependent the one upon the other. Canada requires both, and both prosperous.

Then upon both the man in the city and the man on the farm there rests a direct responsibility. Both must shoulder it and unite in making an overwhelming success of the Strategem Used by Horse Thief.

Among the many interesting stories told by members of the Canadian Mounted Police is one that has to do with the cleverness of an Indian.

One snowy morning a band of Crees awoke to find that about a dozen of their ponies had been stolen during the night. A band to go in pursuit was immediately organized, and in the course of an hour the trail was struck. The band followed it for thirty miles or more, till it entered a river and headed for a little wooded island.

Smoke was rising from the trees, and an opening, apparently the mouth of a cave, was in plain view. Presently a Piegan Indian showed himself in front of the opening. At his heels was a dog.

Pretty soon the dog scented the Crees, who were lying low, and began growling and barking. The Piegan looked up, glanced about him for a moment and then instantly entered the cave. In about ten seconds another Piegan came round the rocks and also went in; then another, and another and another. The Crees lay silently in the bushes, counting, till upward of fifty Piegans had come round the rocks and gone into the cave, and still they kept coming. Each carried a rifle.

When at last seventy men had disappeared in the cave, the superstitious and cautious Crees concluded that the evil spirit had something to do with it. So thoroughly were they filled with this idea that even when re-enforcements came, which was in a few hours, they were reluctant to attack the island.

That night, however, one Cree, less credulous than the others, crossed over the ice to investigate. On approaching the supposed cave, he found that it was no cave at all, but simply an opening leading some ten feet into the rock, where it made a turn and came out on the other side.

There was the remnant of a single camp fire, the ponies were gone, and not an Indian was in sight. The ingenious Piegan thief, by making the circuit of the passage and the end of the island seventy times, had so deceived his pursuers as to gain the time necessary for his escape.

An Unfortunate Name.

It is customary in China, when the number of children—daughters preponderating—begins to exceed the family income, to name the latest comer "Enough." Acting upon this superstition, the Lees, a native Christian couple, presented their seventh child for baptism, relates World Outlook. "What is her name?" inquired the missionary pastor. "Enough!" announced both parents in fervent unison. "That will never do!" the pastor frowned. "Think of a more fitting name!" But Mr. and Mrs. Lee were smitten with stage-fright and could think of nothing. The Bible woman sitting near whispered: "Call her Dorcas!" So Dorcas she was hastily named. But fancy the dismay of Mr. and Mrs. Lee when they discovered that Dorcas, translated into the native dialect, is identical in sound with the Chinese words, "Many More."

Canadian Houses In England.

Agent-General Wade, of British Columbia, interviewed by the London Daily News, said that hundreds of thousands of mill-cut fir-wood houses could be imported from British Columbia in a short time and erected in Britain within a few days of arrival, and thus relieve the housing problem. Mr. Wade admits that architects and builders would oppose the importation, but such houses, he says, would be more damp-proof and cheaper than brick even adding the cost of freightage.

B. C. Pulp Wood.

A Vancouver pulp and paper company, situated at Port Alice on the west coast of Vancouver Island, is nearing completion, and will shortly be ready to manufacture 70 tons of pulp daily. It is expected that over 800 men will be required for the various operations, including logging and saw-milling.

WEDDED IN ENGLAND SIXTY YEARS AGO

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM TAYLOR CELEBRATE THEIR DIAMOND WEDDING

Sixty years ago, October 17th, 1859, at Old Wensfield Anglican Church, in Straffordshire, Wm. Taylor was united in marriage to Mary Ann Copson, and last Friday at their home, 279 Sherbrooke street, the bride and groom of over half a century, celebrated their diamond wedding, surrounded by their children, grandchildren and friends.

The auspicious occasion was observed by a reception in the home, which had been fittingly and beautifully decorated with flags, flowers and maple leaves, followed by a wedding breakfast served on a table of which the centre piece was a wedding cake bearing the inscription, "Married 60 Years."

While the groom is fast approaching 80 years, and the bride 79, both enoy good health, and entered into the celebration of their diamond wedding with quite as much enthusiasm as the youngest guest, and showed every prjomise of living to celebrate many more anniversaries together. Mr. Taylor was delighted to hark back to the early days of the city to which he came in the town's infancy, forty years ago.

Shortly after his arrival in the city to which he and Mrs. Taylor came on the Grand Trunk Railway, Mr. Taylor became an employee of the C.P.R. and helped to contruct the line of that railway to Peterborough. He was later appointed to a position with the railway at Mansvers and after serving the company for 25 years was awarded a life pension.

During his long life in the city, Mr. Taylor has been an enthusiastic workers for the Sons of England and was largely responsible for the organization of the local lodge in which he has held many of the more important offices. In recognition of Mr. Taylor's faithful services, the Lodge, recently, presented him with a handsome smoking outfit and Mrs. Taylor with a beautiful bouquet of roses.

Of their large family only four children remain, Mrs. Walter Stocker, Mrs. Sidney Mitchell and Mrs. Thomas Byers of the city, and the Rev. Herbert Taylor, pastor of one of the leading Presbyterian churches of Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were the recipients of several very handsome presents from admiring friends in the city.

BOARD OF COMMERCE MEET AGAIN TOMORROW

GRAIN GROWERS OF MANITOBA HAVE ASKED FOR AN HEARING

Winnipeg, Oct. 20.—The sittings of the board of commerce in respect to the high cost of living in Winnipeg will be resumed on Tuesday morning at 10.30 in the city hall, when Commissioner R. A. Robson, K.C., chairman, will receive several deputations. One of these will be from the Grain Growers. W. R. Wood of the Manitoba association having asked for a hearing before the commission.

...representatives of consumers have as yet asked to be heard. This is a pity," one of the officials of the board observed today. "There are consumers' leagues and associations organized all over the country and yet not a move out of any of them. Why don't they get together and send a representative to state their side of the case? It is the consumers who, in the end, foot all the bills. They ought surely to let themselves be heard from, and that with a vengeance."

OTTAWA WILL MOVE AFTER ONTARIO VOTE

FEDERAL ACTION IS LIKELY ON PROHIBITION ISSUE EARLY THIS WEEK.

Ottawa, Oct. 20.— When Ontario has said its say on prohibition, the Dominion Government will take up the tale. The talk last week was that the Grand Trunk debate could end by Thursday, but it may be sooner, as the Opposition is opposing the acquisition of the Grand Trunk System on other grounds than opposition to the principle of Government ownership.

Those who do speak against Government ownership state explicitly that they do not speak for the party but for themselves. There is a great probability that on Tuesday or Wednesday the Government will renew its efforts to put its temperance legislation through the House.

All The Time Wanted.

"Talk and take as long as you like," was the reply of Hon. Arthur Meighen, Minister of the Interior, to Opposition criticism that the Grand Trunk bill was introduced in the dying days of the session, and could not, therefore, get adequate attention.

A Working Session.

With the Ontario referendum and election cleared out of the way, tomorrow there will be evident and increasing disposition to have things pushed through. The soldiers' re-establishment report is ready, and it follows generally the lines already predicted. Many members have gone home, thinking that the "indemnity" session was practically ended, only to hear that it is to become a working session after all. Some who went home live too far away to return. However, the Government is sure of its following.

It is possible that it will now get the Grand Trunk Bill through without the closure because of the Opposition's fear of being placed before the country as opposed to Government ownership.

6 CENTS STRAIGHT ON MOOSE JAW CARS

ELECTORS SAVE SYSTEM TO CITY BY MAKING SOME CONCESSIONS

Moose Jaw, Sask., Oct. 20.—By the narrow margin of sixty-nine votes the burgesses of Moose Jaw Saturday saved to the city its street car service by ratifying an agreement between the city and the company for amendments to the franchise which gave the company higher fares and other concessions, without which the company said it would no longer operate.

The agreement thus ratified gives the company 6c fares, cancels $35,000 back taxes, and gives immunity from further taxes during the remaining eleven years of the franchise. It also insures the stockholders 6 per cent. on their investment, and gives to the city 80 per cent. of profits after operating expenses sinking fund and renewal payments and dividends are met.

Another by-law, which gives the company the right to operate one-man safety cars, was passed by the electors by a majority of 628.

AFRICA GAINS EQUAL TO LOSSES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Pretoria, South Africa, Oct. 20.—A distinguished gathering crowded the Town Hall today when the Mayor, acid scenes of enthusiasm, presented General Smuts with the sword of honor subscribed for by the citizens.

General Smuts, replying, dwelt with pride on South Africa's part in the war and the provision made for returned soldiers. He said he was of the opinion that there would be no difficulty in absorbing them, and concluded by saying that for the fifteen million pounds spent in conquering German Southwest Africa the Union had received an absolutely adequate asset.

FORD INVENTS A NEW STREET CAR

Dutroit, Mich, Oct. 20. — Henry Ford has invented a gasoline street car equipped with a special internal combustion engine, with which he expects to revolutionize street railway and interurban tranzportation. The engine has been given its first tryout in the Ford experimental shops, and Mr. Ford expressed himself as pleased with the results obtained.

The car can make seventy miles an hour. Its public test will be made in about a month. Arrangements are under way with the Michigan Central railroad for a race against the Wolverine fast train between Detroit and Chicago. The gasoline car will leave ten minutes ahead of the Wolverine, according to present plans, and Mr. Ford will personally direct the operation of the car. The power unit which will move the car represents a new combination of elements and has been jealously guarded.

GIRL DYING OF HYDROPHOBIA

Five-Year-Old Little One Bitten by Dog Last August.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Josephine Van Dula, aged five years, who was bitten on the lip by a dog last August, lies in Washington Park Hospital at the point of death from hydrophobia. The first signs of the disease appeared last Saturday, and Dr. Geo. A. Hass rushed her to the hospital.

Dr. Thos. A. Carter, who attended the Lulkart children, bichloride victims, was called into consultation by Dr. Hass. The physicians agreed that the case was too advanced for the Pasteur treatment to save the child.

The case is a rare one, because the dog which bit the girl showed no signs of rabies, and the wound was scarcely larger than a pin scratch.

PLAN $3,000,000 FOR TENEMENTS

Chicago, Oct. 19.—A joint committee of business men from the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago real estate board, which conferred in August on the proposition of tearing down solid blocks of buildings in the "black belt" and replacing them with modern tenements, yesterday widened the scope of its plan so that it now includes provisions for housing the families of laborers, whether white or black.

The business men, many of whom are employers, urged the new plan because of the excessive labor turnover, the result of inadequate housing conditions. The tentative plan calls for a corporation with a capitalization of $3,000,000 and Col. Abel Davis, vice-president of the Chicago Title and Trust Company, announced that his firm stood ready to back the new enterprise to the extent of $500,000 by loaning money on property which is to be rehabilitated under the plan.

B. J. Rosenthal offered to merge his building project at State and 57th streets with the new housing plan. The committee will meet next Monday to decide on further policies.

After the Fire.

When fire has swept a bit of woodland the flowers that start the following season are often not the same as grew there before and frequently are strange to the locality. Queer legends have grown up to account for this fact, but the explanation is in reality very simple. Down under the surface soil these seeds have been waiting no one knows how long. They never had a chance before fire gave it.

The Hen Exonerated.

Investigations and to some extent executive action in the high cost of living campaign serve to restore confidence in one age-long friend of the human race.

For the last two years the public has had ample reason to suspect the hen of profiteering. The price of eggs and the quality of eggs even at the price charged have been such that people had just cause to believe the hen not "on the job" as she was wont to be. But now eggs by hundred millions are being unearthed in cold storage plants. Hens have been laying them according to rule, but men have been sequestering them, against the time when high prices might become still higher.

It is something to know that the source of supply is still intact and uncontaminated with prevalent disinclination to work under normal conditions.

"Prayer flags" are a unique labor-saving device employed by the people of Tibet. The flags are suspended on long lines, and while they are moving in the breeze they are supposed to be recording prayers for the benefit of those who put them up.

Nelson Day
Its Message to Canadians

ONE hundred and fifteen years ago tomorrow Nelson achieved his great Victory at Trafalgar and decided Britain's supremacy on the seas.

Today we eagerly strive for the commercial supremacy of the seas, and to that end we MUST train our Canadian boys to man Canadian ships to carry Canada's exports.

Canada Expects that Every Man will do his Duty

Tomorrow and the two following days you will be given an opportunity to insure the success of the Boys' Naval Brigades, on which rests the continuance of the type of trained seamen Canada must have.

The Navy League Campaign for $500,000 must be an unqualified success so that the great work undertaken may be carried forward during the coming year.

Every dollar subscribed will be used in Canada to aid Canadians—to provide relief for Canadian seamen injured in the war and their dependents—to conduct comfortable homes on shore for our seamen in port—to organize Boys' Naval Brigades and give our boys the necessary training so that if they decide their livelihood is on the sea they will be ready for Merchant Service.

Tomorrow the campaign starts. For three days, many of our best citizens will give all their time and attention to the raising of the fund. Help them. Respond liberally. There is a great issue at stake. Do your part to the utmost of your ability.

Burmese Girls Woo Mates.

The women of Burma have unlimited freedom in comparison to the women of other eastern lands. Unlike the women of India, China, or Egypt, they may choose their own husbands and indulge in a period of courtship such as we of the western world so thoroughly understand.

From the time of the first great event in a young girl's life, the boring of her ears, which announces to the world that she is no longer a child, but a woman, until her betrothal, the Burmese girls looks forward to the search for a husband as the one aim and ambition of her life.

Until her ears are bored she is a child and runs and plays freely with her brothers upon village streets. Finally the day arrives when her friends and relatives bring with them the ear-borer and the soothsayer, and the frightened girl must pay the price of gaining maidenhood.

Her cries are drowned by the music and the talk and laughter that seem so heartless; but the pain is soon over, and she herself will make the hole larger by every means in her power, because until the hole is large enough to receive the great round tube, nearly half an inch in diameter, she does not feel that she is indeed a woman.

This initiation of the girl into womanhood compares to the entrance of her brother into the monastery or the tatooing of his legs, the sign that he is no longer a boy, but may sit with men and chew betelnut and discuss the affairs of the world with wondrous wisdom.

After the ear boring ceremony, each man our maiden sees may be a possible husband, and she copies the coquettish sway of the hips that is so effective in her older sister as she walks down the street with her mother, aunt or married friend, who carefully guards her from all impropriety, now that she has arrived at marriageable age.

ENFORCE ACT IN MANITOBA.

Government Will Create New Department for Purpose.

Winnipeg, Oct. 20.—An announcement which forecasts a general shake-up in the province with reference to the enforcement of the Manitoba Temperance Act was issued by Attorney-General Johnston. A new department will be created under the Attorney-General, to be known as the Law Enforcement Department.

In the past a number of sub-departments have divided responsibilities leading to much overlapping and possible inefficiency, though the attorney-general states that the proposal is not to be construed as a lack of confidence in any of the present officials. Enabling legislation will be brought down next session.

ARTISTIC ENSEMBLE MAKES GRAND OPERA

SAN CARLO COMPANY IS OPERA GROUP OF UNITY AND PERFECTION

While upon its roster of principals are many of the foremost songbirds now appearing in opera, the remarkable success, both artistically and financially, of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company is in no wise due to the individual brilliancy of any one or two of them, but rather is acounted for by reason of the absolute unity and perfection of artistic ensemble which characterize its productions. A notable feature is that no single principal surpasses the others except as a particular role permits greater display of talents with which each seems to abundantly endowed.

The best operatic communities of this country have generously demonstrated, by their splendid patronage of the San Carlo company upon its several tours, that they love the masterworks of opera well enough to support them when produced by such a well-balanced organization, even though there be none of the over-advertized singers to complicate matters and make performances uncertain by their bizarre whims, their temperamental foibles and with incidental disappointments eternally arising from bad throats and worse dispositions. Sound artistic production of opera, and sterling business management of such an enterprise, in combination, has made the San Carlo organization an instrumentality of popular culture and a source of perennia popular delight.

No other opera company has so successfully brought grand opera within the reach of modest finances and done it so commendably and legitimately. The inherent melodic beauty of the San Carlo productions may be attributed, however, to the retention in the casts of certain singers from season to season, which gives to the ensemble a confidence and balance that only familiarity and co-operation can realize. Of course, the dominant reason is the welcome absence of over-advertized stars in the assemblage.

STORY OF GREAT NON-STOP FLIGHT

HEAR IT AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE THURSDAY EVENING

The story of the first non-stop transatlantic flight to be told at the Grand on Thursday evening by the navigator himself, Sir H. W. Brown, is as follows:

"London, 4th March. A start from Greenwich meantime, 15th of June. Vickers Vimy Atlantic machine, leaving Newfoundland exact at 4:20 p.m. Greenwich meantime, 14th. June. Total time 16 hours 12 minutes.

"Signed, ALCOCK and BROWN."

Such was the first brief and modest message flashed from the airmen in Ireland that startled the entire world. The complete tale of adventurous and amazingly hazardous enterprise was to be told to the world later and for this reason the navigator, Sir Whitten Brown, K. B. E., is making a limited tour of America. Very few cities in Canada are to be favored with this famous airman's visit and Peterborough is fortunate in being included in the itinery.

Sir Arthur Whitten Brown tells details that are entirely unknown to us. His story will be illustrated with slides and pictures showing all parts of the flight that could be taken.

GREAT CAST FOR MABEL NORMAND IN NEW PICTURE

WALTER HIERS AND ALEC FRANCIS SUPPORT COMEDIENNE IN "WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE."

A cast of exceptional merit is assembled for Mabel Normand's newest Goldwyn Picture, "When Doctors Disagree," which comes to the Grand Theatre today and Tuesday. The production was directed by Victor L. Schertzinger, who won a place in the forefront of American directors by his brilliant work in the supervision of "The Millionaire Vagrant," "The Clodhopper" "The Pinch Hitter," and several other successful pictures. Before his advent in picture work Schertzinger was famed throughout the country as a violin virtuoso and composer. It was while on tour with Sembrich, Calve, Journet and Melba that he won this renown. A few years ago, when "Civilization" was to be produced, Schertzinger was chosen to write the musical score, and has since perfected several motion picture operas.

Playing opposite Miss Normand is Walter Hiers, the genial fat boy of "Seventeen," whose comedy in "When Doctors Disagree" is delightful. As a youth he attended the Peekskill Military Academy, going from there to the stage. He came into prominence when he played in "The Conquest of Canaan," "The Mysterious Miss Terry," and later in "Over There," "Brown of Harvard," Madge Kennedy's "Our Little Wife," and Mae Marsh's "Spotlight Sadie."

"The Little Girl Next Door" afforded Fritzie Ridgeway her first screen opportunity and she has since appeared in "The Raven" "High Speed" and "The Calendar Girl." In "When Doctors Disagree" she plays with skill the role of a haughty village belle, the Queen o' the May.

Alec B. Francis, one of the screen's leading character men, who plays Dr. Harris in Miss Normand's latest production, was for years on the English stage before entering the cinema. His distinctive work has been in Rex Beach's "The Auction Block" and "The Crimson Gardenia," "The Cinderella Man" and other Goldwyn pictures. William Buckley began his screen career in "The Escape" and later became a director. In addition he played in "Mistress Nell" and "Cinderella." Both George Nichols and James Gordon play prominent parts in "When Doctors Disagree."

HELP! HELP! POLICE! COMING TO EMPIRE

There's going to be a desperate commercial battle pictured at the Empire Theatre, beginning Monday. It will be a battle between safety razor interests for the control of the industry. It's a William Fox comedy drama featuring George Walsh and the title is "Help! Help! Police!" The police figure largely because George, as befits a play dealing with razors, gets into a lot of scrapes and because one of the active characters is a two-edged sharper, who gets his hands on some $600,000 of the "lather" that the razor interests have accumulated.

There is said to be a strong love theme running through the play, the sweethearts being the son of one of the razor concerns and the daughter of the president of a rival concern. The police interpose numerous obstacles in the way of their achievement of happiness, and these incidents furnish the opportunity for action which gives Mr. Walsh ample scope for display of his athletic ability. Alice Mann plays opposite the star, and the cast also includes Eric Maine, Henry Hallam, Marie Burke and others. The scenario was written by Raymond L. Schrock, who is a comedy specialist, and the picture was made under the direction of Edward Dillon.

ANCIENT CAIRO.

Twelve Thousand Died of Plague In One Day In 1492.

At the dawn of history a city is known to have existed near the site of modern Cairo called Khere-ohe, place of combat, because Horus and Seth, of mythological fame, fought there, says an exchange. Seth found the body of his brother Osiris cut into fourteen parts, and scattered the pieces; whereupon Isis, wife of Osiris, hunted the fragments so that she might erect a monument for each. That is why so many tombs of Osiris are encountered in Egyptian history, quest.

Not until a century before the Norman conquest, a modern period of Egyptian history, was the present Cairo founded by Gohar, leader of the troops of the Fatimite Caliph Muliz, following the Egyptian con-

In the year Columbus discovered America a plague swept Cairo which is said to have killed 12,000 citizens in a day. It was a century before that when Cairo may be said to have attained its zenith. After the plague a period of violence, rapine and murder set in, and Sultans were enthroned and assassinated with dizzying speed and informality. As early as the thirteenth century Christian persecutions took place. Since then the city has been Islam. Only eight years ago an excuse of the Grand Mufti for declining to approve execution of a murderer was that the crime was committed with a revolver, a weapon not mentioned in the Koran.

Napoleon's headquarters were at Cairo in 1798, following the Battle of the Pyramids. The commander Bonaparte left behind was murdered. In 1811 the French finally were dislodged and Cairo's independence was re-established.

TRIED TO KILL KAISER

STORY OF "THE SILENT HERO OF BELGIUM."

Plan to Cause Death of Wm. Hohenzollern Was Not Successful, and Alois Van Keirsbilk Paid the Penalty After Being Treated With Characteristic Cruelty by the Prussian Authorities.

If earnest yearning for the demise of the Kaiser could have killed him, the death of Mr. William Hohenzollern would probably have been celebrated somewhere about August 1, 1914. But while the prolonged entertainment of a consuming desire for somebody's passing hence may be effective in some cases for all we know, it hasn't bothered the ex-Kaiser, who is reported to be enjoying robust health and making preparations to remain at Amerongen until overtaken by extreme old age. There was at least one man, however, who wasn't satisfied merely with sitting around hating the former head of the Huns and hoping he would meet with a fatal accident. This was Alois Van Keirsbilk, a Belgian, who wanted to kill the Kaiser because he thought that by so doing the war would come to an end. It occurred to Alois that the best way to accomplish his purpose was to have an airman gently drop a bomb or two down on a building in Thielt, Alois' native town, when the All-Highest and his mighty staff were holding a big banquet there, as they had planned to do. Perhaps the scheme would have succeeded if circumstances had not intervened over which the man who conceived the idea had no control.

Thielt was the headquarters of the Fourth German Army and sheltered the commander-in-chief with a staff of hundreds of officers. Alois Van Keirsbilk was chief conductor on the railway between Thielt and Bruges. Also he was the chief of a secret organization which had only one object—"help to our boys and death to the enemy." The organization was in communication with the Belgian army through spies who made regular trips into Holland across the "cable of death," and many a German plan originated at headquarters in Thielt failed, thanks to the activity of Alois and his men.

It was not long before Alois saw his chance for a big stroke. The Kaiser was coming to Thielt on November 1. A desperate attack was to be made against the Belgian forces along the Yser and from there on against Ypres and Dunkirk, and Wilhelm II. in person was to inspect the preparations.

Kill the Kaiser and the war will be over was the firm conviction of Alois and his friends, and they set to work. Only one of the three messengers who were sent out reached the other side of the electric cable, but one was sufficient and when November 1 came Alois felt confident that something would happen.

The big dinner at which the Kaiser and his staff were to gather around the table was to begin at two o'clock. At that moment anxious eyes watched the sky toward the west. Would the airmen come with their bombs to do the deed that would finish the war? Would they be in time?

At 2.15 there was a speck in the blue sky. It grew bigger and bigger, and soon the watchers distinguished three flying-machines. In haste Alois communicated with his friends. Barely had those who were warned taken shelter when the first explosion was heard. Then for a few minutes the town of Thielt shuddered as bomb after bomb exploded. But it was all in vain. There had been a sudden change in the Kaiser's schedule and the war-lord had left Thielt at two o'clock sharp.

Thus ended the attempt planned by Alois Van Keirsbilk to do away with the Kaiser, but it marked the beginning of troubles for the unfortunate Belgian. The commander of the Fourth German Army raged and roared. Such things must not be permitted to go unpunished, and he set about discovering the guilty parties in a Teutonic and thorough manner.

A contra-spy system was organized at once and large sums were promised for any bit of information. Slowly but surely Alois was drawn into the net woven by a most minute and complete investigation. On February 2 he was summoned to the kommandatur and taken prisoner. Already three of his co-operators were there.

It was then that Alois Van Keirsbilk showed the courage which won for him the name of "The Silent Hero." His last word to his friends who were still free had been, "Do not let my absence or death scare you; but keep up the work that we have been doing." After his arrest nothing could induce him to speak even a word. He was condemned to death, and then the Germans created and applied as devilish a scheme of mental torture for a human being as could be devised. Alois had two children, and a third was to be born soon.

"On the day that new life enters your home your life will end unless you speak," said the German inquisitor. On April 5 a little girl was born in the Keirsbilk home.

His end came next morning at half-past five in the court of the prison. Four Belgians were to fall that day. When Van Keirsbilk arrived at the place of execution, three were already lying dead against the wall. For some unknown reason he was to face the muzzle of twelve Germans alone.

He refused to be blindfolded. "Let not a German hand touch me in this solemn moment when I die for my country. I have no fear of your bullets," the Belgians heard that he said, and erect he waited for the moment when his agony would come to an end. A few seconds later his body, with those of his comrades in death, was thrown into the ditch.

PASSING OF WILHELMSHAVEN.

"German Plymouth" Had Short and Inglorious History.

Wilhelmshaven, the German Plymouth, as enthusiastic Flottenverein members sometimes caressingly called it, is no more. At least it is emphatically and distinctively not what it used to be. Simultaneously with the news of the scuttling of German warships in Scapa Flow the German papers announced that the once proud base fortress of the Imperial German navy had been sold by the Government to a private syndicate. The latter has already started work on converting the piers, wharves, warehouses, etc., for the uses of mercantile shipping.

Thus closes the career of one of the most formidable naval strongholds in history. It is a sad end—for Germans at any rate—incongruous ending. The proud words with which Von Roon, the Minister of War of the [illegible] built port are well remembered in the fatherland. "And so I announce and proclaim, on the strength of the order of his majesty the King, that from this hour on this port and the city which is to rise around it shall be called Wilhelmshaven until the end of time."

This was exactly half a century ago, on June 17, 1869. How could Von Roon then know that the eternity to which he dedicated the new fortress would not last fifty year?

Like most of the institutions of the Hohenzollern empire, Wilhelmshaven was not the spontaneous result of a long organic development. It was simply made to order, like the statues of the Siegesalle or the books celebrating the silver jubilee of the Kaiser. The site of the harbor and city originally belonged to the Grand Duke of Oldenburg. From him it was purchased by Prussia in 1853, and the construction of the base began a year later. It was a desperate struggle against the sands of Friesland, against wind and sea and climate, and the German engineers had the right of priding themselves on their creation. The job was finished in 1870, but Wilhelmshaven's real boom originated in the late 90's with the unfolding of that navalistic propaganda which aimed at making Germany the first maritime power in the world and whose landmarks are Corone, the Falkland Island, Skagerrak, Scapa Flow—and Amerongen.

A Second Niagara.

What is thought to have been a second mighty cataract of Niagara has been discovered at Thorold by Doheny, Wuninian and Robertson, Limited, contractors on Section 2 of the new Welland ship canal. After excavating some twenty feet of solid clay near the upper end of this section the rock bed was found to be very smooth, and further down a series of steps in the rock have been found to be smooth on the edges also and well worn. The edge of the cataract so far uncovered begins at the eastern abutment of the new Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Bridge and runs in a southwesterly direction for a distance of about 400 feet. This, being the end of the excavating, does not permit further exploration. The first fall is in the form of steps for a distance of 90 feet, with a total drop of 25 feet. The depth of the next fall cannot be determined as yet, but the excavating shows what is likely a perpendicular fall for an unknown distance. The eastern abutment has been built on the edge of the steps a depth of 15 feet, while the centre abutment, just 75 feet away, went to a depth of 75 feet before striking rock, which was found to be in a sloping position. The discovery is about half a mile back from the Niagara escarpment, and is believed to have worn back as the Niagara did from Queenston. Below the escarpment, and now absorbed in the new waterway, was a deep valley known as the Eight Mile Creek, and running in an irregular direction to Lake Ontario. This may have been the outlet for the big waterfall. Altogether it gives the appearance of an immense river which connected Lake Erie and Lake Ontario some thousands of years ago, the exact age of which is unknown, but histories and geographies speak of only one, the Niagara.

Women War Workers.

During the war the number of women employed in the British postal service doubled in numbers, and in other branches of the civil service they advanced from 5,500 to 107,500, an increase of 1,950 per cent. In the tramway service the increase mounted to over 1,500 per cent., while the jump in the number employed in finance and banking advanced 697 per cent.

VILLAGES ON OCEAN BOTTOM.

Holland to Drain Zuyder Zee in Great Reclamation Project.

Holland has decided to drain the Zuyder Zee, and in the next thirty years four score of Dutch villages will be built upon what is now the bottom of the ocean, according to Hendrik Willem Van Loon, a Dutch scholar and historian who writes of the gigantic reclamation project in the Century. The work will require thirty years, but at the end of that time, Holland is assured of 400,000 acres of the richest kind of new agricultural land.

"Holland has made ready to join the ranks of the annexationists," says H. W. Van Loon. "It desires additional territory; it need more fertile soil. It is shortly going to conquer new domains at the expense of the unsuspecting herring and the slippery eel. The old Zuyder Zee is going to be drained, and within thirty years four score hundred thousand acres of new and valuable land will have been added to the Dutch Kingdom. They will prevent a repetition of that wholesale starvation which followed the outbreak of the Great War and the embargo of the smaller nations of neutral Europe.

"The Zuyder Zee has been a good little sea as such salty phenomena go. At times it has drowned a number of villages and their inhabitants and has killed thousands of cows and sheep without a ripple of excitement. More often it has put on a thick coat of ice to give a whole nation a cheerful skating holiday. After a very prolonged and extremely careful investigation the Netherlands Parliament passed a law authorizing the draining of this useless stretch of water. As fishermen they could no longer make a living; as farmers they have a great future before them.

"The task of this inverted wrecking crew will not be easy. But the inhabitant of the dry land has now a new and powerful ally in the modern electric pump. This handy contrivance which can be placed upon any dike, within a very few days can handle more than one thousand cubic feet of water per minute. The old windmill which kept Holland dry for the last six centuries never could lift more than ten cubic feet during the same period of time. The picturesque mill will soon be ready for the museum of mechanical curiosities. This is very sad for the amateur painter of water-colors, but very agreeable for the farmer, who will be less exposed to sudden inundation.

"Provided with his new motors, the engineer will first of all build a gigantic dike that will connect the eastern part of the province of Holland with the western coast of Friesland. Leaving the Dutch coast, this dam will run straight to Wieringen, the island of recent, if doubtful, fame. Past the temporary abode of the former crown prince it will then stretch out toward the opposite shore until the coast of Friesland is reached. This dike will be 48 kilometers long, and it will cost about a million guilders per kilometer. It will provide a new and direct road between the northern part of the country and the capital, and it will shorten the journey from Amsterdam to Leeuwarden, the Frisian capital, from 208 to 150 kilometers.

"After 33 years of constant work, if all goes well, more than 400,000 acres of fertile clay will have been annexed, and a new rural population will be occupying four score villages built upon the bottom of the ocean. A new population, living from six to ten feet below the surface of the ocean, will be engaged in agricultural pursuits. The fishermen of Edam and Monnikendam and Marken and Wieringen and Urkwill will have moved to a new and greatly superior habitat, and the next world war will find Holland a self-supporting unit."

Queer In a Way.

"There are some queer ways about building operations." "How do you mean?" "When a man wants to expand his building for business reasons, he calls in a contractor."

TRIS SPEAKER STAR CENTRE FIELDER IS ON A HUNTING TRIP TO PETERBORO

With Two Other Fishing and Hunting Cronies is in the City The Guests of Chris Graham at the Empress.

Tris Speaker, famous centre fielder and manager of the Cleveland Baseball Club is visiting for a week or ten days in Peterborough.

"Spoke," as he is known to millions of all fans in the States and Canada, has with him his two fishing and hunting cronies, Leslie Nunamaker catcher of the Cleveland Club, and for a number of years a teammate of his, and Morris Ackerman, editor of Ackerman's Sportsmen's Guide, and fish and game writer for hundreds of newspapers in the States.

The boys are in Peterborough on invitation of Chris. Graham, of the Empress Hotel, the invitation being extended to Ackerman last spring when he came through here doing publicity work for the Canadian Pacific.

Morris, as spokesman for the party, put the following to say to a reporter:

"Last spring I covered some six thousand miles in the province of Ontario writing fish and game publicity for the C. P. R.. On the whole trip the livest man I met was Chris. Graham, the livest town Peterborough and the best looking fish and small-game country was the immediate vicinity.

"I promised Chris. to bring Spoke up here after the world's series and up to now he is the one happy man of the party. Speaker, in my opinion, is the best liked man in baseball, he is one of the brightest stars in the game and will make one of its greatest managers. Fishing and hunting is his one hobby. For several years he and Les. have hunted in New Brunswick, but after telling him of the wonders of Ontario for fishing and hunting he comes to see with his own eyes."

From here the party will journey to the north shore of Lake Superior where they will put in fifteen days after moose and caribou. Mr. Speaker will return to Cleveland to attend the wedding of Ray Chapman, October 29, joining Les. and Morris in Toronto the following day.

Peterborough is glad to have these three boys as visitors and all wish them the best of luck.

BRIDGEBURG HOPES RACING RESTORED

FRONTIER PEOPLE CLAIM NO ROUGH ELEMENT ON FORT ERIE TRACK

Bridgeburg, Oct. 19.—Residents of the frontier are watching with considerable interest the investigation being conducted into general racing affairs by the special government investigator, Dr. Rutherford, in view of the fact that the Fort Erie race track here has been the scene of some of the biggest race meets in Canada.

John H. Madigan, the president of the Niagara Racing Association, which maintains the Fort Erie track, is making a hard fight to retain the racing game here, but of course the fate of the local track will depend upon the government's action in respect to tracks in general.

The Bertie Agricultural Association, representing leading Bertie township farmers, has forwarded a memorial to Dr. Rutherford, showing that the Fort Erie race track for the last dozen years has been conspicuous by the absence of the so-called rough element here, and pointing to the fact that the $200,000 plant is allowed free to the farmers for fairs etc.

There is no doubt but that the border is in favor of racing as it used to be before the meets were limited, for a rich harvest was reaped by business men from the hundreds of followers of the sport of kings.

SOCCER GAME GOES TO QUEEN'S BY DEFAULT

McGILL TEAM DID NOT PUT IN AN APPEARANCE ON SATURDAY.

Kingston, Oct. 18.—McGill did not bring along a soccer team to play with Queen's today, so Queen's wins the game by default. Dr. Lamb of McGill, in charge of the physical education at this college, accompanied the football team for the purpose of making an inspection of Queen's gym and secure pointers on physical education. McGill is going to build a new gym 80 by 120 feet, twice as large as the gym at Queen's.

BUFFALO SPORTS PRAISE SCHOELL

WALTER C. KELLY NOW ACCLAIMS HIM A SECOND KID McKOY

Toronto, Oct. 20.—Over in Buffalo the experts think pretty well of this Schoell person, no less an authority than Walter C. Kelly acclaiming him as a "second Kid McCoy," while Horace Lorch, sporting editor of The Express, says that he is the classiest lightweight produced in New York State since Frank Erne's time. Schoell, who boxes Frankie Bull at the 48th Highlanders' show next Friday night in the armories, has rushed to the front with leaps and bounds in the last two months. His rise has been remarkable. From a mediocre performer, a pronounced second rater, he has developed into a real first rater, and it is predicted that if he keeps on improving he will be champion lightweight of the country inside of a year. He has beaten Jake Schiffer, Eddie May, Art Simmer, Cal Delaney and our own Frankie Bull in turn, all over the ten round route. His services are in demand all over the States, and Matchmaker Alf Palmer of the Highlanders was lucky indeed to secure him for the main bout at his coming show. Bull, for all that he took a beating at Schoell's hands at Buffalo recently and despite his undoubted prowess, is not prepared to admit that the former is his master. The local champion says that he was off-color in this bout and that he will surely turn the tables upon the Bison City titleholder on this occasion. If hard training will do the trick the Toronto Frankie will have a surprise for Buffalo Frankie on next Friday night. Each boy now has a win over the other, and next week's whirl will be the rubber. The show up and town promises to be a clinker. Scotty Lisner and Chip Davis, who boxed 8 rounds to a draw at Massey Hall two weeks ago, come together again over the same route in the semi-final, while Fred Crompton of Toronto meets Conlin of Buffalo; Gold and Wilshire, both of Toronto; Westerbee and Norman Lang, and Sergt. Jim Stockley and Sergt. Jim Shaw, all go six rounds. The last pair, who are heavyweights, are boxing for the championship of the regiment. Shaw won the championship at Witley Camp last year. Stockley was former champion of the army. The Military A.A. No. 2, under whose auspices the show is being held, is making preparations for a big night, and as popular prices will prevail the armories should be packed. Both the regimental bands, pipe and brass, will be on hand, and boxing fans are in for a great treat.

COLF NOW A GAME FOR ONE AND ALL

CHARACTERIZED AT ONE TIME AS NOTHING BUT OLD MEN'S SPORT

CHAMPION HERRON IS ONLY 23

BOBBY JONES IS DOUBLE A MERE YOUTH OF SEVEN TEEN YEARS

New York, Oct. 20.—Considering recent national performances in the respective pastimes of lawn tennis and of golf, the question seems trite: "Is golf really an old man's game?" as it is still dubbed by those who beg to be excused from playing it "until we get too old for tennis and other games."

Norman E. Brookes, sharing the national honors in doubles in tennis, is 42 years of age. Dave Herron, winner of the national amateur title, and Bobby Jones, runner up in that tournament, the two who might be considered the champion "doubles" in golf, have a combined age of 39 years, that is, 17 for Jones and 22 for Herron.

Quick calculation can really figure that out, namely, that the accumulated years of the golf "doubles" are less than the age of a single member of the tennis "doubles."

When John Black, California open champion, and Adelard Espinoza, his pal, made such a poor showing in the national open championship tournament at Brae Burn early in June, there was a great deal of newspaper comment, both in the east and the west. The tentative explanation for their failure to get anywhere in the money was that the texture of the grass on California courses is not much resemblance on the greens. One eastern publication had the following notes:

"When on the coast low scores are just like breaking sticks for the pair. It might be added that this line of logic should work both ways, though it does not seem to, for stars from the Atlantic seaboard frequently go to the coast and play brilliantly."

In response, a western newspaper takes up the cudgels in defense of Black and Espinoza, as follows:

"This eastern critic just hates himself and his crowd. Unfortunately he didn't read the alibis of Black and Espinoza or he would have discovered that each of them lost about fifteen pounds on that eastern trip, and their nerves were exposed and raw when they played in the open championship after having taken several weeks of preliminary work with a hope of acclimating themselves.

"It was not the turf or the greens; it was the beastly climate they have back east. On the other hand, it is the fine climate of the coast that makes those easterners play over their heads when they come out here. Maybe the critic hasn't thought of that."

ARGONAUTS WON FROM MONTREAL

KEENLY CONTESTED RUGBY BEFORE THOUSANDS OF SPECTATORS AT MONTREAL

M. A. A. A. Grounds, Montreal, Oct. 18.—Montreal and Argonauts clashed here this afternoon in their all-important inter-provincial rugby fixture before the largest crowd that has witnessed Big Four rugby in Montreal for many years. Long before the game was scheduled to start the main stand and reserved seats were filled, while the open spaces on the far side of the gridiron were replete with parked automobiles.

Backed by the strongest team by which it has been represented in many years, Winged Wheel football enthusiasts was at high pitch. The fact that each team must win in order to remain in the running, assures a hard-fought game with Montreal as slight favorites.

Argos presented a crippled line-up after their gruelling contest in Ottawa last week, but McEvenne had a likely looking team in uniform. Laddie Cassels was switched to flying wing, Burkhart taking middle, while the doughty Frank Wright went on the outside. Hughes, of M. A. A. A., decided not to start Brophy or Findlay. The halves were as in other M.A.A.A. fixtures and Sharpe replaced Corbett at outside wing for Montreal. Otherwise the Winged Wheel team was similar to that which defeated Tigers last week.

The Argos won by a score of 4 to 3.

AUDACIOUS MAY CUT A BIG FIGURE

HORSEMEN OF OPINION THAT HE WILL BE STAR OF TURF

New York, Oct. 18.—He may not be a Purchase or a Sir Barton, and he may not develop into a Lucillite, but Audacious, the three-year-old son of Star Shoot and Bold Girl, owned by M. L. Schwartz, is more than a useful race-horse just now, and next season is likely to cut a big figure in the races of the handicap division. Such was the unanimous opinion of horsemen qualified to judge who saw the colt win the Montague handicap at Jamaica from the speedy Toto and the historic Travis stake winner, Hannibal. Although only off the train after a trip from Baltimore, Audacious went out and just played with his field, winning under a pull in the fast time of 1 min. 12 2-5 secs. for six furlongs. He shouldered 127 pounds, too, and didn't seem to be extended at any stage of the sprinting trip. He allowed Toto, on which there was a hot tip, to go out and open up a big gap for him. Buxton never made a move on the good Schwartz colt until well into the stretch, and then, letting out a wrap, breezed by Toto to win with the rider having an armful left.

Early in the year Audacious was regarded as a good sprinter among the selling platers. He was thought to be faint-hearted, too, but under Trainer Johnny Hasting's good handling has developed into a real race runner under any and all conditions.

VICTORIAN ERA WORTH WHILE

Deserved Rebuke for Those Who Smile at Epoch Which Had Many Good Points.

Why do the heathen rage against the Victorian epoch? Men who lived through a great part of it found it exciting, interesting, amusing and sometimes terrible. Talleyrand once said that nobody could understand the real delights of society unless he had lived before the French revolution. Similarly, what young person, or near-young person, of today can experience the delights of the time when it was possible to begin at ease the first chapter of a volume of Dickens or Thackeray, to wait impatiently for George Eliot's new novel or even to bear the shock of Robert Buchanan's famous review of Swinburne? There were, too, the terrors occasioned by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe when her fierce Puritan friendship induced her to print the confidences of Lady Byron! Our eyes were turned towards England, it is true, yet Hawthorne and Emerson were not only discussed, but read. Among the lesser lights there were Gail Hamilton and James Fields, whose very satisfying literary essays were great features of the Atlantic Monthly. People really did not spend their time in singing "Juanita" or in reading "Ouida" on the sly, nor did all the women dress in the magentas and solferinos in which contemporary satirists clothed the ladies of the middle periods of Victoria and Eugenie. The Crimean and Civil wars, so microscopic to the careless young, the Franco-Prussian struggle which preluded the chaos of 1914, were events that kept our minds from stagnating; and there were doers and thinkers in Europe worth our constant consideration.—Maurice Francis Egan in Yale Review.

FORGOT PROMISE TO CLIENT

Eminent Lawyer Talked Altogether Too Freely Over His Whisky and Soda at the Club.

Sir Thomas Lipton spoke in a Y. M. C. A. address in New York about honor among business men.

"Too many business men," he said, "fail from honor thoughtlessly. They are like an eminent divorce lawyer whom I overheard one night prattling over his whisky and soda at the club.

"'Yes,' said the eminent lawyer, 'she's a very beautiful woman. Nervous, of course—of course very nervous just now. So I said to her gently, as soon as I'd sent my secretary out of the room: "Now, my dear lady, I know in these cases there are many little details which a woman of your position and refinement is most reluctant to divulge. But it is necessary, if our case is to succeed, that I be fully acquainted with all you have had to suffer. Of course you will understand that what you tell me will never go beyond the four walls of this room. I shall regard your confidence as absolutely sacred, and you need have no hesitation in revealing all, for you may be sure that no other human being will ever learn from me the details of your troubles." Well, that gave her more confidence, of course, and, gentlemen, this is what she told me.'"

With Two Other Fishing and Hunting Cronies is in the City The Guests of Chris Graham at the Empress.

Tris Speaker, famous centre fielder and manager of the Cleveland Baseball Club is visiting for a week or ten days in Peterborough.

"Spoke," as he is known to millions of all fans in the States and Canada, has with him his two fishing and hunting cronies, Leslie Nunamaker catcher of the Cleveland Club, and for a number of years a teammate of his, and Morris Ackerman, editor of Ackerman's Sportsmen's Guide, and fish and game writer for hundreds of newspapers in the States.

The boys are in Peterborough on invitation of Chris. Graham, of the Empress Hotel, the invitation being extended to Ackerman last spring when he came through here doing publicity work for the Canadian Pacific.

Morris as spokesman for the party [illegible] to a reporter:

"Last spring I covered some six thousand miles in the province of Ontario writing fish and game publicity for the C. P. R.. On the whole trip the livest man I met was Chris. Graham, the livest town Peterborough and the best looking fish and small-game country was the immediate vicinity.

"I promised Chris. to bring Spoke up here after the world's series and up to now he is the one happy man of the party. Speaker, in my opinion, is the best liked man in baseball, he is one of the brightest stars in the game and will make one of its greatest managers. Fishing and hunting is his one hobby. For several years he and Les. have hunted in New Brunskick, but after telling him of the wonders of Ontario for fishing and hunting he comes to see with his own eyes."

From here the party will journey to the north shore of Lake Superior where they will put in fifteen days after moose and caribou. Mr. Speaker will return to Cleveland to attend the wedding of Ray Chapman, October 29, joining Les. and Morris in Toronto the following day.

Peterborough is glad to have these three boys as visitors and all wish them the best of luck.

BRIDGEBURG HOPES RACING RESTORED

Bridgeburg, Oct. 19.—Residents of the frontier are watching with considerable interest the investigation being conducted into general racing affairs by the special government investigator, Dr. Rutherford, in view of the fact that the Fort Erie race track here has been the scene of some of the biggest race meets in Canada.

John H. Madigan, the president of the Niagara Racing Association, which maintains the Fort Erie track, is making a hard fight to retain the racing game here, but of course the fate of the local track will depend upon the government's action in respect to tracks in general.

The Bertie Agricultural Association, representing leading Bertie township farmers, has forwarded a memorial to Dr. Rutherford, showing that the Fort Erie race track for the last dozen years has been conspicuous by the absence of the so-called rough element here, and pointing to the fact that the $200,000 plant is allowed free to the farmers for fairs etc.

There is no doubt but that the border is in favor of racing as it used to be before the meets were limited, for a rich harvest was reaped by business men from the hundreds of followers of the sport of kings.

SOCCER GAME GOES TO QUEEN'S BY DEFAULT

McGILL TEAM DID NOT PUT IN AN APPEARANCE ON SATURDAY.

Kingston, Oct. 18.—McGill did not bring along a soccer team to play with Queen's today, so Queen's wins the game by default. Dr. Lamb of McGill, in charge of the physical education at this college, accompanied the football team for the purpose of making an inspection of Queen's gym and secure pointers on physical education. McGill is going to build a new gym 86 by 120 feet, twice as large as the gym at Queen's.

BUFFALO SPORTS PRAISE SCHOELL

WALTER C. KELLY NOW ACCLAIMS HIM A SECOND KID McKOY

Toronto, Oct. 20.—Over in Buffalo the experts think pretty well of this Schoell person, no less an authority than Walter C. Kelly acclaiming him as a "second Kid McCoy," while Horace Lerch, sporting editor of The Express, says that he is the classiest lightweight produced in New York State since Frank Erne's time. Schoell, who boxes Frankie Bull at the 48th Highlanders' show next Friday night in the armories, has rushed to the front with leaps and bounds in the last two months. His rise has been remarkable. From a mediocre performer, a pronounced second rater, he has developed into a real first rater, and it is predicted that if he keeps on improving he will be champion lightweight of the country inside of a year. He has beaten Jake Schiffer, Eddie May, Art Simler, Cal Delaney and our own Frankie Bull in turn, all over the ten round route. His services are in demand all over the States, and Matchmaker Alf Palmer of the Highlanders was lucky indeed to secure him for the main bout at his coming show. Bull, for all that he took a beating at Schoell's hands at Buffalo recently and despite his undoubted prowess, is not prepared to admit that the former is his master. The local champion says that he was off-color in this bout and that he will surely turn the tables upon the Bison City titleholder on this occasion. If hard training will do the trick the Toronto Frankie will have a surprise for Buffalo Frankie on next Friday night. Each boy now has a win over the other, and next week's whirl will be the rubber. The show up and down promises to be a clinker. Scotty Lisner and Chip Davis, who boxed 8 rounds to a draw at Massey Hall two weeks ago, come together again over the same route in the semi-final, while Fred Crompton of Toronto meets Conlin of Buffalo; Gold and Wilshire, both of Toronto; Westerbee and Norman Lang, and Sergt. Jim Stockley and Sergt. Jim Shaw, all go six rounds. The last pair, who are heavyweights, are boxing for the championship of the regiment. Shaw won the championship at Witley Camp last year. Stockley was former champion of the army. The Military A.A. No. 2, under whose auspices the show is being held, is making preparations for a big night, and as popular prices will prevail the armories should be packed. Both the regimental bands, pipe and brass, will be on hand, and boxing fans are in for a great treat.

COLF NOW A GAME FOR ONE AND ALL

CHARACTERIZED AT ONE TIME AS NOTHING BUT OLD MEN'S SPORT

CHAMPION HERRON IS ONLY 23

BOBBY JONES IS DOUBLE A MERE YOUTH OF SEVEN TEEN YEARS

New York, Oct. 20.—Considering recent national performances in the respective pastimes of lawn tennis and of golf, the question seems trite: "Is golf really an old man's game?" as it is still dubbed by those who beg to be excused from playing it "until we get too old for tennis and other games."

Norman E. Brookes, sharing the national honors in doubles in tennis, is 42 years of age. Dave Herron, winner of the national amateur title, and Bobby Jones, runner up in that tournament, the two who might be considered the champion "doubles" in golf, have a combined age of 39 [illegible] 17 for Jones and 22 for Herron.

Quick calculation can really figure that out, namely, that the accumulated years of the golf "doubles" are less than the age of a single member of the tennis "doubles."

When John Black, California open champion, and Adelard Espinoza, his pal, made such a poor showing in the national open championship tournament at Brae Burn early in June, there was a great deal of newspaper comment, both in the east and the west. The tentative explanation for their failure to get anywhere in the money was that the texture of the grass on California courses is not much resemblance on the greens. One eastern publication had the following notes:

"When on the coast low scores are just like breaking sticks for the pair. It might be added that this line of logic should work both ways, though it does not seem to, for stars from the Atlantic seaboard frequently go to the coast and play brilliantly."

In response, a western newspaper takes up the cudgels in defense of Black and Espinoza, as follows:

"This eastern critic just hates himself and his crowd. Unfortunately he didn't read the alibis of Black and Espinoza or he would have discovered that each of them lost about fifteen pounds on that eastern trip, and their nerves were exposed and raw when they played in the open championship after having taken several weeks of preliminary work with a hope of acclimating themselves.

"It was not the turf or the greens; it was the beastly climate they have back east. On the other hand, it is the fine climate of the coast that makes those easterners play over their heads when they come out here. Maybe the critic hasn't thought of that."

ARGONAUTS WON FROM MONTREAL

M. A. A. A. Grounds, Montreal, Oct. 18.—Montreal and Argonauts clashed here this afternoon in their all-important inter-provincial rugby fixture before the largest crowd that has witnessed Big Four rugby in Montreal for many years. Long before the game was scheduled to start the main stand and reserved seats were filled, while the open spaces on the far side of the gridiron were replete with parked automobiles.

Backed by the strongest team by which it has been represented in many years, Winged Wheel football enthusiasts was at high pitch. The fact that each team must win in order to remain in the running, assures a hard-fought game with Montreal as slight favorites.

Argos presented a crippled line-up after their gruelling contest in Ottawa last week, but McEvenne had a likely looking team in uniform. Laddie Cassels was switched to flying wing, Burkhart taking middle, while the doughty Frank Wright went on the outside. Hughes, of M. A. A. A., decided not to start Brophy or Findlay. The halves were as in other M.A.A.A. fixtures and Sharpe replaced Corbett at outside wing for Montreal. Otherwise the Winged Wheel team was similar to that which defeated Tigers last week.

The Argos won by a score of 4 to 3.

AUDACIOUS MAY CUT A BIG FIGURE

HORSEMEN OF OPINION THAT HE WILL BE STAR OF TURF

New York, Oct. 18.—He may not be a Purchase or a Sir Barton, and he may not develop into a Lucille, but Audacious, the three-year-old son of Star Shoot and Bold Girl, owned by M. L. Schwartz, is more than a useful race-horse just now, and next season is likely to cut a big figure in the races of the handicap division. Such was the unanimous opinion of horsemen qualified to judge who saw the colt win the Montague handicap at Jamaica from the speedy Toto and the historic Travis stake winner, Hannibal. Although only off the train after a trip from Baltimore, Audacious went out and just played with his field, winning under a pull in the fast time of 1 min. 12 2-5 secs. for six furlongs. He shouldered 127 pounds, too, and didn't seem to be extended at any stage of the sprinting trip. He allowed Toto, on which there was a hot tip, to go out and [illegible] never made a move on the good Schwarts colt until well into the stretch, and then, letting out a wrap, breezed by Toto to win with the rider having an armful left.

Early in the year Audacious was regarded as a good sprinter among the selling platers. He was thought to be faint-hearted, too, but under Trainer Johnny Hasting's good handling has developed into a real race runner under any and all conditions.

VICTORIAN ERA WORTH WHILE

Deserved Rebuke for Those Who Smile at Epoch Which Had Many Good Points.

Why do the heathen rage against the Victorian epoch? Men who lived through a great part of it found it exciting, interesting, amusing and sometimes terrible. Talleyrand once said that nobody could understand the real delights of society unless he had lived before the French revolution. Similarly, what young person, or near-young person, of today can experience the delights of the time when it was possible to begin at ease the first chapter of a volume of Dickens or Thackeray, to wait impatiently for George Eliot's new novel or even to bear the shock of Robert Buchanan's famous review of Swinburne? There were, too, the terrors occasioned by Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe when her fierce Puritan friendship induced her to print the confidences of Lady Byron! Our eyes were turned towards England, it is true, yet Hawthorne and Emerson were not only discussed, but read. Among the lesser lights there were Gail Hamilton and James Fields, whose very satisfying literary essays were great features of the Atlantic Monthly. People really did not spend their time in singing "Juanita" or in reading "Ouida" on the sly, nor did all the women dress in the magentas and solferinos to match contemporary politics; clothed the ladies of the middle periods of Victoria and Eugenie. The Crimean and Civil wars, so microscopic to the careless young, the Franco-Prussian struggle which preluded the chaos of 1914, were events that kept our minds from stagnating; and there were doers and thinkers in Europe worth our constant consideration.—Maurice Francis Egan in Yale Review.

FORGOT PROMISE TO CLIENT

Eminent Lawyer Talked Altogether Too Freely Over His Whisky and Soda at the Club.

Sir Thomas Lipton spoke in a Y. M. C. A. address in New York about honor among business men.

"Too many business men," he said, "fall from honor thoughtlessly. They are like an eminent divorce lawyer whom I overheard one night prattling over his whisky and soda at the club.

"'Yes,' said the eminent lawyer, 'she's a very beautiful woman. Nervous, of course—of course very nervous just now. So I said to her gently, as soon as I'd sent my secretary out of the room: "Now, my dear lady, I know in these cases there are many little details which a woman of your position and refinement is most reluctant to divulge. But it is necessary, if our case is to succeed, that I be fully acquainted with all you have had to suffer. Of course you will understand that what you tell me will never go beyond the four walls of this room. I shall regard your confidence as absolutely sacred, and you need have no hesitation in revealing all, for you may be sure that no other human being will ever learn from me the details of your troubles." Well, that gave her more confidence, of course, and, gentlemen, this is what she told me.'"

Intentions Count for Little.

To be always intending to live a new life, but never to find time to set about it, is as if a man should put off eating and drinking and sleeping from one day and night to another, till he is starved and destroyed.—Tillotson.

Swiftest Dog.

The Claim of Runymede.

Every now and again, it is given to some man somewhere to utter a "heaven-sent phrase," which brings with it instant and almost startling illumination on a question, where long columns of explanation and long moments of eloquence might utterly fail. Such a phrase came from Josephus Daniels, the secretary of the United States navy, the other day, in the course of one of his speeches in England. "No Englishman," declared Mr. Daniels, "has more claim to Runymede than I."—Christian Science Monitor.

"30' FOR NEWSPAPERMAN

W. J. Douglas, General Manager of Mail and Empire, died Yesterday.

Toronto, Oct. 20.—One of Canada's outstanding newspaper men passed away Sunday, with the death of Mr. William J. Douglas, General Manager of The Toronto Mail and Empire. He died at his residence, 62 St. Alban's street. For 42 years the late Mr. Douglas had been associated with his paper, and in those years played a very important part in the development of Canadian journalism. He had reached his 73rd year, and although suffering ill-health for some time past, it was not until ten days ago that he was obliged to cease his business activities.

In 1877 Mr. Douglas came to Toronto from Milwaukee at the behest of the late Mr. John Riordan, who had purchased The Mail in that year, and at once took an active part in the development of the Toronto daily. Until the amalgamation of The Mail and The Empire, which took place in 1895, Mr. Douglas remained in charge of the business end of the paper. Shortly after the amalgamation, the death occurred of Managing Director C. W. Bunting, and Mr. Douglas became General Manager, which position he held up to the time of his death.

INSINUATIOS WERE ABSOLUTELY FALSE

MISS CONSTANCE BOULTON DEALS WITH ANONYMOUS LETTER IN EXAMINER

In her address before a large audience—women holding the majority—in Victoria Hall, Saturday night, Miss Constance Boulton, branded as false the insinuations made in an anonymous letter, which appeared in The Examiner Saturday. The eloquent address delivered by Miss Boulton left no doubt as to her sympathy with the temperance cause.

Mrs. Jas. Kendry, president of the referendum committee of women workers, in a brief but effective address, apologized to Miss Boulton for the scurrilous letter and declared that no one believed that a woman ever wrote such a communication. Mrs. Kendry testified, from her personal knowledge, to Miss Boulton's active interest in the cause. She stated, too, that while the committee, over which she presides, was organized on non-partism lines, the members could not vote otherwise than for the premier who gave Ontario its first prohibitory enactment.

Mr. Soden, the candidate, also addressed the electors., Dr. Morrison presided.

MURDERED MAN ONCE LIVED IN PETERBORO

W. J De FORGE LEFT HERE FOR WEST TWELVE YEARS AGO

W. J De Forge, the merchant who was shot to death in Winnipeg late Friday night, was a former resident of this city, where his brother, Mr. T. De Forge, of 535 Patterson street, still resides. The deceased left Peterborough for the West twelve years ago, being at that time twenty years old. He was a telegraph operator for some years. During the war he was on the Military Intelligence Corps and after the signing of peace opened a confectionery store in Winnipeg. He leaves a wife and one son, three years old.

It is believe that Mr. De Forge was murdered by bandits for the money he was known to be in the habit of carrying from the store to his residence every night, and that his murderers were frightened off before they could secure th $200 which was found in the dead man's pocket. There has been an epidemic of highway and other robberies in Winnipeg recently.

Both parents of the deceased are dead, his father having been killed in an industrial accident at Port Arthur about two years ago.

May Have Been Revenge.

A late Canadian Press despatch says that further evidence has come to light in support of the view that Sgt. De Forge was done to death by someone who "had it in for him" because of his work in the rounding up of aliens during the war period.

This is in form of a letter received by George Foss, late sub-inspector in the Dominion Police Force, who had been engaged in similar operations to De Forge, whom he knew. Foss was himself responsible for the deportation of some aliens engaged in enemy propaganda.

The letter reads:

"Remember De Forge. Mariand street. You're next for the box, you know."

Messenger a Small Boy.

The letter, which was badly written and badly spelled, as if by a person having a poor education, was delivered at Foss' residence on Saturday evening before dusk by a small boy. It was taken at the door by his sister. Foss, as soon as he had read it, ran out but the boy had disappeared.

RESTORING THE DEAD TO LIFE

Woman Doctor at Bombay Claims to Have Successful Method.

London, Oct. 20.—Discovery of a method to restore life to the dead is the remarkable claim made by a Burmese woman doctor, according to a Central News despatch from Bombay. The treatments last for seven days, with applications of remedies both internally and externally. The doctor claims that the patient comes to life with a new mind and better features than possessed before death. The Rangoon Times suggests that physicians take up the claim seriously and make tests.

TARIFF QUESTION NEXT SESSION

Sir Henry Drayton Will Take Up Work of Revision Soon.

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—With the Victory Loan campaign to be carried on and the change of Ministers in the Finance Department, is was thought by a committee of Cabinet Ministers, looking to a general revision of the tariff, would have to be postponed until 1921. It is now stated that Sir Henry Drayton will take up the work as soon as the success of the Victory Loan is assured, and it is hoped that a Tariff Act may be prepared before the end of the next season. Next session's chiefb topics thus are likely to be tariff, trade and labor.

MISS NELLIE TURNER

Miss Nellie Turner, Campbellford who has been some years in missionary work in South America, addressed the W.M.S. in the Methodist Church, Thursday afternoon, on her work, and a large public meeting in the evening on the referendum. Miss Turner is a very clever, interesting and convincing speaker, and her address was well received and heartily endorsed by all present. Hope to hear her soon again.—Bowmanville Statesman.

Miss Turner will speak in Trinity Church on Tuesday evening, October 21st. Don't fail to hear here. Her address will be of interest to the young people as well as to the older ones. Members of the League, Mission Circle and Band are specially invited. Everyone welcome.

WOMEN FLOCK

scrutineers will not be present.

As there was so large a number of new voters, some confusion was to be expected. Many of the women were at a loss to know where they were expected to vote. However, this was a matter easily disposed of as workers on all sides were busy. It is possible, however, that many electors who delay going to the polls to the last possible minute will be unable to vote, as there is certain to be a rush just before the closing hour.

The employes of the larger manufacturing plants of the city availed themselves of the hour allowed them by law for recording their votes, and between the hours of 12 and 2 the various booths were crowded by workingmen.

The interest taken by the women in the election and the large vote being polled by the new electors is taken as an augury for the endorsation of the Ontario Temperance Act by a large majority.

Watch The Review screen tonight for prompt reports of election returns from all over the Province.

PUPILS PRESENTED WITH ART PRIZES

NAMES OF THOSE WHO RECEIVED MEDALS AND HONOURABLE MENTION

On Friday afternoon, October 17 at 4.30 o'clock, in the Women's Art Association studio, an interesting event took place, viz., the presentation of medals and prizes to those pupils of the Public Schools who had been successful in the art competition arranged under the auspices of the Women's Art Association.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Sherwood, the immediate past president, Mrs. Vincent Eastwood, presided. After cordially welcoming the parents and pupils, Mrs. Eastwood made the presentations, warmly congratulating the winners on their success.

Mr A. Mowat, B.A., Public School inspector, then expressed to the members of the Art Association, his appreciation of their interest and generosity in having arranged this competition and stated that it had proved a great stimulus in the art work of the pupils.

The following were the prize winners:

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance.
As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495 00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

T. TOOMS ELECTED FOR LEGISLATURE WITH SUBSTANTIAL PLURALITY 1154

Labor Candidate Piles up Vote of 47981 in West Peterboro Gillespie Secured 3644 Votes and Soden 2595—New Member Acclaimed by Supporters.

Thomas Tooms, Labor candidate, won a substantial plurality over his two opponents — R. J. Soden and G. A. Gillespie —in West Peterborough election for the Provincial Legislature yesterday. His plurality over G. A. Gillespie, next in the running, is 1,154, and Mr. Gillespie's plurality over Mr. Soden 10,49.

So far as can be ascertained at present the polling stands: Tooms, 4,798; Gillespie, 3,644; Soden, 2,595, with eleven divisions to hear from.

Tooms Acclaimed.

A monster procession of Mr. Tooms' workers and supporters paraded the streets, and the [illegible] claimed to the skies again and again. Mr. Tooms addressed the crowd outside The Review office and pledged himself to strictly adhere to the Labor platform and support and advocate legislation in the best interests of the riding he will have the honor to represent, and of the Province in general.

The Review's screen returns service was taken advantage of by thousands of citizens anxious to learn both the West Riding and Provincial results at the earliest possible moment.

While the vote polled was large, as a result of the women's franchise, it only represents about sixty per cent. of the pos-

ALL QUESTIONS ON REFERENDUM ARE GIVEN HEAVY DRY MAJORITY

Even Toronto Decides for Prohibition and Rejects the Proposed Amendment to Establish Government Shops and Restore the Sale of Distilled Liquors—Returns From Province Not all in.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 21.—As full and partial returns from various outlying constituencies in the voting on the referendum were received here today it became evident that the majority for the prohibitionists was rolling up heavily. The summary for the entire province as compiled on the results received up till 1.30 p.m. indicated the following totals and majorities for the "no's":

1.—Yes, 162,342; no, 219,905. Majority for noes, 57,562.

2.—Yes, 174,947; no, 215,244. Majority, 40,297.

3.—Yes, 170,746; no, 220,995. Majority, 50,249.

4.—Yes, 189,667; no, 221,576. Majority, 21,909.

Forecasting a huge majority in favor of total prohibition throughout the Province of Ontario, Rev. Ben H. Spence, when interviewed by Canadian Press this morning, declared that the returns received until 11 a.m. indicated a substantial majority on every question. "I confidently expect over one hundred thousand of a majority on questions on the ballot," he declared. "We have won a substantial majority. The vote is an unmistakable mandate to the legislature, not only against the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act, but to strengthen and improve it, and to enforce it with even greater efficiency."

He said that the people of Ontario favor prohibition, being against the sale of beer and the Government agency proposal. "Voting in Ontario, however, is but a battle in the war," said Mr. Spence. "We have won a sweeping victory in this battle but the war is still on and it must be pushed until the liquor traffic is entirely destroyed."

Toronto Voted Dry.

All doubts as to dryness of the vote in Toronto on the referendum were dispelled this morning when the official figures of the entire city, with exception of a few sub-divisions, were given out as follows:

Question 1.—Yes, 49,281; no, 57,188. Majority, no 26,907.

Question 2.—Yes, 87,233; no. 97,202. Majority, no 9,969.

Question 3.—Yes, 83,609; no, 100,101. Majority, no 17,101

Question 4.—Yes, 91,173; no, 93,465. Majority, no 2,282.

Nipissing Is Wet.

A bulletin from the riding of West Nipissing says that there was a large majority there for the wets but no figures are given.

CONSERVATIVES AND LIBERALS NOW A TIE, WITH 28 SEATS EACH

East Wellington, However is in Doubt—Sir William Hearst Expected in Toronto Tomorrow—Farmers Will Convene.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 21—Sir Wm. Hearst is expected in this city tomorrow and he will immediately meet his colleagues of the defeated Conservative Government, and formulate plans for future action following the general elections of yesterday.

Farmers to Convene.

Until this meeting is held and a statement given out the political possibilities of the Ontario situation are largely a matter of conjecture. Leaders of the United Farmers of Ontario, who yesterday elected forty-two or forty-three members to the Legislature, and have the edge on either Liberals or Conservatives in the ouse by fourteen or fifteen seats, are planning an early convention to set a course to be taken by this organisation.

No Plans For Future.

Hartley Dewart, the Liberal Leader said this morning tha so far his party had made n oplans for future action.

Labor Men Prepare.

The Labor men, of whom there will be eleven in the new House, are energetically preparing to make their presence felt in the legislative body.

Parties' Standing.

The standing of the parties this afternoon appeared to be as follows: U. F. O. 42, Liberals 28, Conservatives 28, Labor 11, Independant Liberal 1, Soldier 1. One seat here credited to the Conservatives appeared to be doubtful beteween the Conservative and U. F. O. columns. The constituency mentioned in the above list as in doubt is East Wellington with Lieut.-Col. Pritchard, Conservative, and A. Hillyer, U. F. O. contending for the seat.

When a railroad accident dumped four cars of coal on the street railway tracks at Cincinnati a snow-plow was used to clear it away.

R. J. SODEN,
defeated Conservative candidate in West Peterborough election.

TRUCK RUNS INTO BRIDGE

COLLIDED WITH SMITH STREET STRUCTURE AND SMASHED PICKETS

Instead of two automobiles colliding, as has grown quite customary of late, the large Imperial Oil Co. truck collided with the Smith street bridge about three o'clock yesterday afternoon. The truck was proceeding east across the bridge when the driver, Mr. Wm. Clancey, Jr., apparently lost controll and the huge truck smashed into the south side of the bridge carrying away one of the cement pickets. Then by the force of the impact and being rendered out of controll the huge tank plunged across the roadway smashing into the north railing toward the east end of the bridge and remained suspended over the river.

It seems inconceivable that it could have rebounded with such force but the facts and the damake caused to the bridge and truck are evidence of the force of the impact. No person was injured.

THE REFERENDUM

CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

The Referendum campaign in Peterborough city was a clean contest between the wets and the dries, in which a small army of women worked like Trojans all day long in the interests of temperance.

The result was, as anticipated by most thinking men and women, a complete victory in retention of the Ontario Temperance Act, with a large majority of noes against all four questions. Question one has a majority of noes in the city of at least 3,489, question two 2,881, question three 3,109, and question four 2,137. And although complete returns from rural subdivisions are not yet to hand, there can be no doubt that the Act which has served the country so well during the war will remain on the statute books as a peace time measure, without amendments, so far as West Peterborough is concerned.

Reports also indicate that East Peterborough has voted absolutely dry.

PETERBORO AND ONTARIO GO DRY

T. TOOMS ELECTED FOR LEGISLATURE WITH SUBSTANTIAL PLURALITY 1154

Labor Candidate Piles up Vote of 47981 in West Peterboro Gillespie Secured 3644 Votes and Soden 2595—New Member Acclaimed by Supporters.

Thomas Tooms, Labor candidate, won a substantial plurality over his two opponents — R. J. Soden and G. A. Gillespie —in West Peterborough election for the Provincial Legislature yesterday. His plurality over G. A. Gillespie, next in the running, is 1,154, and Mr. Gillespie's plurality over Mr. Soden 10,49.

So far as can be ascertained at present the polling stands: Tooms, 4,798; Gillespie, 3,644; Soden, 2,595, with eleven divisions to hear from.

Tooms Acclaimed.

A monster procession of Mr. Tooms' workers and supporters paraded the streets, and the winning candidate was accorded a rousing reception. Mr. Tooms addressed the crowd outside The Review office and pledged himself to strictly adhere to the Labor platform and support and advocate legislation in the best interests of the riding he will have the honor to represent, and of the Province in general.

The Review's screen returns service was taken advantage of by thousands of citizens anxious to learn both the West Riding and Provincial results at the earliest possible moment.

While the vote polled was large, as a result of the women's franchise, it only represents about sixty per cent. of the possible vote.

THOMAS TOOMS, M.L.A.,
Labor candidate elected to represent West Peterborough in Provincial Legislature.

ALL QUESTIONS ON REFERENDUM ARE GIVEN HEAVY DRY MAJORITY

Even Toronto Decides for Prohibition and Rejects the Proposed Amendment to Establish Government Shops and Restore the Sale of Distilled Liquors—Returns From Province Not all in.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 21.—As full and partial returns from various outlying constituencies in the voting on the referendum were received here today it became evident that the majority for the prohibitionists was rolling up heavily. The summary for the entire province as compiled on the results received up till 1.30 p.m. indicated the following totals and majorities for the "no's":

1.—Yes, 162,343; no, 219,905. Majority for noes, 57,562.

2.—Yes, 174,947; no, 215,244. Majority, 40,297.

3.—Yes, 170,746; no, 220,995. Majority, 50,249.

4.—Yes, 189,667; no, 221,576. Majority, 21,909.

Mr. Spence Satisfied.

Forecasting a huge majority in favor of total prohibition throughout the Province of Ontario, Rev. Ben H. Spence, when interviewed by Canadian Press this morning, declared that the returns received until 11 a.m. indicated a substantial majority on every question. "I confidently expect over one hundred thousand of a majority on questions on the ballot," he declared. "We have won a substantial majority. The vote is an unmistakable mandate to the legislature, not only against the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act, but to strengthen and improve it, and to enforce it with even greater efficiency."

He said that the people of Ontario favor prohibition, being against the sale of beer and the Government agency proposal. "Voting in Ontario, however, is but a battle in the war," said Mr. Spence. "We have won a sweeping victory in this battle but the war is still on and it must be pushed until the liquor traffic is entirely destroyed."

Toronto Voted Dry.

All doubts as to dryness of the vote in Toronto on the referendum were dispelled this morning when the official figures of the entire city, with exception of a few sub-divisions, were given out as follows:

Question 1.—Yes, 74,242; no, 75,188. Majority, no 26,907.

Question 2.—Yes, 87,233; no, 97,202. Majority, no 9,969.

Question 3.—Yes, 83,609; no, 100,101. Majority, no 17,101.

Question 4.—Yes, 91,173; no, 93,465. Majority, no 2,292.

Nipissing Is Wet.

A bulletin from the riding of West Nipissing says that there was a large majority there for the wets but no figures are given.

CONSERVATIVES AND LIBERALS NOW A TIE, WITH 28 SEATS EACH

East Wellington, However is in Doubt—Sir William Hearst Expected in Toronto Tomorrow—Farmers Will Convene.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 21—Sir Wm. Hearst is expected in this city tomorrow and he will immediately meet his colleagues of the defeated Conservative Government, and formulate plans for future action following the general elections of yesterday.

Farmers to Convene.

Until this meeting is held and a statement given out the political possibilities of the Ontario situation are largely a matter of conjecture. Leaders of the United Farmers of Ontario, who yesterday elected forty-two or forty-three members to the Legislature, and have the edge on either Liberals or Conservatives in the ouse by fourteen or fifteen seats, are planning an early convention to set a course to be taken by this organization.

No Plans For Future.

Hartley Dewart, the Liberal Leader said this morning tha so far his party had made n oplans for future action.

Labor Men Prepare.

The Labor men, of whom there will be eleven in the new House, are energetically preparing to make their presence felt in the legislative body.

Parties' Standing.

The standing of the parties this afternoon appeared to be as follows. U. F. O. 42, Liberals 28, Conservatives 28, Labor 11, Independant Liberal 1, Soldier 1. One seat here credited to the Conservatives appeared to be doubtful beteween the Conservative and U. F. O. columns. The constituency mentioned in the above list as in doubt is East Wellington with Lieut.-Col. Pritchard, Conservative, and A. Hillyer, U. F. O. contending for the seat.

When a railroad accident dumped four cars of coal on the street railway tracks at Cincinnati a snowplow was used to clear it away.

R. J. SODEN,
defeated Conservative candidate in West Peterborough election.

TRUCK RUNS INTO BRIDGE

COLLIDED WITH SMITH STREET STRUCTURE, AND SMASHED PICKETS

Instead of two automobiles colliding, as has grown quite customary of late, the large Imperial Oil Co. truck collided with the Smith street bridge about three o'clock yesterday afternoon. The truck was proceeding east across the bridge when the driver, Mr. Wm. Clancey, Jr., apparently lost controll and the huge truck smashed into the south side of the bridge carrying away one of the cement pickets. Then by the force of the impact and being rendered out of controll the huge tank plunged across the roadway smashing into the north railing toward the east end of the bridge and remained suspended over the river.

It seems inconceivable that it could have rebounded with such force but the facts and the damage caused to the bridge and truck are evidence of the force of the impact. No person was injured.

THE REFERENDUM

CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

The Referendum campaign in Peterborough city was a clean contest between the wets and the dries, in which a small army of women worked like Trojans all day long in the interests of temperance.

The result was, as anticipated by most thinking men and women, a complete victory in retention of the Ontario Temperance Act, with a large majority of noes against all four questions. Question one has a majority of noes in the city of at least 3,489, question two 2,881, question three 3,109, and question four 2,137. And although complete returns from rural subdivisions are not yet to hand, there can be no doubt that the Act which has served the country so well during the war will remain on the statute books as a peace time measure, without amendments, so far as West Peterborough is concerned.

Reports also indicate that East Peterborough has voted absolutely dry.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1919.

THE ELECTION OF THOMAS TOOMS.

THOMAS TOOMS, the man who was elected yesterday to represent West Peterborough in the Legislature, was only a few weeks ago a stranger to the public. He has been a resident of the city for a comparatively short space of time. He was nominated two weeks ago by the Independent Labor party, and at that time the old line politicians refused to take his candidature seriously. Their chief concern was the question as to the side from which he was likely to draw any support he might receive.

Mr. Tooms went into the contest practically a stranger. He had no funds except those contributed by his fellow workers. In other ways he was handicapped. He held only one public meeting in the city during his campaign and devoted the most of his time to the rural sections in the hope of cultivating the friendship of the farmers.

And Mr. Tooms, the stranger, handicapped as he was, came out at the head of the polls with an abnormal majority, defeating the regular party nominees, both of them citizens of established reputation and known in city and country alike. Mr. Tooms, it is evident, received support from unexpected quarters. Even if every workingman in the city voted for him, that would not be sufficient to account for his majority. He must have been supported by members of other classes in the community.

What is the lesson to be drawn from the events of yesterday? What is the moral of the political revolution throughout the entire Province? He who runs may read. The people as a whole are becoming wearied unto death of the system of partisanship, the most pronounced in Canada of that of probably any country in the world. Professional and business men have since the beginning been in the ascendant in Parliament and Legislature. Farmers and workingmen have all these years been practically unrepresented. For this condition they had no one to blame but themselves. The remedy lay in their own hands. All that was needed was organized action. Within the past year that action has been taken and the results have astonished those who regarded the recent movement as a mere incident in the campaign.

It is evident that the candidature of Mr. Tooms, like that of his fellow candidates in other places, cut most deeply into the forces of the party in power. Scores of people who voted for him yesterday knew little if anything of himself personally or of his platform. They did know, however, that he was an independent, a candidate free from the shackles of partyism. They were anxious for a change, anything for a new order, and accepted their opportunity. Anyway, Mr. Tooms was elected, and he will go to the Legislature not as the choice of Union Labor alone.

The lesson is obvious. The old political parties, if they hope to survive, must be reconstructed upon new lines. There is no reason why the political forces of the province should be made up of warring factions. The bi-party system is the natural division of thinking men and women. There should be room enough in one or both to include every class and condition of humanity.

THE TRIUMPH OF PROHIBITION.

ONE OF THE MOST remarkable features of the election of yesterday is the fact that while the people of Ontario rejected the Government that put the Ontario Temperance Act in force, and not only that but refused to accept the pledges of the Opposition that they were friendly to the principles of that measure, they endorsed the Act itself with, apparently, at the time of writing, an overwhelming majority. The latest returns now at hand show that in sixteen ridings, including Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa and Windsor, where an adverse vote was expected, the majority in favor of sustaining the Act was over eleven thousand. This, however, is offset to an extent by a majority of about nine thousand in the affirmative side of the fourth question on the ballot, which provides for an amendment to the Act, permitting the sale of beer and whiskey in Government shops. It is more than likely however, that this majority will be killed by the vote in the rural sections, where it seems that the tendency was to vote in the negative on all four questions. In the above computation it would appear that the vote in Peterborough has not been taken into account, and in this city the people registered their verdict in favor of continuing the Act in its present form.

But even if question four does show a majority in the final analysis of the vote, the temperance people of Ontario need have no misgivings that the Act will be amended so as to defeat or impair in any way its original purpose. A new order has arisen in Ontario. If the farmers of this Province really are strong enough numerically to form a Government and to control the Legislature, they are irrevocably committed to the suppression of the liquor traffic. Question four on the ballot may mean anything or nothing. There are no conditions attached. Any Government really sincere in the interests of prohibition will give effect to a majority vote on question four without affecting the principle of the original Act. A government shop where whiskey and beer are sold might be taken as meaning a place where such liquor could be obtained, not freely, but on conditions now imposed on those who patronize the present day dispensaries. The question says nothing as to conditions of sale. The Ontario Temperance Act is likely to remain as it has been since first given effect.

THE NEW LEGISLATURE.

WHEN THE NEW Legislature meets, what then? Which party is to have control and is there to be a coalition of the now opposing elements to make the new Government secure?

At the time of writing the U. F. O. have elected forty-three members and the Labor party twelve. Some of the former were successful at the polls owing to a union between them and candidates of the Independent Labor party. Besides these there are two Independents without any avowed connection. It is more than likely that these will throw in their lot with the majority. This would give the U. F. O.-Labor party, if they decide to extend their coalition fifty-seven, one more than half of the total membership of the House, a lead of three over the twenty-six Conservatives and twenty-eight Liberals combined. It is likely that such a combination would draw support from one or both of the old line parties, sufficient at least to make the new Government secure.

If the U. F. O. and their new allies, the Labor members, have not in their present membership a man equal to the task of leadership, a new leader can be secured. It is already rumored that Sir Adam Beck, defeated in London yesterday, may be furnished with a seat elsewhere and asked to head the new combination. As Sir Adam ran in London as an Independent there would be nothing inconsistent in such a step. It has been urged for some time that he was the one man desirable as Premier of the Province for which he has done so much.

There is nothing depressing in the prospect of the farmers of Ontario in control of the Legislature. There is nothing to be feared from their platform, even if given effect to the last clause. They are safe and conservative. Their administration is sure to be marked with wisdom and economy. If the old line parties should enter into a combination to defeat such a Government, and so force another election, the results would not be difficult to forecast. The farmers would go back stronger than ever.

THE BLOODLESS REVOLUTION.

THE FEELING OF UNREST, obscure as the cause may be, that seems to pervade the entire civilized world today, is the only means of accounting for the political upheaval that took place in Ontario yesterday. There are few instances on record of the defeat of a Government so overwhelmingly. Not only was the Premier himself rejected in his own riding, but it now seems that every member of the Cabinet with two exceptions has been borne down by the avalanche. But if the Conservative Government has met with catastrophe, the Liberals have little to boast of. Since the election of 1914 they have made no advance in the confidence of the people. They are as numerically as weak now as they were five years ago when the returns were all in. They were at least united then. Now they are divided into two factions.

Hartley Dewart, the leader, was elected yesterday by a tremendous majority in a Toronto riding that was Conservative in the days before prohibition became an issue in politics. He was elected yesterday by the same forces, he was chosen for the same purpose as he was two years ago, when he was sent to the Legislature as the reviving hope of the liquor interests. But Hartley Dewart is as helpless today to work the will of his supporters as he was any time during his two sessions in the Legislature. The people of Ontario have refused to take him at his word. Their confidence has been denied him.

Premier Hearst and his Government were defeated yesterday for their action in giving the Province war-time prohibition. The Government was in other respects above criticism. The only real objection to them urged by any campaign speaker was that they had been too long in office. Beyond all question the Ontario Temperance Act was the leading issue.

The anti-temperance forces wreaked their vengeance upon Premier Hearst and his Cabinet. The prohibitionists, it would seem, while endorsing what they had done in their interests, withheld their support, as so often happens. The good that a Government may do is nearly always taken as a matter of course by those who approve of such action.

The anti-prohibitionists expended their energy in accomplishing the overthrow of the Government. The temperance people, however, declined to be moved by the fair words of the Opposition, and who can blame the voters if they hesitated in this regard. An entirely new force in Ontario politics was created yesterday.

If the Liberals did, as has been so often asserted, encouraged the U. F. O. and Labor movement in order to defeat the Hearst Government, they most certainly succeeded, but gained nothing themselves, by the strategy. They emerge from the smoke of battle without any new honor. They are exactly where they were as long ago as 1905. In fourteen years it has been impossible for the party to live down its record.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE TUMULT and the shouting dies.

* * * * *

THE 3,600 MAJORITY in this city will help out in the final reckoning.

* * * * *

AFTER THIS it will be hard to find a regular to carry the banner in a political contest.

* * * * *

TALKING OF collective bargaining, agriculture and labor appear to have achieved the objective.

* * * * *

THE EXCELLENT service of the C. P. R. enabled The Review to give the election returns to the last man.

* * * * *

IT WAS NOT LUCK that carried the Ontario Temperance Act in Peterborough. It was rather assisted Providence.

* * * * *

AT ALL EVENTS neither of the old-line parties have much to boast of. If one lost, the other failed to gain ground.

* * * * *

AFTER ALL, it was not Premier Hearst's fault so much as his misfortune that the temperance people gave him the cold shoulder.

* * * * *

PREMIER HEARST staked his political life on the Ontario Temperance Act and lost. But the Act remains as a monument to his courage.

ENGLAND MAY IMPOSE TAX ON FORTUNES

LORD ROTHERMERE COMES OUT FOR EXPROPRIATION—WHAT PAPERS SAY

London, Oct. 21.—A most significant sign here is the growth in popularity during the past week of the proposal to make a capital levy on fortunes earned by the war, for the purpose of meeting the enormous deficit in revenue. Lord Beaverbrook's journal, the Express launched the plan, the Times supports it, and Lord Rothermere, himself one of England's richest men, demanded in yesterday's Sunday Pictorial complete expropriation of war profits.

"The bulk and best of our young men were torn from work and from life during the war to serve the nation in its extreme danger," says Lord Rothermere. "This necessity, but in strict justice this compulsion might have been applied to those whose physical condition, or the ingenuity of their evasion, while it spared them supreme sacrifice and toil of battle, did not prevent them from accumulating huge fortunes which they are now engaged in flaunting over the face of the land. These fortunes were acquired without the risk of health and often by quite young men. There is, no doubt, plenty of data in the possession of the inland revenue authorities to enable these war profits to be assessed before the end of the official year. If so, let the work begin this week."

J. L. Garvin, editor of the Observer declares that the Labor party is unanimously in favor of the capital levy, the Liberal party, inside and outside the coalition, is mainly for it, and a strong Unionist section is equally for it. If it is proposed it will carry easily, says Mr. Garvin.

The Daily News declares: "Unless all signs are deceptive the Government will be forced to impose heavy taxation if not absolute appropriation of war fortunes. It is almost inevitable that taxation on these lines should come, if for no other reason, because of the popular anger against the war profiteer."

DOG RAN AMUCK BIT 13 CHILDREN

Toronto, Oct. 20.—Eleven boys and one girl were severely bitten by a white bull terrier owned by Mrs. Charles Heckling, 26 Delaney crescent, that went mad and ran amuck in Shirley avenue school yard at 1.15 this afternoon. The children were playing in the school yard when the terrier dashed into the yard and started to attack them, jumping upon the youngsters, snapping at them savagely and biting them on the legs.

The following children received medical attention from Dr. J. T. Phair, school doctor and Dr. J. H. McConnell, 1653 Dundas street, and were sent home later by Principal A. M. Mason:

Harold Shank, 13 Lyndon street; George Stevenson, 1671 Dundas west; Tom Wheeler, 24 Moutray; R. Cotton, 22 Marshall; Reggie Harrison, 10 Marshall; Margaret Bower, 215 Brock avenue; M. Shannon, 20 Moutray; David Small, 250 Brock avenue; James Harbord, 10 Shirley street; Percy Wendt, 56 Delaney crescent; Harry Kirk, 59 Delaney crescent; Ernest Mitchell, 23 Shirley.

The dog was cornered by Freddie Robbins, 1784 Dundas street west, he courageously grabbed it by the throat. The firemen from Brockton Hall rushed to the scene in their motor hose truck, a civilian having notified them.

The dog was finally handed to the Humane Society. That more children were not the victim of the mad terrier's attacks is due to the presence of mind of Principal Mason who rushed the children into the school. He was able to get a large number of the children inside the building despite the fact that they were in a semi-hysterical condition.

"The children were quite badly bitten about the legs and feet," stated Dr. McConnell. "The bites were no slight scratches. In several cases they were quite deep. The flesh of several of the youngsters were quite chewed up."

BEWARE OF DECEPTION

Statistics show that when egg albumen is used as a constituent of baking powder, the amount so used is too small (usually 15/100 of 1%) to affect the quality or effectiveness of the baking powder containing it, and when so used, is plainly for the purpose of fraud. Intelligent buyers will not permit themselves to be deceived by the water glass test.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

contains no alum or egg albumen and is guaranteed to be composed of the ingredients printed on the label—and none other.

FARMERS TODAY BUILDING BETTER HOUSES

Facts and figures have often been brought forward that there is a marked movement of people from farm to city, a sort of leave the old homestead and see the big city idea, and this was exemplified in truth when Gen. Morrison, late commander of a cavalry brigade in France, returned to his home village to find only fifteen pupils in school compared with fifty when he attended the same school—and that not so long ago either.

But tho there are many who leave the farm, there are still those who remain to work the soil and so provide the means of providing one's daily bread. The man who has been farming for the last 10 or 15 years has seen many changes in the methods of gathering in the crops, of threshing, plowing and milking and butter-making, and to keep pace with the times he must be modern in every way on his farm.

So it is little wonder then that many farmers of to-day aim at having their houses built like city residences. The day of the rough and ready log hut has long since passed, giving place as it did to the frame house, the latter, maybe, not so substantial, but yet having the advantage of easily being made attractive by interior decoration —a quality not possessed by the log hut. Even the roughcast or cement-coated house which did good service in its time, is losing its utility, at any rate, as an attractive dwelling-place, apart from its comfort and convenience.

The average farmer of the present day is quite as progressive and up to date in his choice of building materials as the city man buying his home. The types of farmhouses that may be seen in most rural district nowadays are built on the same plan as the better class of city residences.

One noticeable feature of the new style farmhouse is its compactness and the moderate-sized veranda. The old colonial veranda that went round two and three sides of the house, and had massive wooden pillars to support its roof is seldom found, any many of the houses have only a porch landing. A type of house which promises to be a favorite is one of large brick built on a wide front, with a porch door-way in the middle, and all the rooms on two floors, similar to a bungalow. In this house the veranda is at the side, so that if the farmer has an automobile he can drive in from the roadway to the veranda steps and then straight to the garage or barn.

Stone foundations are becoming more and more popular, and bricked up veranda piers are steadily replacing the wooden ones. Slate roofs are taking the place of shingles, and tho many farmers still cling to their lightning rods, they have them hidden behind a chimney or at the back of the house.

Better, Prettier Homes.

Such changes signify a move on the part of the farmer towards solidity and substantially, and at the same time the investing of more money in better and prettier homes. The newer style homes vary greatly in price, and hardly two cost nearly the same sum. Apart from the original cost of the land—which cannot, of course, be included in the cost of the house, since the ground may have been bought at only a few dollars per acre—the average seven or eight-roomed house should cost the farmer about $2000 to $2500, depending upon the design, style and size. The transportation of materials to the farm may add something to the cost, but should not make so great a difference as to cause the farmer to hesitate about building. Of course, there are higher-priced houses, too but the farmer, as a rule, finds something between the $2000 and $4000 figure that suits him. There are a number of farmers who prefer even smaller-priced houses, but with the cost of building keeping pace with the rising cost of other commodities, one cannot get much brick and mortar for their dollars. Now that the automobile is coming into more general use with farmers, garages are now almost as necessary to the farmhouse as the car is to the farmer, since the barn is not suitable in winter as a garage. Still another feature in regard to the farmers' houses is that they are being built quite close to the road, and the barns are situated at some distance from the house.

Bungalows and similar styles compactly and solidly built, on modern plans and designs, with commodious rooms, summarise the farmer's idea of a modern farm "home"—it hardly seems appropriate to call the farmer's $3000 or $4000 built-to-order residence merely a "farm house."

There seems to be every indication that the farmer is reaping the harvest of good fortune and in what better way can the farmer utilize his surplus than to build for himself a house after his own liking?

At any rate the farmers are showing that they can be progressive in the matter of up-to-date houses, as well as in farming, and the general appearance of the modern farm is much more pleasing to the visitor to the country than the frame houses of some years ago.

ROYAL BANK IN SOUTH AMERICA

MANY BRANCHES OPENED IN A FEW WEEKS—NEW ONE AT HAITI

The Royal Bank of Canada announce the opening of a branch of the bank in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, where a general banking business will be conducted. The management will be in the hands of Mr. G. V. Long, formerly manager of the San Jose, Costa Rica, branch.

In addition to the bank's 540 branches located in every important city and town in Canada and Newfoundland, they now have 67 branches in the West Indies, Central and South America. A new branch has also just been opened at Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

The Royal also announces that arrangements to open branches at Sao Paulo and Santos, Brazil, Buenos Aires, Argentine, and Montevideo, Uruguay, are nearing completion, and are expected to be open for business within a few weeks.

Mr. C. C. Pineo, who was formerly manager of the Royal's branch in Havana, Cuba, and who for the past four years occupied an important banking position in Brazil, has been appointed supervisor of branches in Brazil, Argentine and Uruguay, with headquarters at 68 William street, New York. Mr. Pineo is at present in Rio de Janeiro.

X-RAY FAILED

Mechanic Gives Evidence

There are cases where science in its most profound phases is absolutely balked, yet other help is at hand.

This is proved by the testimony of a mechanic, 35 years of age, who suffered, at times, positive torture from stone in the bladder. After trying many remedies without result, he had an X-Ray photograph taken, which also failed to show where the trouble was. Forthunately, just at this juncture, when he almost had given up hope of any relief, Gin Pills were brought to his notice. These famous Pills in a very short time enabled him to pass the stone which was the cause of his trouble. We will give the name of this man on request.

Kidney and Bladder troubles should not be neglected. The first symptoms should be sufficient warning. Pain in the sides or back, constant headaches, neuralgic and sciatic pains, rheumatism, dizziness, constipation, gravel, highly-colored urine, specks before the eyes, all point to derangement. Gin Pills should be obtained without delay. Druggists and dealers carry them—50c—your money refunded if not satisfied. Free sample on request.

WHAT IS A CURE?

IS IT A TEMPORARY OR PERMANENT CONDITION?

Let us get down to brass tacks. Is there is any such thing as a cure? You may eradicate every trace of disease from your system and be restored to your former state of health—but you haven't attained a cure. Why? Because as long as disease germs are prevalent in the universe you may be afflicted again.

Take for example: a man has a terrible headache for days. It has driven him almost insane, sapping his energies and making him incapable of working. He tries doctors, takes prescriptions, and finally finds a preparation that makes him fit again. Immediately he says, "I'm cured."

Six months later his head begins to ache. What does he say, "Here's my old headache back again, that medicine was a fake"—or does he say, "Another attack! we'll soon knock that out!" and commences the use of the remedy that relieved him before.

This happens in many cases of Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis, Neuralgia. That is why we say "Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules" remedy these diseases. They are 99% effective by actual record.

Ask your Druggist or write us for our new booklet. It is interesting and costs you nothing (Templetons, 142 King West, Toronto). We mail T.R.C.'s anywhere on receipt of $1.06.

The young lady across the way says she understands the Germans won't be permitted to make any new weapons and she supposes their fixed bayonets and other old things will soon be out of date.

A FEW OPTIGRAMS

Instead of "owner and slave," as in the dark ages, or "master and man," as in the middle ages, or "employer and employe," as in our own more enlightened age, why not "worker and co-worker"?

Better days are coming. They always will in the future.

Truth may be a long time coming, but it always stays when it comes.

A smile a day is enough if it is twelve hours long.

Almost any one is able to be a sharer in fortune, but who is big enough to be a companion in misery?

Harvey once remarked: "I have not been able to induce any man beyond forty to believe in my hypothesis." Flexibility of mind is a great gift. Too many men of forty run their business from a private office. There may be some Harveys out in the general office, who have a bigger idea than you ever thought of. The largest reservoir cannot afford to shut off its supply of fresh water—evaporation is tremendously rapid!

MR. GILLESPIE

Thanks the Electors

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,—

I frankly confess that the result of the election in West Peterborough yesterday was somewhat of a surprise as much to myself and to my supporters, as it must have been to the successful candidate.

I have no hesitation in saying that, up to within a few days of the polling day, my election was generally conceded to be a foregone conclusion. Few were aware of the quiet, underlying strength of the Labor influence which turned the tide; and I heartily congratulate Mr. Tooms on the splendid efforts of his friends which resulted in his election.

Personally, I have not a single complaint to make regarding the election. My only regret is for my loyal and energetic supporters, who, worked so faithfully in my behalf without gaining their object. To you, therefore, ladies and gentlemen, I take this opportunity of returning my sincere thanks for your unselfish and generous support, which I will not soon forget.

It may be a little premature at present to state my views on the results of the election throughout the Province. This much I am quite sure of:—that there has been equally startling surprises in other constituencies as well as West Peterborough, and that in the majority of these cases the strength of the Liberal party will be found to be greatly augmented.

My hope for the successful passing of the Referendum Bill was strong—that by an overwhelming vote the voice of the electorate will have declared emphatically for a 'dry" Ontario.

Your obedient servant,

GEO. A. GILLESPIE

ENTIRE FAMILY IS GRATEFUL FOR IT

Friends Say They Never Saw Such a Change in Anyone as Tanlac Made In Mrs. Spruitt.

"My friends all declare they never saw such a wonderful change in anybody as they have in me since I began taking Tanlac," said Mrs. Martha Spruitt, of 296 Runnymede Road, West Toronto, Ontario.

"Two years ago," she continued, "I suffered such a serious breakdown that I had to be taken to the hospital. I was there several weeks under treatment but got no better. They took me home again and I was almost as helpless as a child. I had no appetite and my nerves were in such a wretched state that I couldn't stand any kind of noise. My friends said they never expected to see me recover and they even prepared my daughter to look for the worst at any time.

"Nothing I took did me any good, and after hearing so much about Tanlac I decided to try it and it wasn't long before people began talking about my big improvement. I eat most anything now, and my food is doing me good. My nerves have become quiet and I sleep all night like a child. I am getting stronger and better every day and all my family feel so grateful for what Tanlac has done for me that we are praising it all the time.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. H. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

BIG FORTUNE IN CROP OF TOBACCO

398 ACRES IN LEAMINGTON FETCH OVER $220,000.

Leamington, Oct. 20.—Possibly the highest sale of leaf tobacco ever recorded on the North American continent was realized by a hundred or more growers of Virginia bright tobacco in the Leamington district when Mr. F. R. Gregory, manager of the Imperial Tobacco Company, purchased their crops.

From 26 growers were bought 398 acres of the leaf for $226,690, or an average of $554.50 per acre — in round figures about 400,000 pounds, the average price per pound being 58 8-10 cents.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

MEMBERS OF REFERENDUM COMMITTEE HOLD JUBILEE GATHERING IN Y. M. C. A.

Majority for Referendum Was Double That Expected by Most Sanguine Workers—All Who Aided in Fight Were Remembered.

It was a jubilant and thankful gathering of the friends of the Referendum Movement that thronged the Y. M. C. A. building within an hour after the closing of the polls. The convenience of the rooms had been placed at the disposal of the Committee for the day as a headquarters, and to this the friends gravitated in groups to exchange congratulations and give place to others. Always leaving a throng of friends offering personal congratulations on the magnificent showing that was rolling in.

The results more than justified the hard and incessant work of the last two months. This activity resulted in that the several polling places were thoroughly and efficiently manned, and womaned, with almost faultless precision. Side by side with this the committee had the use of hundreds of cars in which to bring to the polls the "new woman," who for the first time came out and showed her interest. As the day was fine men were were largely left to navigate to the voting places while the women were taken care of in the matter of transportation.

By nine o'clock the decisive majority was announced, the figures being for reference in another part of this issue. Side by side with expressions of satisfaction were shown a deep thankfulness that the moral side of the question had been so thoroughly sustained. That the majority given was practically double that expected by even these most confident of a favorable result. Little reference was made to the political issues, attention being concentrated on the one main object, the retention of the Act and its main provisions.

Shortly after nine o'clock a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Referendum, including the Ward captains, both those having charge, and the polling division captains, with the women workers in and out of office was held in the assembly room, and at which business growing out of the campaign was transacted. It was first decided that the organization would be kept together and intact, and full records were directed to be made of all participating and their several functions, including all who acted as scrutineers, etc. So that in any further campaign all could be called together for action in the good cause.

Then followed a series of resolutions, being the last public official act of the Executive Committee. First to the Press, that the thanks of the organization be extended to both the local papers, and that the Committee desired to express cheerful and hearty thanks for the strong, able and untiring support given from day to day to the Cause. The resolution was moved by Mr. R. C. Braund and Mr. H. G. Walker, and carried.

Many young ladies had given practical and valuable service in the recall work, and these were remembered by a resolution, that included the workers who had so diligently and faithfully assisted. Moved by Mr. George Leader and Mr. Wilfred Shiner and carried most positively.

This brought to the fore an expression of appreciation of the older people who had striven in the work for results. It was proposed to make a list by name. These were mentioned so rapidly and frequently that it was seen that individual mention could not be made else the already generous assistance of the Press be overworked. But Mrs. Kendry and Mrs. Shields were not content to let the matter go as it stood and moved a resolution that was wide and covering and wished it to be known to all and singular, that the deepest thanks of the Executive are due and tendered in appreciation of the men and women, the very best of our citizens who had come forward to aid and sustain the object in view, that of future dry Peterborough. These had entirely left to one side all consideration of a party issue and concentrated on the greater and larger object before the electorate and had vitally contributed to the magnificent success. The resolution was at once carried and with applause.

Mr. A. B. Cunningham, President of the local organization presided at the meeting and remembered about every one except himself. This omission was rectified by the ever considerable Mrs. Kendray, assisted by Mr. Leader, and presently most complimentary and appreciative remarks were made with reference to the untiring part taken by Mr. Cunningham, who had practically given up the last six weeks to attending to details. Recognition was made of his thoroughness, his untiring attention to all details, his anticipation of the situation and making provision to meet all emergencies. On the rolls of the Committee suitable mention of these activities was directed to be inscribed. The resolution as put to the meeting includes thanks to Mr. F. H. Dobbin, secretary of the organization for valuable assistance in the work of the campaign.

Then some one who had been awaiting a chance to say something produced the thought that it would never do for the meeting to adjourn without recognizing in a formal way the good offices of the friends who provided cars. This resolution was received with subdued cheers, none the less hearty if not noisy. So all who gave of transportation facilities may remember that they were remembered, and that a grateful committee, let alone those who were ferried to and from the polls, appreciate the kindness and the convenience, and if this recognition may be made plain it is only that words do not always express the real situation, but appreciation was there all the same.

And after all which the meeting adjourned, just to catch up with the news coming in from all over the province that Toronto had gone dry, that Brantford had lined up with Toronto, that Hamilton's feet were slightly in the moist territory and that countless other places were clenching the good work as fast as the wires could carry the news.

BETWEEN WAR AND PEACE

Prince of Wales Strikes Expressive Phrase Describing Loan.

With his gift for finding expressive and happy phrases the Prince of Wales has remarked that the Victory Loan 1919 is for Canada "the bridge between war and peace."

Most assuredly the loan is that. When first stold of the Victory Loan, and the part it would play in reconstruction, His Royal Highness quickly consented to the use of his coat of arms on an honor flag to be given to cities, districts and industrial organizations exceeding their quota in the loan campaign. A Prince of Wales' crest—the familiar three plumes—will be added to the flag for each 25 per cent. of excess to the quota achieved by a district.

Handsome and striking the design of the Prince of Wales' flag is much more beautiful than the honor flags used in other campaigns. It will be a worthy souvenir of the visit of a most charming and popular prince.

The Sea—What It Means to You!

YOU would be surprised to learn how little many people know about the relation our prosperity bears to the problems of shipping.

With the exception of our purely domestic trade and that with our neighbors to the South, every dollar's worth of goods we produce must cross the seas, and so exports are largely the measure of our wealth as a nation. Submarine losses have placed a heavy premium on ships, so that we cannot rely on foreign vessels to carry our goods, but must build and MAN our own mercantile fleet.

Above all, we must see that CANADIAN seamen are available to man Canadian vessels as they become ready for our export service.

A Patriotic Duty

An Economic Necessity

The work of training Canadian boys for the sea is carried on by the Boys' Naval Brigades. Funds are absolutely imperative if the work is to be carried on and extended at this critical period. The appeal to the patriotic spirit is strong to give our lads a chance.

Help by giving—and giving liberally. Then help again by putting the great need before another. The Nelson Day Campaign is going to be a great success and it will be because of the loyal co-operation of public-spirited citizens like yourself.

What YOU do to-day counts much for Canada's future and your own! Assist generously.

NAVY LEAGUE KEEP WATCH

Aims of the NAVY LEAGUE OF CANADA

To emphasize Canada's opportunities and responsibilities on the sea.

To raise funds for the relief of our merchant seamen, injured in the war, and for dependents of those who were killed.

To maintain sailors' homes in our ports.

PRINCE PAYS MIDNIGHT VISIT TO HORSESHOE FALLS

Niagara Falls, Oct. 21.— Even the magnificent Niagara Falls paused in the majesty of their titanic downpouring to do the Prince of Wales honor. Illuminated at night as they never were before, they seemed great gleaming curtains of jeweled white, their folds ripping at the touch of a royal hand.

It was nearly midnight when the Prince reached Niagara Falls, but a fine crowd waited him. They cheered his silhouette, outlined against the lights at the back of his car, Killarney. That was all they could see of him, for he was immediately whisked off to the Falls.

At the home of Commissioner Dr. H. Y. Grant, the Prince and his party were led to the edge of the lawn high up over the Niagara River. Through the trees could be seen the American Falls, their beauty glistening in the light of several searchlights. The horseshoe falls were in darkness. All was silent save for the dull, hoarse roar of the distant falls.

Prince Pressed Button.

The Prince was then seen holding a deep talk with Dr. Grant. There was much fumbling in the darkness. Col. Goodwin Gibson, of Toronto, held a match aloft. It went out, but the Prince had made the connection and suddenly, like a gush of heavenly light, the Horseshoe Falls seemed to spring up out of the depths. From Dr. Grant's grounds the outline of them could not be seen distinctly, but a great white glow seemed to swell and grow, and spread, making the surrounding darkness deeper still.

A Majestic Scene.

The party then motored to Victoria Park and viewed the scene at close quarters. The Prince stood entranced, like a man given a glimpse of the vision beautiful. The Falls danced, sprayed, gleamed, sparkled and glistened in the rays of the powerful battery of lights playing in them from the base of the Canadian shore. No simile can describe the great, gleaming wonder of that illuminated rush of water or the milk-white glory that seethed and swirled like a giant cauldron beneath the feet. The effect was sublime, artistic, majestic No wonder the heir of the British throne stood spellbound.

Doughboys Disappointed.

The Prince spent the night on the Royal train. A party of Western American doughboys, homeward bound from Germany, lay alongside the Royal train for about 20 minutes on Sunday morning. They were prepared to give the British Prince a real yell, but he was not awake, so they were disappointed.

About noon the Prince moved to the Clifton Hotel, going out for a walk shortly afterwards. He was trailed by dozens of sightseers. In the afternoon he went down on a special car to the whirlpool rapids, crossing them in the Spanish aero car. He took the aerial journey across without a tremor, laughing all the while. The rest of the afternoon he was Dr. Grant's guest, viewing the power plant on the Canadian side.

COUNT FIFTY! NO RHEUMATIC PAIN

Don't suffer! Instant relief follows a rubbing with old "St. Jacobs Liniment"

Stop "dosing" rheumatism.

It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. "St. Jacobs Liniment" conquers pain. It is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache, neuralgia and reduces swelling.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Liniment" from any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.

CITY ENGINEER PARSONS REPORTS ON SOME SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANTS

City Making Preparations for Union Station Here—J. W. Fitzgerald Will Investigate

City Engineer Parsons, after a trip to the States where he thoroughly investigated many different systems of sewage disposal plants, reported the facts and figures of the same to a special meeting of the City Council last evening. He reported concerning plants in Fitchburg, Mass., and Schinectady, Albany and Rochester, New York. The Council did not decide upon a system, ut passed a resolution to procure the 35 acres of Mr. A. Wilson's farm in Otonabee on which to erect the plant.

Union Station.

A resolution was passed requesting Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, Ontario Land Surveyer to investigate and report on a site for a union railway station west of the crossing of the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Railways in the city and on the necessary readjustments of the lines to remove the Grand Trunk line from Bethune Street.

Ald. Turner in bringing this matter up considered it would greatly improve the city to have a Union Station for the twor ailways and also it would be a great advantage to have the railway removed from Bethune street.

It was proposed to as kthe railways to meet with the city in consultation regarding the erection of such a station but the majority of the aldermen were not in favour of approaching them yet with the subject.

Bethune Street to be Closed.

The Council granted perimssion to the Grand Trunk Railway to close Bethune street from Brock to Murray streets for eight to ten days during the rebuilding of the Bethune st. bridge. Access to Fitzgerald's coal yards must, however, be provided for during the erection.

MUD ON SIDEWALK

Considerable annoyance was expressed today on account of the presence of about two or three inches of mud on the sidewalk immediately west of Hunter street bridge where the improvised roadway crosses the street. It was suggested that the contractors should delegate a workman to scrape this piece of walk occasionally in wet weather.

OBITUARY

EDWARD J. HICKEY

Edward J. Hickey, who resided at the home of his son, Thomas, 767 Bethune street, dropped dead yesterday, at the polling both in Jordan's greenhouse. He had his ballot in his hand at the time. Heart disease was the cause. The deceased had suffered a paralytic stroke about two years ago, but had been in fairly good health and was feeling well when he left his house to vote.

The late Mr. Hickey was born in Ennismore 67 years ago and had been a resident of this city for the past twenty years. He was a carpenter by trade.

The deceased is survived by his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Michael Pearson, McDonnel street, and by three sons, Thomas, Edward and Sylvester, all residents of the city.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

THEODORE O'TOOLE

Theodore O'Toole, aged 17, and son of Mr. and Mrs. James O'Toole, 216 Perry Street, died last night. He leaves to mourn his loss three brothers, John, Harold and Eearl and four sisters, Margaret, Anastatia, Helen and Agnes.

The funeral will be held at 9 o'clock Thursday morning to Sacred Heart Church, and St. Peter's cemetery.

THOMAS TRENNUM

Thomas Trennum passed away at Nichols Hospital last night. Deceased was 65 years of age and formerly a resident of Harvey Township. The funeral will take place tomorrow from Belleghem's Undertaking Parlors to the train to Port McNichol for interment.

MARIAM ALICE COSTAIN

The death occurred at the Isolation Hospital yesterday of Mariam Alice, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Costain.

The funeral was held this afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery.

Deceased died from an attack of diptheria probably brought on by a recent trip from the Old Country.

Food Administration had put New York on ration system because of sugar shortage.

MR. R. J. SODEN'S CARD OF THANKS

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

In common with the general public, I wish to say that the result of the election yesterday came as a complete surprise. The campaign was conducted so quietly by all the several candidates that it was impossible to form any idea as to the outcome. In all my work among the voters I was given a cordial reception, and I have no complaint to make as to the treatment that was accorded me by the candidates who opposed me. The Labor party has demonstrated its strength and is to be congratulated on the splendid victory scored by Mr. Tooms, its standard-bearer.

The Ontario Temperance Act has been sustained by an overwhelming majority. I must confess that I am unable to explain why the Government that gave Ontario its first prohibitory law should be deposed on the same day the measure which will always remain as the outstanding feature of the Hearst Administration, was endorsed by the electors, that, too, when the temperance question was the main issue.

I have always, as the public know, stood for that Act as a matter of principle and not merely as an election cry. I can sincerely say that my defeat is to me a small matter in view of the fact that Ontario has been voted dry.

To all the voters who supported me, to all those who helped me in my campaign, I beg to tender my hearty thanks.

Yours faithfully,

R. J. SODEN,

RECKLESS AUTO DRIVING IS PUNISHED AT POLICE COURT

$38.45 Received by City for Two Men Who Failed to Drive Carefully.

Reckless automobile driving netted the city the sum of $38.45 at Police Court this morning.

After a spirited defence Harold Watson was fined $20 and $3.10 costs for driving an automobile at the rate of approximately 25 miles an hour and colliding with Jopling's delivery wagon in the course of his speeding.

Bruce Fitzgerald was also fined $10 and $5.35 costs for reckless auto driving in the course of which he knocked Miss Loreta Boothe down while she was proceeding from a street car to the sidewalk.

This morning's Police Court offers warning to automobile drivers to drive with care, as recklessness is costly.

SCHWAB TO BE HONOR GUEST

Pennsylvania Society to Recognize War Services in Annual Banquet

Chicago, Oct. 21. — Charles M. Schwab, head of the United States Emergency Fleet Corporation during the war, is to be the guest of honor at the annual banquet of the Pennsylvania Society of Chicago, P. S. Goodman, Secretary of the society, has announced. The date for the banquet will be fixed at the convenience of Mr. Schwab, who is president of the Pennsylvania Society of New York and honorary member of the Chicago organization.

The honorary membership was unanimously voted to him at the last annual meeting of the society "for distinguished services to the nation during the war." The formal presentation of the certificate of membership will be the main feature of the banquet. This will be the first social event of the society since the suspension of activities a year ago for the duration of the war. William E. Buehler, president of the organization, will act as toastmaster.

Nine Wisconsin colleges have combined for a drive for a $5,000,000 fund to increase their professors' salaries.

ATTRACTION AT GRAND FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, MATINEE SATURDAY AFTERNOON

The "Dumbells," the favorite theatrical troupe of the Canadian soldiers in France and now making a homecoming tour of the larger Canadian cities, presenting their original overseas musical revue, "Biff, Bing, Bang," will be the attraction at the Grand for Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. The members of this organization are all soldiers who have served an average of sixteen months in the front lines before having been chosen by Capt. M. W. Plunkett for service in the entertainment branch of the service. They hold a record of five hundred performances given immediately behind the lines in France, as well as forty performances, given since the armistice in Brussels, and fifty-eight performances in London, England, two weeks of which they were the attraction at the Colliseum, where they played to 91,200 people, who were anxious to see just how the boys were enterts ined at the front. The consensus of opinion, as voiced by the press and public, seems to be that the soldier boys were "sitting on the world" when it came to amusements.

This clever group of actor-soldiers present an up-to-the-minute musical revue, with special stage settings, gorgeous gowns and dazzling effects It is the only all man "girl show" in the world and the singing of both the principals and chorus might be likened to a symphony played upon a great pipe organ, full of rich, deep tones.

There are about twenty song numbers in the show and a half dozen dancing specialties.

One London, England paper, in reviewing their performance said:

"Seldom, if ever, in the history of the Coliseum has such a scene of enthusiasm been witnessed as that which greeted the Dumbells upon the conclusion of their performance on Monday. It was a reception, too, that was splendidly deserved. All the best features of modern entertainment are embodied in their offering. Each and every number has been finely produced, and the detail and finish would do credit to many West End revues. The settings are novel and artistic, and the gowns and lighting effects are all that could be desired. Add to these admirable qualities brilliant singing, sparkling comedy touches and not a moment's pause during the whole time the curtain is up, and the pleasure of the audience is easily accounted for."

ALL CRITICS LAUD SAN CARLO STARS

If what the critics on the New York and other big dailies have been writing about the San Carlo Grand Opera Company's productions is to be relied upon, music-lovers who are anticipating the visit of that big organization to this city have a rare treat in store. The exchanges have teemed with reviews of the highest character, and for the edification of the local theatre-going element, a few of the remarks of noted writers are herewith given:

The NEW YORK SUN had this to say:

"A house in which standing-room was as the golden fleece greeted the San Carlo stars, who found themselves among friends who were exceedingly appreciative. There was a uniformity of superb excellence both among the principals and the chorus. The artists won an ovation."

THE NEW YORK WORLD, reviewing the performance of Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci, the famous double bill, had the following:

"Another crowded house paid tribute to the San Carlo Grand Opera Company last night. The productions were live and gripping, and there was a splendid presentation of both operas, sung by two different and distinct casts of the leading artists."

THE NEW YORK TIMES critic reviewing a production of Ponchielli's great opera, "La Gioconda," wrote:

"A great throng witnessed the performance. The principals were excellent. The women's voices blended in an uncommonly beautiful episode at the end of the first act. To the surprise of many rival promoters here, the house sold out for the least familiar opera of the week, as it has also for tonight's favorite "Il Trovatore."

THE OMAHA DAILY NEWS said:

"Over sixteen thousand people heard the four performances of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company at the Auditorium, an average of more than four thousand per performance, breaking all records for operatic attendance and receipts in this city."

THE WASHINGTON POST reviewed of the San Carlo opening production at the famous Belasco Theatre, directly opposite the White House, and which was attended by the President and Mrs. Wilson, Miss Margaret Wilson, Mrs. Robert Lansing, His Excellency, the Italian Ambassador Count Macchi De Cellere; ex-Speaker Joseph Cannon and many others prominent in the official and social life of the Capital, had this to say:

"The San Carlo organization set another jewel in its crown with the splendid performance of "Lucia D. Lammermoor.' The great audience present was more than lavish with [illegible] was applause more fully merited. The production was of the very best."

THE CLEVELAND PRESS critic Mr.; Wilson G. Smith, the famous musical writer, wrote the following

"When the San Carlo Grand Opera company comes to Cleveland with its splendid operatic aviary I seem to lose my critical mood and consign my uncomplimentary vocabulary to the basket of desuetude."

INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE

Washington, Oct. 21. The Industrial Conference closed Saturday the second week of its session in a deadlock over the issue of collective bargaining.

Members of the labor group cited the numerous strikes over the country and pleaded for action so that they might report results to the rank and file, but they were outvoted on the final motion to adjourn the conference as a whole until Monday morning.

The manoeuvre of the labor group in the resolution offered by the general committee declaring for the right of wage earners to organize, and to bargain collectively through representatives was offset by the introduction of a substitute resolution from the employers' group.

This resolution while incorporating the declarations of the resolution of the general committee which was satisfactory to both labor and the public, declares that "the right of the employer to deal or not to deal with men or groups of men who are not his employes and chosen by and from among them is recognized."

This clause became the battle ground of debate and controversy which resulted in the deadlock Saturday. The situation is admittedly critical, although the optimists hope that the general committe, which will meet to-morrow morning, will be able to reconcile the divergence between the two resolutions.

Y. M. C. A. Bowling League.

There will be a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Bowling League and to talk over all matters pertaining to this particular form of recreation during the coming winter months. The alleys are now ready for the first game having been refinished and a complete outfit of five and ten pin equipment has been added. Mineralite balls have been secured to replace those formerly used so that a first class opportunity awaits the "hikh man" to become higher still in his bowling averages.

Mr. Bert Hamilton has returned to the city from the West to take his place as a member of the Y. M. C. A. staff. Mr. Hamilton will be secretary of the new bowling league. He will be present at the meeting tonight and being in on the ground floor will be able to deal with all matters as they arise.

FACIAL SURGERY MAKES STRIDES

ENGLISH PHYSICIAN TELLS OF SOME WONDERFUL CASES IN WAR WORK

Heads up, football players, acrobats, lion tamers, and all others engaged in pursuits which endager the natural beauty of human physiognomy. If a rival guard smears your nose into a pile of cinders, or a beast claws your face open from ear to ear, just go to the nearest hospital and ask the chief surgeon if you can be rebuilt.

H. D. Gillies, major, R. A. M. C., F. R. C. S., who was in charge of the Queen's hospital at Sidcup, Kent, England, all during the war, thinks that facial surgery, practically unknown before 1916, will have even greater application in times of peace.

Handled Many Patients.

"No less than a thousand patients were in my hospital at any one time," said the surgeon. "Some stayed there six months or a year, and others only a week or two, so it is impossible for me to say how many men I have treated. I found building new chins to be the most difficult of all operations; they required first a metal cast for the chin, and later the grafting on of bone. Noses also were very difficult; here we used cartilage instead of bone. We also built eye lashes, eye brows, removed unsightly scars and burns, and completely renovated men."

Maj. Gillies showed a slide picture of a man whose face skin had been burnt away, and skin from his scalp had been grafted on. It was almost impossible to detect any difference in the appearance of this man and a normal person.

Tells of War Surgery.

A man with an artificial nose had a rather surprised appearance, one eyebrow being elevated a trifle; except for that he looks like anyone [illegible] combined Chicago Dental and Medical societies in the Stevens building this week, speaking on "The Results of War Surgery of the Face."

ENGLISH CLERGYMEN COMPLAIN OF PAY

MANY OF THEM SAY THEY CANNOT LIVE ON THEIR STIPENDS

London, Oct. 21.—It is generally admitted that, as previously cabled, professional people are among the most ill-used of the victims of present extraordinary inflation of prices and the ministerial body seem to be the worst hit of all. The state to which some of the underpaid clerky have been reduced is pitiable.

In Wales, where there are many non-conformist ministers with stipends not exceeding $100 a year, some of the poorest of the spiritual pastors have turned in despair to manual labor, and have gone into the coal mines, where financially their services are estimated at four times the value put upon them in the pulpit.

In the Church of England numbers of the clergy are in a hopeless plight. One clergyman has been moved by the hardships of some of his brethren, and by the prevailing spirit of protest, to talk of forming a trade union of the clergy with minimum wages and better conditions of employemnt. One incumbent, writing ardently in favor of the [illegible] clerical strike if need be.

A county court-judge the other day expressed surprise that a vicar who appeared before him received only £204 in thirteen months. His surprise is only equalled by the surprise of others that he should be astonished. It is said that there are at least 2,000 beneficed clergy in England whose net income is less than £200 a year, and there are over 7,000 licensed curates in the Church of England, whose average stipend does not exceed £3 a week, which is considerably less than a coal miner's or a mechanic's wage.

Compared with theirs the financial status of the member of the House of Commons with $400 a year, is positively enviable, and yet bitter complaints are being made by these political-laborers that they are not receiving a living wage. The fact, however, that they are sticking to their job, and that a crowd of their friends are willing candidates for the same paltry "insult," rather stifles sympathy.

FRENCH CHAMBER CLOSES SESSION

SAT UNINTERRUPTEDLY THROUGH THE GREATEST STRUGGLE IN FRENCH HISTORY

Paris, Oct. 20.- The curtain was rung down yesterday on the session of Parliament which sat uninterruptedly through the greatest effort of French history. Premier Clemenceau was the leading actor in the final drama. Little ceremony marked the conclusion of business.

Paul Deschanel, president of the Chamber of Deputies, deeply moved, eulogized the war session of Parliament, paid homage to the heroic soldiers of France and the glorious dead, reviewed the task accomplished by Parliament and expressed the hope that the new chamber would work to raise France from the ruins of the war. Before the applause had subsided M. Clemenceau rose and in a loud, clear voice read the decree closing the session. Deputies, cheering and shouting "Vive La Republique," crowded around the Premier to congratulate him. Then, bidding each other good bye they left the chamber.

Most of them will leave for their constituencies to-morrow to begin the work of the campaign preliminary to the election of a new chamber which will meet in December.

SOCIAL & PERSONAL

BARBER — ROLLINS

St. Andrew's church, charmingly decorated with palms and ferns, was the scene of a quiet wedding at 11:30 this morning when Jessie Kathleen, daughter of Rev. James and Mrs. Rollins, was united in matrimony to Harry Christie Barker, M.C., Lieut. Royal Canadian Regiment son of the late Henry T. S. Barker, St. John N.B.

The bride charmingly attired in her travelling suit of navy serge, grey fox furs and smart black toque, with French blue tip, and carrying a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley, entered the church, under the escort of her uncle, Mr. J. Stuart McCann, of Kingston, to the wedding march played by Mr. John Crane. She was attended by Miss Bessie Mather, of Peterborough, who wore a navy suit and black hat and carried American Beauty roses. The groom was supported by Captain W. S. McCann, of Kingston, and the ceremony was performed by the bride's father, Captain the Rev. James Rollins, pastor of St. Andrew's Church. During the signing of the register, Miss Helen MacLaren sang "O Perfect Love" very sweetly.

As the bridal party left the church after the ceremony to return to St. Andrew's Manse, where a small reception was held St. John's Chimes pealed appropriate airs. Later the bride and groom motored to Port Hope, from where they will proceed to New York and Washington. They will reside at St. John, N.B.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mrs. F. C. Foster, of St. John, N. B.; Major L. W. Barker, D. S. O., and Mrs. Barker and Miss Phyllis Barker of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. David Gillies, of Carlton Place, Major A. B. Gillies, O. B. E., Mrs. Gillies and Master David Gillies, of Kingston, Captain W. S. McCann of Kingston and Miss Curlette, of Toronto.

Tea will be served after the meeting, followed by an hour of music until church time. Friday, October 31, is the night of the big Hallowe'en party, followed by one for juniors on Saturday afternoon, November 1 at 3.30. The date of the annual bazaar has been set for December 2. Keep this in mind.

CHARLES GARSIDE BADLY INJURED

FRIGHTENED HORSE KNOCKS HIM DOWN AND HE SUSTAINS SEVERE INJURIES.

On Saturday afternoon Charles Garside, the four-year-old son of Ald Garside, was rather seriously injured when knocked down by a run-a-way horse.

The horse was frightened by Dunfor'ts car and ran away, dashing madly upon the sidewalk where it ran over little Charles Garside inflicting a nasty cut just above the eye. The child apparently had been playing with a stick with a nail in it and the nail entered his chin, passing right through and cutting his tongue. A doctor was summoned and sewed up the child's wounds with several stitches. It is reported that he is doing as well as could be expected.

IN MEMORIAM

SIMPSON—In loving memory of my dear son, Herbert, L. Simpson, who was killed in action 11th. October, 1918.

If we could have raised his dying head
Or heard his last farewell
The grief would not have been so hard
For us who loved him well.

We think of him in silence
And his name we oft recall;
But there's nothing left to answer
But his photo on the wall.

Friends may think we oft forget him
When at times they see us smile;
But they little know the sorrow
Which that smile hides all the while.

H. H. DEWART MAY BE CALLED ON TO FORM GOVT. SIR ADAM BECK NEXT PREMIER

Such Seems the Opinion of Well Informed People in Toronto Always Assuming, However, That Sir Wm. Hearst Resigns U. F. O. Have Forty-Five Straight Members in House.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 22.— That Hartley Dewart, leader of the Liberals in the new Ontario Legislature will be called on to form a Provincial Government, but that Hon. Adam Beck, defeated Independent Conservative, in London, and Chairman of the Provincial Hydro-Electric Commission, will be the next Premier of Ontario, seems to be the most popular opinion here today among fairly well informed people discussing the much mixed political situation in this province.

45 U. F. O. Seats

This is assuming that Sir William Hearst, whose Government was defeated on Monday, and who is meeting with his cabinet today decides to hand in the resignations of himself and Ministers to Lieutenant Governor Sir John Hendrie. This action is naturally expected as the position of the Government has grown worse in the matter of supporters during the last twenty-four hours, by news of reversal in South Grey, where it is now conceded that Hon. Dr. Jamieson speaker in the last House, has been defeated by G. M. Leason, United Farmers' candidate, according to completed figures. This gives the U. F. O. forty-five straight members in the House of 111 seats; and if they combine with the Labor delegation of 11 members and one soldier and one Independent Liberal, a Farmers' Coalition would have a majority of 5 over all others in the House.

However, it is conceded generally today that the Lieutenant-Governor, constitutianlly, would have the right to call on Hartley Dewart, leader of the last "official" Opposition in the House, to form a new Government, although his Liberal following in the newly elected House is second to U. F. O. in numbers.

May Call on Farmers.

In an interview today, Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor, in reply to criticism made by Mr. Dewart in reference to a statement made by Sir John [illegible], said "why should Mr. Dewart [illegible] he is not the man I will call [illegible] form aGovernment. Government has to be carried on, however, by somebody at present outside the elected House it is cannot be found among the already elected members. Unless Mr. Dewart can form a coalition which hardly seems likely, the Lieutenant-Governor will then probably call on a leader of United Farmers, and it would be no surprise to many people if the Farmers at their convention here this afternoon chose as their leader Sir Adam Beck.

Favor Coalition.

The situation regarding U. F. O. so far as could be gathered from the convention with U. F. O. delegates before they met today in convention seemed to favor the creation of a Coalition Government with the U. F. O. in control under a strong leader to be chosen probably this afternoon Leaders of Farmers today stated that a conference had been held with Sir Adam Beck on the subject, and their report was to be made to the convention this afternoon.

Conservatives Meet.

Sir William Hearst and his colleagues of the Ontario Conservative Cabinet were in session all morning in regard to the situation arising from the elections on Monday. On adjourning for lunch a statement was given out that no decision had been arrived at and the conference would be resumed this afternoon.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY FOR CITY IF RATEPAYERS SAY THE WORD

Asked to Vote Friday on By-law to Aid Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Co.

Now that the elections are over and the referendum question practically settled, Peterborough ratepayers would do well to concentrate their attention in a municipal issue of great importance upon which they are asked to vote on Friday next. The question they will be asked to then decide is whether this city shall or shal not aid the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company to locate here in the building vacated by the Stickney Motors Limited, better known perhaps as the old Cordage Works, and upon their decision rests the responsibility for this city acquiring or rejecting a flourishing new industry sought after by many Canadian communities.

The company is an established one with two factories in Nashua, New Hampshire, U. S. A., employing over 750 hands, one in Middleton, Ohio, and yet another in Leicester, England. They manufacture a line of goods for which there is an assured and growing demand in Canada, and are confident of a big annual turnover in Peterborough, if this city's ratepayers but say the word.

The bylaw proposes that this city shall purchase the old Cordage property for $50,000, expend $7,000 in improvements thereon and rent these premises to the company at seven per cent interest. The firm is also to have a fixed assessment of $10,000 for ten years.

The help employed by the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company is almost entirely male, but four or five women being engaged in any one of their factories.

City Congratulated.

From many sources Peterborough is congratulated on its opportunity to secure the Nashua concern as one of its industries, among which is the following:

Extract from a letter written to Mr. William E. Payton, 305 King Street, by Mr. Frank L. Arnold, formerly with the Canadian General Electric Company, who is now a me[illegible] & Company, of Nashua, N.H., in regard to the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company:—

"I was very glad indeed to get your letter and clipping. Your city will be fortunate indeed if you get our company to locate there. It is Carter, Rice & Company, with another name. I am not connected with the wax paper company as I am in the machine department, which is in another part of the city. We have machines in Toronto and shall undoubtedly have some in Peterborough when we commence to make our paper there. I told the man who is to take charge what a fine city you have. I am travelling quite a lot and may happen to be near enough to Peterborough to visit you and see how you all are. I don't suppose I would know very many of the band boys but I might know a few. I get a royalty out of the machines so am on easy street, as they say."

The explanation of Mr. Arnold's reference to the Nashua people as the Carter, Rice & Company is that the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company is accosiated with other industries; and should they locate here, Peterborough may reasonably look forward to other of their associated firms seeking a site for a Canadian branch in this city.

On page five will be found two illustrations of one of this big concern's two factories in Nashua, which indicate the size of their business operations in that city.

$20,000 ASKED FOR 35 ACRES OF LAND FOR SEWAGE DISPOSAL PURPOSES

City May Decide to Resort to Expropriation Proceedings Special Site Committee Faces a Vexing Problem

What is holding up progress in the city's sewage disposal plant plants? If you desire an answer ask this question of a member of the special site committee of the Council. They met in long session last night in a vain endeavor to come to an agreement with Mr. A. Wilson for the purchase of his property east of the river in Otonabee at a price agreeable to both parties.

The city received an offer for 36 acres of the Kennedy farm, the one north of Wilson's, for $25,000 but committee do not consider this as advantageous for their purpose as the Wilson property.

At first Mr. Wilson asked $25,000 for 35 acres of his farm or $19,000 for 17½ acres or $45,000 for the whole farm of 138 acres with buildings.

The committee felt that these 35 acres was what they desired for the sewage disposal plant, and offered Wilson $16,000 for it, or $15,000 less than the offer received from him. It appeared a hopeless proposition to agree on a price when there were such vast differences in estimated values, but the committee persevered in their effort to come to some agreement rather than be forced to arbitrate. The committee raised their bid to $12,500 and the Wilsons came down to $22,500.

Mr. Wilson claimed that his price was fair because no matter how successful the disposal plant proved it would remain a detriment to his adjoining property, including three buildings. The city claimed on the other hand that their offer was nearer the value of the land, and asserted that in the States modern sewage disposal plants are not a detriment to the surrounding country.

After considerable discussion, upon suggestion by Ald McIntyre, the committee raised their offer to $15,000, without prejudice. The nearest Mr Wilson would come to this offer was $20,000 and the committee adjourned to reconsider the Kennedy proposition before coming to any definite conclusion.

This leaves the city the option of paying $20,000 for 35 acres of land or instituting expropriation proceedings. Whatever decision is reached prompt action is imperative, to allow City Engineer Parsons opportunity to draw his plans by December 1, by which time they must be ready if litigation with adjoining townships is to be avoided.

PRINCE IN LONDON AND WOODSTOCK

ENTHUSIASTICALLY ACCLAIMED AT BOTH PLACES — HE VISITS WINDSOR TOMORROW

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 22. The Prince of Wales was given a great reception here today in this city, and also in Woodstock, which he visited early this morning.

Civic addresses, reviews of veterans and other ceremonies featured his visit in both cities.

Tomorrow he will go on to Windsor with his party.

GALT SAYS "NO" DECIDEDLY.

Six Rural Polls Unreported, but No Doubt of Result.

Galt, Oct. 22.—Despite efforts of referendum headquarters here to get full returns on the vote on the referendum, six rural polls are still to be heard from, but there is no doubt as to the outcome of the balloting, all four questions having substantial majorities in the "no" coluhn.

TRUST SIR ADAM BECK.

Galt, Oct. 22.—"Galt city council desire to express to you their great confidence in your administration of Hydro, and sincerely hope you will continue your efforts for the people of Ontario." The above is the wording of a telegram of confidence authorized by the city council to be sent by the mayor to Sir Adam Beck.

SAW HARD FIGHTING YEAR IN FRANCE—GERMANS SIGNED ARMISTICE

Toronto, Oct. 22.—Gunner Charles McDonell, who has been sentenced to be shot for joining in a mutiny with 93 other prisoners who were undergoing a previous sentence at No. 7 Military Prison, Calais, on March 3, has been released from imprisonment and is expected to return to Toronto next month. He is 27 years of age.

McDonell had previously been sentenced to five years' imprisonment at Tournai for being a leader in a mutiny in December, 1918, when the Princess Pats, 42nd, 49th, the R. C. R.'s, the 9th Canadian Engineers and the 3rd Canadian Machine Gun Battalion refused to march on account of lack of food and transports.

Gunner McDonell was born in Ottawa, and was living in Montreal when war was declared. He was rejected six times by Montreal battalions while holding the office of assistant librarian at McGill University. He was finally accepted in August, 1916, went overseas the following [illegible] was transferred to the Canadian Mounted Rifles in England and went with that battalion to France in December, 1917. Later, he transferred to the 3rd Canadian Machine Gun Battalion. During his year of hard fighting before the signing of the armistice he was known as "a good soldier."

Following his sentence, McDonell's wife who had removed from Montreal to Toronto to take a situation in order to better support herself and her four-and-a half years' old child, appealed to Ottawa. She asked that an immediate investigation be held, and pointed out that all the male members of her own family, who were of age, had enlisted, and that her husband's two brothers had also voluntarily enlisted.

The wife's letter reads in part:

"As I understand the crime with which my husband was charged, he took an active part in a demonstration which took place at Nivelle on December 12th or 13th, although he had no part in the inception of it and only accidentally and probably by reason of his high-strung temperament became involved in it. He states, however, as does his comrade, Thomas Goby (whom I have seen several times), that the conditions under which they were existing at that time warranted a demonstration. They were under orders to march two days and rest two days in the days of rest were taken up almost entirely with fatigues and grossly unnecessary shining, etc. The food was not only poor, but they were every short of even bread (Since this letter was written comrades have informed Mrs. McDonell that the meat was full of dead worms.) Conditions after the demonstration were much improved, but my husband, being one of the men who had completely outlined the men's cause against the authorities in charge, was singled out for severe punishment.

On September 26th Mrs McDonell received word from Ottawa that her husband's sentence had been committed to two years and that he would be transferred to Canada about the end of the year. Word came the same day from Ottawa to McDonell's sister stating that he would be transferred on November 24th. About a week ago Mayor Church was advised that he would be released.

WOULD SHUT OUT GERMAN OPERA

HEARING TO-MORROW ON ATTEMPT TO RESTRAIN PRODUCTION IN N.Y. THEATRE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Oct. 22.—At the supreme court of justice today Nathan Sijur was granted a temporary injunction restraining the police and city authorities from interfering with the production of a German opera in the Lexington theatre. A hearing on the granting of the permanent injunction will be given tomorrow.

VICTORY LOAN CHAIRMAN MAKES APPEAL TO THE CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH AND COUNTY

Citizens of the City and County of Peterborough:

It is my privilege to be able to state that I have again been selected to serve in the Victory Loan campaign of 1919 as chairman of the organization that is now about completed. It is the more bouyantly, enter on the duty because of the magnificient efforts made in this, our city, in the two previous campaigns. In the last we eclipsed by a very large sum our previous effort and gained a well-deserved place of distinction among the cities that had over-subscribed the allotments. May I venture to predict that this will come about again

Need I put before you the need of united effort to support the loan. Setting aside the matter of civic pride, in that we shall hold up our end in this great national undertaking, we are faced with the fact that markets of the world, hitherto available, are now closed against the country when national funds require to be raised

Canada must turn in on herself. Must become in a measure self-supporting. She has to uphold at home in all fields of action the world-renowned record made by her sons on the battlefield. In supporting the Victory Loan we will do something that the world is ready to notice and to approve.

Let it not be said that in this wealthy city and county is no money for the purpose. Accredited comment says that the savings banks hold accounts now equal or larger than at the time of the last campaign. Loyal, helpful citizens, those who recognize their responsibility, will know what to do. Pass over the money and brace up the loan.

You have security and reward. The investment will [illegible]bly pay and repay From a financial point of view and in the sense of a public duty well performed. It is asked that this be a People's Loan, an effort direct from the people to assist the Government in its closing up of war work and war expense and to provide for the immediate future.

As a citizen of Peterborough, as a property owner, as a man identified most vitally in the prosperity and progress of the city and county, in which you and I live, I respectfully ask that the hands of the committee be supported in this canvas In subscribing, we pledge our confidence in our country, in its great future, in its absolute integrity of purpose and show our intention to hoe our own row and be self-reliant and successful.

I bespeak for all concerned in the proposition a courteous hearing and nothing less than financial recognition. All sums are welcome. The savings of the working man are as essential to the success as the contribution of the wealthy. May I recall the Attic insigna of the bundle of sticks. Bound together there is strength. United in purpose there is concord and work accomplished.

[illegible] campaigns, now dated to begin the week following, full particulars will be laid before you It will be the [illegible] of those soliciting your favors to advise in all things. I ask that there be no hesitation as to the validity of the loan, no reluctance to invest money, no hindrance to removing from the bank or stocking the savings, for the funds will earn for you more than in any other investment that you can safely make.

My entreaty to you is to again put Peterborough on the map. To bring Peterborough right up in the front line in amount, rapidity of subscription and community of effort You are not asked to give—only to lend He who lends quickly in this great undertaking injects a measure of confidence to the campaign that will be an inspiration to those who have taken on the work.

What this old world needs just now, as much as anything is a little decent encouragement. That men do commend the acts of others. That we boost and cease knocking. What Canada needs is men to pitch hold and lift. And your cheerful assistance, to the extent of your means, will prove an incentive to others to do likewise.

I bespeak for myself and confreres a favorable chance to interest you in the loan. In doing as they do they are taking on a share of your work, for we all stand or fall together in this matter. Canada needs money. Let her citizens find it.

Respectfully,

W. H. BRADBURN,

Chairman Victory Loan Organization, Peterborough.

CANDIDATE DIES IN MIDST OF CAMPAIGN

W. J. COWAN, UNIONIST, NORTH ONTARIO, PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY

Cannington, Oct. 22.—Following a hard day's electioneering, Mr. W. J Cowan, Unionist candidate in the North Ontario by-election died suddenly yesterday The vote was to have been polled on Monday next.

Only yesterday, Mr. Cowan was nominated to contest the seat left vacant by the death of Col Sam. Sharpe, M. P. His opponent was President R. H. Halbert of the United Farmers' organization, who, out of respect for his late opponent, postponed his Beaverton meeting, which was to have been addressed by Hon. F. A. Crerar, late Minister of Agriculture.

NO PRAYERS FOR DEAD

American Anglicans Regret Proposal for Change.

Detroit, Oct. 22.—Possibility of a division in the Protestant Episcopal Church was brought to the attention of the Triennial General Convention here again during a fight on the floor of the House of Deputies against the acceptance of a prayer for the blessing of graves.

Thomas Nelson Page, former United States Ambassador to Italy, denouncing the adoption of prayers for the dead, swayed the delegates to such an extent that the prayer objected to was rejected.

PROHIBITION IN ENGLAND

London Oct 22 — A campaign in favor of prohibition has been actively proceeding throughout the country. Distinguished politicians and members of the clergy are participating in it. In addition to the members of regular anti-alcohol organizations.

KRASNIA TAKEN BY THE RUSSIANS

SUCCESS FOR ANTI-BOLSHEVIK ARMY—BATTLE IS STILL RAGING

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Helsingfors, Oct. 22—The capture of Krasnaia, Gorka, on the Gulf of Finland, nealy opposite Kronstadt, by the Northwestern Russian army, is announced from that army's headquarters today. This capture was effected on Monday after severe fighting.

The battle is still continuing.

TWO BOLSHEVIK DESTROYERS SUNK

ATTEMPTED ATTACK ON BRITISH AND ESHONIAN VESSELS PROVES DISASTROUS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 22.— Two Bolshevik torpedo boat destroyers were sunk in Koporia Bay, Gulf of Finland, when they attempted to attack Esthonian vessels and British destroyers on Tuesday, the Admiralty announced today. Six survivors from the Bolshevik vessels were picked up. The British and Esthonians sustained no casualties.

NO ALLIANCE FOR LABOR MEMBERS

WILL VOTE WITH ANY PARTY LEGISLATING IN INTERESTS OF WORKMEN.

MUST ACT INDEPENDENTLY

MANY HAVE SIGNED RECALLS SUBJECT TO THEIR ACTION IN LEGISLATURE

Toronto, Oct. 22.—That there is no probability of the Labor members of the next Provincial Legislature allying themselves permanently with any party, either Liberal, Conservative or U. F. O., is the opinion of James Simpson, editor of the Industrial Banner and candidate in West York.

"I do not think the Labor members will favor any particular party," said Mr. Simpson. "Labor members are expected to act independently and vote with whatever party is legislating in the interest of the workingman

Mr. Simpson said he understood that a number of the new Labor candidates, now elected, had signed recalls pledging themselves to their constituents to exercise their power in Parliament to the entire satisfaction of the Labor interests. Mr. Simpson observed that while the recalls were not binding on the Labor members, the latter would be in honor bound to keep their promises.

"I do not think there is any doubt but that they will act as a group. Several of the Labor candidates received the support of the U. F. O. and naturally there will be a tendency for the Labor group to be more in harmony with the U. F. O. than with the Liberals or Conservatives But in the last analysis they will support that party which is most favorable to Labor. The Independent Labor Party would not stand for anything else. The Labor members will be expected to act in the same way as the representatives of the I. L. P. in Great Britain act in the British House of Commons, that is, independently and supporting that party which legislates in favor of the workingman."

Among the duties of the Labor members will be that of proposing legislation on behalf of the laboring class and offering amendments to existing legislation and to legislation being introduced by other parties, Mr. Simpson explained.

NEW EDUCATION SCHEME FOR ENG.

ECONOMY THE WATCHWORD OF PARLIAMENTARY SESSION WHICH OPENS TODAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 22.—Economy is the watchword of the session of Parliament which opens today, and efforts are to be made by members of the House of Commons to throw into discard that military programme outlined in the last budget.

New Projects.

New education schemes and the proposal to construct at cost, thousand of homes for workingmen, Governmental military and financial commitments, national policy regarding Russia, military occupation of Ireland with plan for Irish Home Rule, and the labor party's demand for nationalization of mines and railways will be important matters to come before Parliament this session.

Question of Policies.

It is expected that members of the House will closely question the Government as to its policies, especially regarding expenditures, and Mr. Lloyd George may answer these questions in a few days.

A. Hector, St. Pohn, has been appointed Port Agent of the Canadian General Merchant Marine at Halifax.

ONE MILLION MAJORITY FOR THE NOES ON REFERENDUM VOTE NOW RECORDED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 22. — One million majority for the "drys" has already been piled up in the aggregate result of voting on the four questions of the referendum on Monday

This is an analysis of returns up to 1 p.m. today, and they are still coming in, all with big majorities for the "noes."

Question one has a majority of 286,758, question 2, a majority of 231,379, question 3, a majority of 252,567 and question 4, a majority of 172,121

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1919.

CHANCE FOR A NEW INDUSTRY.

PETERBOROUGH has another opportunity to secure a new industry, one that is of established reputation and will afford employment to a large number of men. It is one, too, in which women and children are not taken into the service.

On Friday a money bylaw will be submitted to the ratepayers. The proposition is that the city purchase the old cordage plant for $50,000, a plant easily worth three times that amount, and that $7000 be spent in improvements. The plant will then be leased for a number of years to the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company of Nashua, New Hampshire, at a yearly rental of seven per cent. on the city's investment. A fixed assessment of $10,000 on the plant is to be allowed for ten years, the company, of course, to pay the taxes.

If the bylaw carries, the company will not leave their headquarters in New Hampshire, but the Peterborough plant will be another extension of their business. They already have large branches at Middletown, Ohio, and in Leicester, England. At the home factory they employ 650 men.

The company is a long-established one of excellent business reputation, and the approval of the bylaw by the ratepayers will be the means of establishing another desirable manufacturing plant in this city.

ORGANIZING THE LEGISLATURE.

THE ONTARIO Legislature, according to the figures today, shows a membership of forty-four farmers, twenty-six Conservatives, twenty-eight Liberals, eleven Labor men, and two Independents, both of the latter no doubt being willing to align themselves with the majority, otherwise they will be unable to accomplish anything. Old line politicians in this city say that it will be impossible to form a Government out of such a membership and that Ontario is likely to see another general election within six months, or immediately after the House meets and fails in an attempt to organize.

Even if the farmers were able to form a coalition with the Labor members and the Independents, this would give them a majority of only three, and practical politicians claim that no government could maintain itself upon such a narrow margin. In the days of Premier Ross the Liberals tried it to their own disaster.

A coalition between the U. F. O. and Labor is now regarded as impossible. To the main planks of Labor's platform, the minimum wage law, the eight-hour day and the forty-four-hour week, the farmer could hardly be expected to subscribe. Even if a law were passed providing what Labor asks for, and the farmers were exempted from its operation, the same objection would remain. The employers in the rural sections would be unable to find men to take service with them. One can hardly imagine Thomas Tooms of this riding and E. N. McDonald of East Peterborough getting together on this most complicated of all problems.

The present situation is one unparalleled in the history of Ontario. Not only is the Government defeated but Premier Hearst is no longer a member of the House, and cannot take his place when the Legislature meets. So far, the farmers are without a leader, and the Labor men are in the same position.

But Lieutenant-Governor Hendrie says that he would be within his constitutional rights to call upon some outsider to form a government out of the four parties represented in the Legislature. If this is done, it is possible that Sir Adam Beck will be called to the new position. If any man in Ontario can straighten out the present legislative tangle that man is Sir Adam Beck, who beyond all question would be able to secure loyal support from members of every party in the Legislature.

SETTLED FOR ALL TIME.

RETURNS at the time of writing show that the Ontario Temperance Act has been sustained by a majority of 239,806, and the figures grow as the results in the rural districts come in. Even the fourth question, that which provided for Government liquor stores, has been voted down, the adverse vote now standing at 142,902. This was the question that gave the temperance workers their greatest concern, but their anxiety is at last relieved. There is no doubt as to the sentiments of the people of Ontario. They are for a dry Province, dry in effect as well as in name.

The temperance question, that vexed problem that has been before the people so long, that has figured in so many political campaigns, that has furnished so many texts for the sincere and the hypocritical advocate alike, is at last disposed of for all time. No more will it be made the plaything of the candidate for office. Political parties have now been relieved of all responsibility in this regard.

There is no mistaking the voice of the people. No government, no party leader, however crafty, dare tamper in the future with this matter for his own or his party's aggrandizement after the verdict which the men and women of Ontario have so emphatically rendered.

The man who questions the justice of the laws against murder or theft classes himself with the anarchists, and so renders himself unpopular if not actually meeting with more material rebuke. The day is coming, if not already here, when it will be unpopular to talk against the temperance cause. The individual who objects to the measure will not be so likely to insist upon his right as a Briton to free speech in the face of the tremendous majority that the people have piled up.

And the temperance movement will continue to grow just as it has been gathering strength all these years. The workers will never stop until liquor as a beverage is outlawed and the entire Dominion is dry. Provincial right must give way, one province cannot hope to hold out against eight and so furnish the one weak link in the chain. The entire United States becomes dry by Federal enactment January 16 next. States that choose to remain wet must surrender to the majority. It was the States that have been dry for years that took the lead in the movement for Federal prohibition. Temperance reform gathers force and increases in popularity as time progresses. Prohibition has long since passed the experimental stage. The end of the traffic for all time is in sight.

WHY FARMERS SHOULD HELP.

THE CAMPAIGN for the Victory Loan of 1919, the third within as many years, will open in this city and county next Monday. The organization has been completed in every detail, and it will be found by a reference to the list of officers, published in another column, that as usual the leading citizens of Peterborough are taking an active interest in this patriotic public service. Read the message addressed to the people by Mr. W. H. Bradburn, chairman of the executive committee.

This is a matter in which the farmers of the county are directly interested. They will reap benefit from every dollar that is raised by the canvassers during the campaign, as the fund will to a large extent be used in getting the products of the farm to the markets of the world. That at least some of the farmers of the county realize this was made clear the other day when the members of the North Monaghan Council unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the loan.

Here is a chance for the farmers to help sustain the credit of the county and at the same time bring direct advantage to themselves.

ELECTION SURPRISES.

EVERY ELECTION, Federal or Provincial, furnishes its surprises, but that of last Monday fairly teems with marvels.

J. C. Tolmie of Windsor, choice of the temperance element of the Liberal party for leader, was elected by a large majority, while the Ontario Temperance Act was defeated by at least five to one. It is little to the credit of the voters of the Border City that their mercenary instincts got the better of them and that by their action on Monday they showed their eagerness to make Windsor the liquor supply depot for Detroit and Michigan, where constitutional prohibition is in effect.

Toronto voted dry on all four questions on the referendum ballot, and yet Toronto out of ten representatives elected five men politically in accord with the Liberal leader who owes his present position to the active support of the liquor interests.

Up in the Soo the Ontario Temperance Act was sustained, but Sir William Hearst, Premier of Ontario, and father of that popular legislation, was rejected at the polls.

Ontario as a unit endorsed prohibition and yet Ontario slaughtered the very party that had the courage to give it a real temperance measure.

But it is not necessary to leave home to seek political marvels as furnished by Monday's election. West Peterborough buried under an adverse vote two candidates, both of whom were sincere temperance advocates, and chose a third who would not declare himself on the leading issue before the people.

And yet West Peterborough has sustained the Ontario Temperance Act by a large majority!

NOTES AND COMMENT.

BUT OTHER provinces in Canada have experienced somewhat similar upheavals and still survive.

• • • • •

FORTUNATELY the sessions of the new Legislature are not likely to run into the planting season.

• • • • •

DESPITE the dryness of Ontario, the better class of immigrants will continue to make this Province their home.

• • • • •

SOME ONE SAYS that fashions are always whimsical, but in that regard Ontario electors have fashions beaten a mile.

• • • • •

THERE IS many a man who saves himself from the charge of being a Red by a liberal interpretation of the definition of that term.

• • • • •

DR. CODY'S SERVICES are still available as Minister of Education in a Government that professes to recognize no party lines.

• • • • •

THE U. F. O. are pledged to prohibition. The Ontario Temperance Act has nothing to fear from the party now apparently in control.

• • • • •

THE OLD TOPER may, but the growing youth will never, take to the drinking of substitutes a trifle more poisonous than the original article.

• • • • •

OLD MAN ONTARIO, by rejecting the idea of a state-controlled liquor store, refuses to enter into partnership in a business so unpopular today.

• • • • •

IT IS NOT HARD to understand why some of the smaller nations of Europe object to the role of buffer states, recalling Belgium's recent experience.

• • • • •

THE GLOBE says that if Mr. Dewart had had more courage in dealing with the temperance issue the Liberal party would have fared better in the election. Then Premier Hearst must have had too much.

CHILD LABOR LAWS IN THIS PROVINCE

In the ten hours' agitation in England, in 1831-32, Michael Sadler, the leader of the movement in the House of Commons, said: "Our ancestors could not have supposed it possible—posterity will not believe it true—that a generation of Englishmen could exist, or had existed, that would work lisping infancy of a few summers old, regardless alike of its smiles or tears, and unmoved by its unresisting weakness, twelve, thirteen, fourteen, sixteen hours a day, and through the weary night also, till in the dewy morn of existence, the bud of youth was faded and fell ere it unfolded."

We have come a long way since that time and now the nations have leagued together for the "abolition of child labor and the imposition of such limitations on the labor of young persons as shall permit the continuation of their education and assure their proper physical development." It is opportune, therefore, to make some examination of Canadian legislation for the protection of children in industry so that we may be appraised as to where we stand in relation to the new international standards when they are established.

In Canada no Dominion-wide law as to child labor exists, it being generally held that the subject comes under the purview of the provincial governments. All our provinces have laws for the protection of children and any statement as to child labor standards involves a careful examination of the various provincial statutes dealing with factories, mines, shops, bakeshops, protection of children, and school attendance. At the time this study was made the statutes of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island and the ordinances of the Yukon for 1919 were not available.

The Law in Ontario.

The Factories Act, which applies to factories, shops, offices and office buildings, provides that children under fourteen may not be employed in factories, shops and no child under twelve may be employed in a shop during school hours unless he has a certificate. The maximum for boys under sixteen and girls under eighteen is ten hours a day and sixty hours a week. The exemption for exigencies of trade is also allowed in this Act but boys under sixteen and girls under enghteen may not be employed before 6 a.m., after 9 p.m., or more than twelve and a half a day or seventy-two and a half a week, in a period of thirty-six days in the year. A further exemption, as in Manitoba, is made with reference to shops for Saturday, the day before a statutory holiday, and for the period of December 14 to 24th, when children of twelve years or over may be employed between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. The employment of girls in summer camps is regulated by the 1919 amendment to the Act.

The mining act now in force makes fourteen years the minimum age for boys employed about a mine and seventeen years for boys below ground. The employment of girls is prohibited. By the act of 1919, effective January 1, 1920, the age has been advanced to seventeen years about a mine and eighteen years underground. The eight-hour limit for work underground does not apply unless there are more than six in a shift. This limit went into effect January 1, 1914, in all those parts of the province without county organization. In the remaining parts it may be brought into force by proclamation. No proclamations have been made but much the larger part of the mining operations of the province are in Northern Ontario, where there are no county organizations, and consequently the eight-hour underground law is in force in the mines there.

The Children's Protection Act provides that girls under sixteen and boys under twelve may not be licensed to engage in any street trade, but an exception is made in the case of public entertainments. Children above ten may be employed in a circus or theatre on obtaining a certificate from the head of the municipal council.

The school attendance law requires children between eight and fourteen to attend school for the full term. No child under fourteen may be employed during school hours unless he [illegible] on the ground that his services are required for his maintenance, but this period of exemption may not exceed six weeks in each school term.

The Adolescent School Attendance Act of 1919, effective on proclamation, is in an advanced piece of legislation. It provided for the compulsory school attendance of adolescents between fourteen and eighteen for part time.

DEBT OF GRATITUDE THAT MUST BE MET

To pay the debt of gratitude to the dependents of Canadian Seamen lost in the war; to provide protection and home comfort for seamen who come from the Canadian Ports and to train native born boys for the navy and merchant ships are among the objects of the "Nelson Day" campaign to raise $500,000.

The Navy League of Canada has undertaken this campaign with thorough confidence that the people will see them through with it as they did the "Sailors' Week" campaign last year.

Last year the grateful people of Canada bore their share of providing for the 50,000 dependents of the 14,000 sailors lost to the Empire in the war. This year the Navy League is appealing only for the support of the dependents of Canadian seamen actually lost or injured in the war.

Even under modern conditions the calling of the sailor is a hard one followed only by hardy, brave and adventurous men. In former days the natural hardships, toil, peril, loneliness and privation of the seas were made infinitely worse by the dangers of the sea ports. Harpies of all kinds preyed upon the seamen in his loneliness and need of home. But now by the work of the Navy League through the nine Sailors' Institutes in Canada, seamen in our ports have places of protection and home comfort to which they may go.

To provide and maintain such places is the least that can be done to help the men who go down to the sea in ships to carry our wheat and manufactured products to the ends of the earth. The funds raised in the Nelson Day campaing will help materially to do this.

THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS 25 YEARS AGO

Toronto Telegram)

$5 to $10 monthly rents houses, all kinds, central locality; call for list. Wilkins & Co., 455 King st. east.

An advertisement like the above appearing in the Telegram to-night would probably result in police reserves being called out to keep a mob of house-hunters from blocking traffic on East King street. On the day when it did really appear, March 28th, 1894, it no doubt had the effective results which have always characterized Telegram advertisements, but there is no record of the police having been called to maintain the peace. For in those days, deponent saith, "Toronto was a city of vacant houses inhabited by jobless tenants."

Before the H. C. L.

In the same twenty-five-year-old paper from which this advertisement is reproduced, there are many suggestions that a quarter of a century ago the H.C.L. was an unknown disease. Nevertheless salaries in those days did not so far exceed the needs of the recipients that they need scorn looking on both sides of a quarter before parting with it, for an editorial note remarks that "the career, useful and distinguished, of Augustus T. Freed, the foremost Conservative editor in Canada, reaches a climax in a $1,400 inspectorship of weights and measures."

First of all, see what shelter cost in those days. Here is a solid brick nine-roomed house adjoining Bedford road and Avenue road for $2,750. Another house, solid brick, ten rooms, "elegantly decorated," with three over mantels and grates, furnace and laundry, near College and Euclid, is advertised for sale at $3,100. Or here is a 12 roomed house on Sherbourne street, near the Horticultural Gardens, for $5,700. The advertisement adds that it sold for $10,000 cash two years before.

Houses For Rent.

For $14, $17, $18 per month, it was possible to get nine and eleven-roomed houses on Gifford street, and for $8 to $9.50 the house hunter could take his choice of six-roomed houses on Spruce street, "water free". An eight roomed house on Wellesley street is offered at $15 a month.

Those were vastly other days, as is suggested by a laundry advertisement, which featured "bar-tenders' white coats gotten up at ten cents each." The same fact is suggested that several advertisements for domestics insist that they must be 'well recommmended."

Coal at $5.50 Per Ton.

Having secured the house, it was possible to keep it heated through the winter without plastering it with a mortgage. Hard coal is advertised, well screened and free from dirt, at $5.50 a ton. Hardwood is $5.50 a cord, and "slabs" might be had at $3.50.

Two small shops on Church street on a 35-foot frontage, are offered at $3,100. Perhaps is was the small "overhead" which enabled things to be sold at prices which seem ridiculous. Take clothing, for instance. One store offers boys' tweed suits at $1.90 and $2.50, and that gave "with every boy's suit a fine felt hat, worth 75 cents, free." Another store, with a wider range, perhaps, offered boys' tweed suits at from $1.45 to $5.75, while men's spring overcoats were on sale at from $4.50 to $6, and men's all-tweed suits at from $3.75 to $10. No doubt, with prices like that, dad felt he could blow himself to a fedora hat priced, for best, $2.50 to $3, and for "medium first class" at $1.50 to $2.50. He could also decorate himself in a French cambric or fancy shirt—choice at $1.

Boots.

The boots of lovely woman had not learned to climb in price. "Ask any of the 400," says the advertisement of a Yonge street merchant, "where they are buying their shoes, and 399 will point to our great store." He offered "ladies genuine Russian calf" at 97 cents. Dongola Oxfords were listed at 87 cents, and tan Oxfords at 75 cents. Here is another store offering [illegible] pair Balmoral boots at $3.50. Gents' 2-clasp kid gloves were 75 cents while ladies' Canadian Cashmere hose were but 15 cents a pair, while another store offered a lot of hose in ladies', misses' and children's sizes at 5 cents each. Men's shirts and drawers were 25 cents each.

Things were done in style then. The merchant who offered the best English four-ply collars at 37 cents a half dozen, and three pairs of cuffs to match at a similar price, added that they would be "put up in beautifully gilt boxes."

Furnishing Up.

The young couple feathering their nest could get a 5-piece parlor suite for $39, a kitchen table for $1, good house brooms at 10 cents each, a 10-quart dish pan at the same price, cane-bottomed chairs at 49 cents. And potatoes were 55 cents a bag.

For the summer, here is a 97-acre lot on Lake Joseph offered for $200.

Roomers were easily satisfied then. Here is a nice furnished room on Wilton avenue, not very far from Yonge, wants an occupant, gentleman preferred, at 75 cents a week. Or there is a large front room, with board, no children, private family, at $2 a week. A "lady stenographer," who advertises for board and room between Spadina and Sherbourne streets, is probably fastidious, for she is willing to give $3 a week.

Back of these low prices there may have been some domestic tragedies. The dressmaker who advertises "dresses made from $2 up" may have made a living out of it, but the man who advertised the "block of land with three frontages" must have met adversity, for he declares himself ready to accept less than half the assessment value.

FEMININE LOGIC

The young lady across the way says her father worked in the shop when he was a young man, learning the business from the ground up, and infringed many of his most intricate and valuable patents himself.

A practical joke is one that is salable.

MISS CANADA SAYS

Miss Canada, in a full-page advertisement appearing in this paper today, gives a thorough explanation of her war financing.

It is a satisfactory account of her stewardship prepared in a form of questions and answers as to the spending of the last Victory Loan and the need for the new one. The whole situation is capably set forth.

Every Canadian should read it with the utmost care and keep the facts in mind. It will doubtless answer a great many questions for everyone and increase the determination to make the Victory Loan 1919 an overwhelming success.

President of United States Progresses to Recovery.

Washington, Oct. 23.—President Wilson's physicians were hopeful today that no further complication—like the gland swelling and indigestion from which he suffered—would develop to retard his progress toward recovery

Speedier improvement is expected if no further trouble develops, for the President is resting well, has a good appetite, and is gathering in strength. His condition is about the same, according to unofficial information in advance of the statement of physicians.

Keeping the Home Fires Burning

THERE ARE MANY MEN YET LIVING who can tell about going to the neighbor's, miles away perhaps, to "Borrow" a chunk of fire. Until it arrived, no warmth, no light could be kindled. Whole families have shivered for hours until the messenger could return with the precious spark from a neighbor's fireplace.

Today, with a box of

on the shelf, you need not worry least the fire die down in the night, and you can leave your house for weeks without making elaborate plans for getting a fire started when you return.

A match is a little thing, perhaps, but it has made a big difference in the world. And it makes a difference whether you get good matches or poor ones.

The best assurance of match satisfaction you can have is to see that Eddy's name is on the box.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

Monaghan Mines the "Humor Vein"

There's a merchant in Philadelphia who believes that there is a streak of humor buried somewhere in the makeup of every human being and only awaits bringing to light by a skilful appeal to their humorous sense. That man is T. F. Monaghan, druggist, of Twenty-ninth street and Allegheny Avenue, who is so firmly convinced of this that he has applied it to all angles of his business.

His advertisements, window displays, showcards and counter trims all bear testimony to his faith in the comic side of human nature. "Every man has an ingrained humorous vein in him if you only know how to reach it," says Monaghan. "No matter how serious his business may be or what weight the problems with which his mind is wrestling, the average man looks with relief to anything that will make him smile or help to show up the brighter side of life. That is why I always make it a point to appeal to this sunnier side and I believe that I've been very successful in doing so, greatly to the advantage of my business."

Monaghan's advertisements, run in a neighborhood newspaper, always take the form of jingles containing a humorous allusion to some kind of ailment and inviting the reader to make a trial of his remedies.

"Reason-Whys" Help Wanted Advertising

Gimbel Brothers, New York, took a "flier" in the help market with a three-column advertisement in a New York Sunday paper, explaining the advantages of department store work. The Sunday advertisement reads:

"Women and young girls earn highest salaries in years at big stores.

"New York's great stores have become the most attractive places to work that women can find for a number of reasons:

"First. Hours are attractive 9 a. m. to 5.30 p. m., with Saturdays off during July and August. Liberal vacations with pay and convenient rest hours during the day.

"Second. Transportation is easy, stores being located in the best neighborhoods and in fine modern, fireproof buildings.

"Third. Associations are very congenial, bringing women and girls into contact with shoppers who represent the best people in New York and with fellow-employes of high character.

"Fourth. Women working in factories or doing work that is most congenial; women at home who want to earn money, or young people just starting in will find store work as saleswomen most interesting and a valuable education.

"Fifth. As to salaries, it is said stores are paying highest wages and commissions in their history and many women are earning what would be called very liberal salaries.

"Note. Women who want to work part time, either mornings or afternoons, may find splendid positions.

Stores Feature Service Peddlers Can't Give

In some towns more than others the transient or house-to house competitor cuts in to the sales noticeably. At one time house-to-house venders of corsets sold to many of the women. This was once true of Laramie, Wyo. According to Gish & Hunter, the women used to believe that they were getting advantage of economical prices. They could not feel that they were getting expert service, because the women who peddled the corsets were not trained or even experienced as retail sellers.

Therefore, the store counteracted the competition by playing up to the fact that it had a expert fitting service of the store's corset department salespeople. Then they sold brands that the women have come to recognize as standard. They enlisted the doctors who sent many women who had peculiar needs in the corset line. As these women were fitted satisfactorily they became advertisers for the store. Now the peddler has become a weak competitor of the store.

This Story Starts With the Babies

The Derge-Bodenhausen Clothing Company, of St. Joseph, Mo., believe in catching their customers young in fact, they make every effort to attract their attention when they are only a few hours old.

This doesn't mean that the firm gathers up the babies and brings them down to the store nursery or anything of that kind, though they would undoubtedly do it if necessary. But they are content to do the preliminary "missionary" work through the parents on the principle that the hand that holds the purse strings is the hand that rules the sales.

Every day the store secures, through arrangement with the city Board of Health, a record of the boy babies born within the last twenty-four hours and even before these notices appear in the local papers the following letter is sent to the mother of the new infant:

Dear Madam— Under separate cover we had sent you by the Baby Mine Publishing Company a book called "Baby Mine." No doubt you will find valuable information on every page of this book, and we trust that same will be of service to you.

.....Yours truly.....

Each of these letters is personally signed by Roy C. Bretz, vice president of the Derge-Bodenhausen Company, and the "Baby Mine" book, arriving a few days later, always proves of interest to the mother because it contains directions for feeding, clothing and caring for the new arrival. Naturally this attention is appreciated and inclines the father of the family to drop in at the D-B store the next time he needs anything in the line of clothing.

But, while this attitude on the part of the grown-ups is distinctly pleasing to Derge-Bodenhausen, it isn't what they are striving for. They are after trade which will last for many years to come—all during the lifetime of the baby, the boy and the man, in fact.

As the second step in the campaign they send the baby, when he is a few months old, a tiny pair of trousers cut to fit the average infant of that age, and many mothers have reciprocated by having the child's picture taken in "his to the boys' department, where you will receive a birthday present we have for you.

Extending you many happy returns of the day, we are,

Yours truly.

From this time on the boy is considered to belong to the "live list" of sales prospects, and letters are sent to him and to his parents from time to time, calling their attention to various timely lines and offerings.

About the time, according to the company's card index file, when the boy is ready for his first pair of long trousers he is sent the letter which appears below, the address "Dear Sir" being a touch which has helped wonderfully, because every boy likes Galley 3—Merchants to think that others realize his arrival at the estate of manhood:

Dear Sir—It has been some time since we wrote you. Nevertheless, we hope you are still one of our customers. You won't remember, but we sent you your first pants (ask Dad) and now you are ready for your "first longs."

We would like very much to have the privilege of introducing you to our men's clothing department, just "for old times' sake."

Yours truly.

This letter at first glance, does not appear to possess much "selling punch." There isn't a single mention of price or even of quality in it. But it has produced exceptional results because of its friendly tone and the fact that it takes for granted the point that the recipient will have no further use for the boys' department. From the moment he receives this letter the boy doesn't give his parents a moment's peace until they invest in his first pair of long trousers—and it's a practical certainty that these will come from Derge-Bodenhausen.

The purchase of "D-B" clothing has thus become a habit, the former baby is trading in the young man's section and everybody is happy.

INDIGESTION CAN'T STAY

Stomach Pain, Sourness, Gases, and Acidity ended with "Pape's Diapepsin"

Out-of-order stomachs feel fine at once! When meals don't fit and you belch gas, acids and undigested food, when you feel indigestion pain lumps of distress in stomach, heartburn or headache. Here is instant relief.

Just as soon as you eat a tablet or two of Pape's Diapepsin all the dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach distress caused by acidity will end. These pleasant, harmless tablets of Pape's Diapepsin always puts sick upset acid stomachs in order at once and they cost so little at drug stores.

CAUGHT IN BELT ON WAY TO DEATH

PROMPT ACTION OF FATHER SAVES SON FROM HORRIBLE MANGLING

Elorado, Kas.—Homer Large, a gang pusher at the Empire Company's Marsh well 27, owes his miraculous escape from death to the alertness of his father, Thomas Large. The young man's foot slipped and he was caught just below the waist in the hempen belt that passes around the bull wheel on the oil rig. Large's brother was at the throttle, but was unable to shut off the power before the great drum could make a complete revolution. The father however, ran quickly to the wheel caught the body of his son as it came around from the first spin and wrenched it from the position before it was well started on the second round.

An X-ray examination at the Elorado hospital disclosed Large had suffered a broken pelvis, two cracked ribs and many bruises, and the flesh had been scraped off one of his arms He will recover.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, already for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

NEW VICTORY-LOAN CAMPAIGN OPENS IN THIS COUNTY MONDAY

City and Townships Are This Year Asked to Raise Sum of $1,800,000

A few days more—Monday, October 27th, is the date—and Peterborough, city and county, will be in the grip of the Victory Loan canvassers, who will have for their objective the raising of $1,800,000, including special subscriptions. Readers of The Review should read the pointed appeal of the campaign chairman, which appears in this issue. It tells the need of the hour. It refers with pride to the splendid response Peterborough made in the past in patriotic effort, and calls for a final effort to keep Peterborough in her proud position.

Nothing is being left undone in the effort to give to the Victory Loan campaign the success it deserves. Many of Peterborough's busy business and professional men will break away from their own interests and co-operate one with the other in an endeavor to reach the objective set for Peterborough, and help in the Dominion-wide effort to pile up the money which the Government so urgently needs.

Everybody is giving a hand. From the county comes word that preparations are being made for real work. The council of North Monaghan at the last regular meeting passed the following resolution:

"Moved by Mr. Wilson, seconded by Mr. Henry, That the Municipal Council of the Township of North Monaghan hereby approves of the 1919 Victory Loan as being beneficial to the farmers in financing the sale of the products of the farm.—Carried."

The Great War Veterans' Association, Peterborough branch, and the Peterborough Labor party, also have endorsed the Victory Loan. At a recent meeting of the Veterans, Comrade R. E. Layfield addressed the members of the branch with reference to the loan and the resolution of endorsement was moved by Comrade Miller and seconded by Mr. Goodfellow, the latter a member of the Independent Labor party.

DYSPEPSIA AND HOME LIFE

What a Relief When All the Family Eat the Same Foods! Avoid Dyspepsia, Sour Risings, Gas—Indigestion from Breakfast Sausage to Dinner Mince Pie.

After mother has struggled two or three hours over a hot fire to do the cooking for a hungry family, it is real enjoyment when there isn't a dyspeptic jinx among them. Of course, a case of dyspepsia or daily indigestion must be looked after. But it is far more to the point to prevent as well as to treat sour stomach, belching, water brash, etc., by such a valuable means as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Coddling the stomach with soft food and predigested stuff merely invites sluggishness.

To Be Free of Indigestion Contributes Wonderfully to the Happiness of Home Life.

Eat your little pork sausages for breakfast without fears; have a plate of beans and a piece of pie with cheese for lunch, and end the day with a real dinner, instead of a bowl of bread and milk. Follow each meal with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet and get right back to your natural self.

These tablets digest food and assist the stomach to prepare the content for assimilation in the intestinal tract. Thus you get the practical benefit of the food you eat, a better appetite and a greater freedom in the selection of foods. You will find Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on sale at any drug store in the United States and Canada, as they are considered one of the stand-bys by the druggist.

EXPLOITATION OF RAILWAYS

French Railway Workers to Take a Hand in Management.

Paris, Oct. 22.—A decree instituting the "Committee of Exploitation" to have control of the railroads in France appears in the Journal Officiel.

This is in accordance with the plan of M. Clavaille, Minister of Public Works, which provides for the collaboration of representatives from the different classes of railway workers with the heads of departments and directors in the management of the roads.

"FIDDLE-FIT"

Keep Liver and Bowels Clean and Active with "Cascarets"

Sick headache, billiousness, coated tongue, sour, gassy stomach—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will have you feeling clear, rosy and as fit as a fiddle by morning. They work while you sleep.

INTERESTING NOTES ON REFERENDUM VOTE

Editor Review: Every ward in thecity gave a substantial majority on all four questions.

The west ward gave the largest majority, 1206, on question No. 1.

There are 10368 names on the voters' list, including the names added. Over 9000 voters exercised their franchise, including those who spoiled their ballots. This means that over 5-6ths of the voters went to the polls, a remarkable record.

The referendum committee polled over a 70 per cent. majority on question No. 1, and over a 60 per cent. majority on all the others. This means more than a three-fifth majority on all, a record of which our city may well feel proud.

The referendum polled over 1200 more votes in the city than all three candidates combined.

Contrary to popular prediction the percentage of spoiled ballots was not large, a proof of the splendid work of our canvassers.

The referendum organization will remain intact until the transportation and manufacture of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes is prohibited in the Province. Indications are that this will be accomplished within a year.

This campaign was unique in that there was not a public meeting held or campaign speaker employed and demonstrates that the personal canvass and organization for polling the vote was all that was required under the present condition of enlightened public opinion.

A. B. CUNNINGHAM,
Chairman of the Referendum Com

A bylaw entitled a bylaw to take votes of the ratepayers in the village entitled to vote on money bylaws on a question to be submitted as to whether said ratepayers are in favor of the supply of electric power from the Hydro Commission of Ontario, received its first and second readings, and will be submitted to the ratepayers Nov. 22.

Bylaw No. 564 to authorize the borrowing of money on the security of debentures issued under Bylaw No. 562 of the village of Lakefield until such time as the debentures issued therefrom can be sold, received its several readings and was passed, signed and sealed by the reeve and clerk, rule of order No. 50 being on motion suspended for this meeting.

Moved by Councillor Porter and seconded by Councillor Macdonald, that E. J. Millage's tender for putting steel roofing on new hall be accepted.

On motion, council adjourned.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind incombustible ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomainelike poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before breakfast each morning drink a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the bowels the previous day's poisons and toxins, and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, billiousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

REGRETS DEFEAT OF SIR ADAM BECK

TORONTO MAJOR DECLARES LABOR SHOULD BE ASHAMED OF ITS VICTORY.

Toronto, Oct. 22.—"Labor ought to be ashamed of its victory over Sir Adam Beck in London," says Mayor Church. "The corporations and the Labor people got busy, and through their activities defeated the champion of the Hydro power. In view of the result, I am calling a meeting of the Ontario municipalities for Thursday at the City Hall to consider what shall be done in view of the situation in London. We intend to make it clear that our agreements regarding Hydro power shall not be treated as scraps of paper."

CALL OUTSIDER TO FORM GOVERNMENT

LIEUT-GOVERNOR HENDRIE SAYS THIS COURSE MAY BE NECESSARY

Toronto, Oct. 23.—"I think this is a case for the Lieutenant-Governor," said Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, when asked if he could throw any light on a situation without precedent in the Dominion of Canada and never conceived by authorities on constitutional law, which results from yesterday's election.

"I believe that under the circumstances I can call anyone in the House or out and ask him to form a Government. Of course, it goes without saying that such a man would have to have the support of a majority of the Legislative Assembly in order to carry on," said the Lieutenant Governor.

Sir John reviewed the situation, bringing out trougly that the election results bring about a situation without parallel in Canada. "When the Ross Government was defeated in 1905 Sir George resigned shortly after the election and advised the Lieutenant-Governor to call Sir. Jas Whitney, who had the support of the majority of the House, to form a Government. This was done. Then on the death of Sir James a leader was appointed by the party and he was appointed Premier.

Duty Devolves Upon Lt. Governor.

"Now," said Sir John, "we have two parties without leaders, and two can form a Government that would have a majority support in the House. We have two class parties, representing and elected to represent certain classes of the community. It is entirely different to former situations where, with two parties, the one in power was defeated and the defeated Prime Minister advising the Lieutenant Governor to ask the leader of the other party to form a Cabinet. Yesterday's result is a move away from party representation toward class or factional representation."

Your Country's "Promise to Pay"

WHEN you buy Victory Bonds you hold Canada's solemn promise to repay you their full face value in money at the time stipulated in the bond with interest every six months.

THEREFORE, in point of security, Canada's Victory Bonds are in the first rank of the world's investments because——the principal and interest are as certain of payment as anything can be—backed by the whole assets of Canada—the pledge of honour of Her people—and all the assets of all the people of Canada.

—Victory Bonds are also the most "liquid" form of investment. Without trouble or delay they can be converted into cash at any time.

—Victory Bonds pay a good rate of interest—more than any other investment having equal security—nearly twice the interest paid by Savings Banks.

* * * *

FOR the investment of estate funds, trust funds, sinking funds and all other money which by law or other necessity must be placed only in unquestioned securities, Canada's Victory Bonds are the premier investment.

EXECUTORS, trustees, municipalities, public service corporations, officers of lodges and fraternal societies, and all others with trust funds to invest, can further their own and their country's interest by investing their funds in Victory Bonds.

* * * *

AND because of the good rate of interest which Victory Bonds pay, together with the supreme security behind them, there is every reason to believe that Canada's Victory Bonds, 1919, will increase in value in the open market, as have Victory Bonds of all previous issues.

* * * *

BUT Victory Bonds, 1919, are much more than a sound money investment. They are vital to the continued prosperity of the country. The proceeds of the Victory Loan, 1919, will furnish the means of retaining our great export business, by bringing to Canada foreign orders for agricultural and industrial products, which mean the continued prosperity of every citizen. The Victory Loan, 1919, will also enable Canada to carry out her necessary plans of demobilization—fulfill her pledges to her fighting forces—and to readjust the country from War to Peace conditions.

IN HIS PERSONAL INTEREST—

—to obtain an investment of unrivalled security

—to secure an investment yielding a high interest return

AGAIN IN HIS OWN INTEREST AND THAT OF CANADA—

—to ensure the continued prosperity of the nation

—to enable Canada to discharge her duty to her soldiers

—in order to finance Canada's period of readjustment from War to Peace

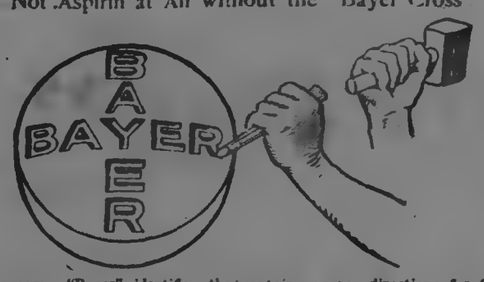
ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"



The name "Bayer" identifies the only genuine Aspirin, the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada. Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally. Tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

SIR ADAM BECK MAY BE CALLED UPON TO LEAD ONTARIO PARTY

That is One Way Out of the Present Tangle in the Legislature—Mr. Dewart Lacks Following—Hon. Dr. Cody is not Politician Enough to Take the Helm.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—What procedure can Sir William Hearst take in an attempt to form a Government?" asked a well-known lawyer on legislation matters. "Sir William Hearst can meet the House if he can secure a seat; and if he cannot do this, then advise the Lieutenant-Govenor to ask some one else to form a Government."

"What would that be?" "Possibly the man that you have in mind—the man we are both thinking of."

"Who?" "Sir Adam Beck."

"He would make a very able leader. The course in England under conditions similar to those now existing in Ontario is for the present Prime Minister to advise the Lieut.-Governor to send for any man he thinks possible to lead."

"Could Mr. Dewart form a Government under the present situation?" "He would be able to form a Government providing he received support from the U. F. O. and Labor."

"What could Sir William Hearst do?" "He could modify the present Government, but there is a man connected with the present Government that could carry on and restore confidence in the party."

"What could the U.F.O. do?" "They would have to send for Bowman, of Manitoulin, their senior member, and after consultation with the Conservatives and Labor they might reach an agreement with Sir William and he could carry on. The Farmers have declared themselves that they are not opposed to the present Government and Sir William could meet their wishes."

"How does the situation strike you?" "Neither the present Government nor the Liberals command a majority, and I think a strong Government might be formed by keeping several of the strong men of the present Cabinet. For instance, the country could not afford to lose Dr. Cody from the head of the Education Department or General Ross. But it all depends upon the party proclivities of the patrons of Labor, and there are possibly enough Tory U. F. O.'s and Labor to sustain the present Government."

Sees Trial of Strength Ahead.

The possibility of any new coalition Government again appealing to the country in the immediate future was forecasted by one of the city's most prominent Conservatives to-day, who contends that under present conditions, the trial of strength will probably take place when a motion to elect the speaker is attempted in the Government.

"The situation appears to be unprecedented. The recognized leader of the party having a majority in opposition to the policy of the Government of the day, would after resignation of the Prime Minister and his advisers, be sent for by the Lieutenant-Govenor and asked if he would undertake the formation of the Government. If after due consideration, he finds himself able to do so, and so reported, he would be authorized to proceed, and would name his ministers, who would carry on the affairs of the Government until they were re-elected as ministers. If this policy should meet with the approval of the House, he would be securely in power."

No Government in Sight.

"As the situation appears today," he continued, "no recognized leader of any party would appear to be able to form a Ministry, and it may well be thought, in this state of affairs, the Lieutenant-Govenor would deem it in the interests of the Government that his present advisers continue to act until the house meets when if the situation is not cleared, the trial of strength would probably take place for a motion to elect the speaker."

"Would Hon. Dr. Cody be likely to be considered as a leader?" he was asked. "This is scarcely possible. Dr. Cody is not sufficient of a politician to handle the situation, and in my opinion, he would decline such a proposal in the interests of carrying out his duties in his own department. The situation might be entirely altered had Sir Adam Beck been returned," he concluded.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

HASTINGS

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, Oct. 22.—The concert given last week by the Morrison girls proved to be a rare treat, each selection being so well rendered as to deserve a hearty encore. The next of the series will be staged in December, and there should be a crowded house.

A marriage of interest to many of the people of Hastings was solemnized in Toronto recently when Miss Hughes became the bride of Mr. W. Breithaupt of Kitchener. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Breithaupt, one of the managers of the Hastings Tannery Co., and has many friends here who join in wishing the happy young couple many years of unalloyed bliss.

Monday was noted for the business air which pervaded the streets. Everyone seemed anxious to be at the polls first to record his or her vote. The show, "Billie Burke," given in the town hall on Wednesday evening of last week was much enjoyed by those present.

Norwood Fair is once more a thing of the past, and, judging from the constant stream of motors passing through the town from early morning, everyone within available distance must have spent the day in Norwood.

An airplane visited our town on Wednesday morning and strewed the streets with different kinds of literature advertisements, temperance, political, etc.

The collectors for the Bible Society have been making their annual calls and have met with a very liberal response.

A meeting of the W. S. O. class of the Methodist Sunday school was held at the home of Miss Laura Smith on Friday evening, when important business items were discussed.

Miss Leslie Berry left during the week for her home in Port Perry after an extended visit with friends in Hastings.

Mr. Lew Comstock, who has been seriously ill, is in a fair way to recovery. His many friends hope to see him out soon.

Mrs. Dickson of Norwood was in town on Monday.

Mr. Lew Beavis is confined to his home suffering from an attack of appendicitis. Latest reports are that he is somewhat improved.

Several of our people motored to Wooler on Friday to take in the horse races.

Mr. and Mrs. Cowdy left during the week for their home in Harrowsmith after an extended visit with their daughter, Mrs. (Rev.) Walsh at the parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Thomson motored to Peterborough on Friday and spent the afternoon.

Miss Florence Stewart has returned from a pleasant visit with Peterborough friends.

Dr. and Mrs. Hess spent Thursday in Peterborough.

Miss Kate German of Peterborough spent Monday in town.

Mr. and Mrs. James Buck of Norwood were in town on Monday.

Mr. Carlos Runnels has accepted a position in Toronto.

Mr. Mark Simpson left last week for Detroit, where he has secured a position.

Miss Delia Plant has returned after visiting friends in South Bend.

Mrs. George Buchanan has been visiting friends in Havelock.

The stork called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Crowley on Monday morning and left a pair of twins, boy and girl.

The result of the referendum vote polled in Hastings is as follows:

	Yes	No	Maj.
1st question ...	93	254	161
2nd question ...	93	254	116
3rd question ...	89	258	169
4th question ...	106	241	135

Thirteen ballots were spoiled.

Campbellford had a grand total of 608 in favor of temperance.

SAN CARLO STARS IN PETERBOROUGH

CITY'S CULTURE ELEMENT AWAITS CURTAIN ON CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA AND PAGLIACCI

PERFORMANCE STARTS 8:15.

Impresario Fortune Gallo. manager of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company, came to Peterboro from Ottawa about noon today with his big operatic aviary, orchestra, chorus and principals making up the hundred members of the organization which is to produce the ever-famous double bill, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," tonight at the Grand. Ottawa has accorded the artists a splendid reception, for it was the first time in more than thirteen years that the San Carloans had appeared in the capitol city, and in those days such artists as Nordica, Campanari, Miss Nielson and Constantino, the Spanish tenor was among the forces. Salzar, the rich-voiced tenor who sings here tonight, replaced Constantino in the company a few years back, and his career has proven most sensational. It will be interesting to hear him in the famous aria, Vesta la Giubba, in the Leoncavallo production this evening—a role wherein he is said to have scarcely an equal.

The casts for the two operas tonight, have already been given out, and there remains nothing now but the gathering of Peterboro's music-lovers and society devotees to make the event complete. That these will assemble in numbers to tax the capacity of the local theatre, there remains no doubt, for, as suggested previously, if the success of tonight's opera reveals a sufficient following for fine events of this character, Peterboro may take its place regularly upon the itinerary of the San Carlo, with different operas to be produced each successive visit.

The performance starts at 8:15 sharp, and will be over a little after 11 p.m.

FLEW UPSIDE DOWN OVER ATLANTIC

WONDERFUL FEATS OF AERIAL NAVIGATION DESCRIBED BY SIR ARTHUR WHITTEN BROWN AT THE GRAND ON THURSDAY EVENING

Speaking of the non-stop Atlantic flight made by himself and Capt. Alcock on June 14, Sir Arthur Witten Brown, who lectures at the Grand on Thursday evening, says that at times they were flying upside down because of the fogs and the mists of the North Atlantic blotting out the sun, moon and stars.

During the flight from the coast of Newfoundland to Ireland a distance of 1,960 miles they flew through atmosphere so cold that ice caked on the instruments, shortly after the "take-off" the small propeller designed to drive the dynamo which generated current for the wireless radio set, jarred loose and was blown away. The men were left without any means of signalling for aid.

Both Alcock and Brown were knighted by the King, shortly after the completion of their stupendous feat. The Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill whilst announcing to them the honor of knighthood at the same time presented them with the Lord Northcliffe "Daily Mail" prize of $50,000.

OXFORD EXPECTS MAJORITY.

With Returns Incomplete, Trend of Vote Against Liquor.

Woodstock, Oct. 22. — When the total vote on the referendum in Oxford has been figured out it is likely the dries will have a majority on all four questions of at least three or four to one. In the city the vote ran about three to one in favor of prohibition. Only a few of the rural districts have yet reported.

CLOTHIERS UP IN ARMS.

Brantford, Oct. 22.—A Victory loan banner entitled "Wear old clothes and buy Victory bonds." displayed prominently in this city, has called forth a vigorous protest from the local clothing trade. The protest is against the trade being singled out as an object for economy.

BOXING CAREER OF YOUNG GRIFFO

In discussing the best fighting man of his inches many persons have different opinions and naturally many give good reasons for their selection but when you get the matter summed up you have to give the honors to the man who deserves the credit. "Young Griffo" hailed from Australia and his correct name was Albert Griffith. When he sailed from Melbourne for the United States, Anthony Diamond wrote a letter to Zeke Abrams of San Francisco and told him that he was sending the cleverest man that Australia ever turned out to the United States, and that no matter who he boxed, large or small, thin or fat, they would not be able to put a glove on and that if he would train he could lick his weight in wildcats.

Every word that Mr. Diamond wrote the San Francisco gentleman was the truth. "Griffo" was a wonder. He was more than that, he was the greatest boxer that ever put up his mitts, and could not be surpassed and Chicago fans who had the good fortune to see him in action got a good run for their money.

Boxed at Tattersalls.

In the old days when Tattersalls was handling almost all the big events Griffo made his initial appearance in Chicago with a young colored fellow named "Young Scotty." Griffo had just hopped off the rattler from the west and was eager to show his wares. The contest was a preliminary and nearly everybody had heard of Griffo and was anxious to see him in action.

To tell the story we will take Scotty's report of the affair. Remember few fellows around here weighing around 125 pounds could beat Scotty and he was some punkins when it came to clever work, but he said after the go:

"Griffo ain't no man at all. He ain't even a human being. He has six sets of hands and I don't know how many feet and he can hit you from all sides, all quarters and sometimes he nails you three or four times with the same hand, just for meanness, and throws in a few for satisfaction.

"I tried to hit him, but he was always going away or inside my punches and before I could recover he was on me again with a variety of punches not in the dictionary. It was not necessary for the referee to tell me I had lost, I knew the facts beforehand."

Griffo Never Trained.

"Scotty was aboveboard and was satisfied that he was not in the same class with the Australian. Griffo never trained for anything, and the only time he ever got in real shape was when he was scheduled to fight Kid Lavigne at the Columbia Athletic club at Robey, which was during the world's fair. The club was owned by John Condon and was managed by Dominick O'Malley, the New Orleans sportsman the Indiana authorities stopped it down there by calling out the militia. The fight was afterwards staged at the Old Battery D on the lake front, under auspices of a combination under the direction of Louis Cohen. The bout was of eight rounds' duration and while Griffo was in fair shape he was in nothing like the condition he was in for the twenty round bout that was scheduled a few weeks before.

The outcome was a draw, but Griffo made a sucker of Lavigne for half the battle. The Michigander was a bear for rough work and would not be denied and finally got Griffo tired and that evened up matters, but it was apparent he was a marvel the way he worked. Everybody else who went against him made out his own report that for cleverness he was the king bee. Solly Smith said "Come on. kid; make a showing." Jack Lewis, too, could do nothing with him and hundreds of others will tell you the same thing.

Treated McAuliffe Rough.

Jack McAuliffe, retired lightweight champion, boxed Griffo east and Griffo put his in the s.o.s. class. He could not hit hard, was not a marvel as a punisher, but for cleverness he was a hummer. Sam Tuckhorn tried awfully hard to get the Australian to sober up and take care of himself, but Griffo was just naturally a fellow that was brought up to go the one way and it was impossible to stop him. In later days he went to the bad several times, and finally those who had his interests at heart made up a purse and purchased tickets to his old home and gave him the money necessary to pay his expenses. Old timers have not forgotten the fellow, and any time they gather around the fireside and comment on the fighters of the past and speak of Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Jeffries, Ryan, Sullivan, Dempsey, McAuliffe, Sharkey, Choynski, Dixon, Gans, Barry Maher, Lavigne and others they don't overlook the little fellow that came all the way from Australia and showed us he had some thing that no one else had.

HARTLEY DEWART SAYS HE SHOULD BE THE NEXT PREMIER OF ONT.

Says His Party Was Victorious on Monday and Counts U. F. O. Labor Members and Independent as Among His Following—No More Manipulation He Says.

Toronto, Oct. 22.—H. Hartley Dewart, the Liberal Leader, thinks he should be the next Premier of Ontario. He issued a statement last night saying that the Lieutenant-Governor's "natural course is to call upon the successful Leader of the Liberal party to form a Government."

Mr. Dewart's statement follows on the heels of an interview with Sir John Hendrie, the Lieutenant-Governor, to the effect that under the circumstances he could "call anyone in the House or out of it and ask him to form a Government."

Mr. Dewart adds that "the people are not in the humor to tolerate any further manipulation of the business of government, no matter what source it comes from."

Believe It Will Be Coalition.

In the meantime politicians are still rubbing their eyes. There is no one just yet in position to say how the King's Government will be formed or who will compose it. That it will be a coalition is the accepted belief in most quarters, and the United Farmers and the Liberals are most commonly spoken of as the two parties upon whom the responsibility will fall, with possibly the Labor party coming into the alliance as well.

U.F.O. Not For Entangling Alliances.

There were few members of the Hearst Cabinet in the city yesterday None of these here would even hazard a guess as to what may be done. Mr. J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the United Farmers, said last night that there was not the slightest danger of the U.F.O. entering into any entangling alliances. Mr. Dewart expressed the opinion that there was no reason why the Liberals, U.F.O., Labor and Soldiers could not get together and form a Government.

Mr. Dewart's statement follows:

"The election returns clearly demonstrate that the people of the Province of Ontario will no longer tolerate the Hearst Administration and its autocratic abuse of power. My advices are that there will be a larger Liberal contingent of members than in the last Legislature. With the United Farmers numerically in the lead it is quite apparent that the Conservatives will not have as many members as the Liberals, and therefore have no right to continue to control the business of the country.

"When the House dissolved there were just two parties in the House. The Hearst Administration has been overwhelmingly beaten, and the principles that the Liberal party has fought for have been vindicated by the election of a controlling group of Liberals, Soldiers, Farmers, and Labor representatives. The principles of their policies they hold largely in common. There can be no reason why they should not get together. They have the same objects in view—the accomplishment of sound, progressive and democratic government for the Province. The problem is one that should not be difficult of solution.

"It is rather early for the Lieutenant-Governor, in an inspired interview, to suggest where he will look for a Leader or how he will deal with the situation. His natural course is to call upon the successful Leader of the Liberal party to form a Government. It will be time enough to discuss the question of calling-in of an outsider when it appears that it will be impossible for the groups to get together which joined in the common cause of establishing popular government.

"The people of the Province of Ontario are not in the humor to tolerate any further manipulation of the business of government, no matter what source it comes from."

CONDITIONS ON ONTARIO FARMS

The following is a summary of reports made by agricultural representatives of the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The outlook for Fall wheat is all that could be desired, the acreage being comparatively large, while the plants are as a rule well topped and rooted.

Durham reports a relatively large crop of buckwheat and also considerable red clover and alsike seed.

Corn has turned out very well. More will be husked this Fall than in previous years and silo corn is also giving good satisfaction both as to quantity and quality. Silos are increasing in number.

Canning factories in Lincoln were taking in late tomatoes during the week at 50 cents a bushel.

Apples in Elgin have been selling at $1 a bushel, tree run, and evaporator stock at 60c to 70c per cwt. Northumberland reports: "Apples are the best crop since 1915. Size and color are fair, but there is a large amount of scab, and the great bulk of the crop is grading domestic No. 3. It is significant that some well-cared-for orchards that received all three sprays at the proper time are showing splendid quality of fruit. It is encouraging to know that where the best management has been practised good results have been obtained, even in a season that has been especially dry. High prices have been paid for good fruit, ranging up to $5 per barrel as it came from the tree. light pressed for storage."

Live stock have been getting into better condition on the unusually good Fall pastures. Elgin dealers have been offering 13c a pound for likely steers, while a few feeders have been picked up for as low as from 9½c to 10 lb. Lambton reports: "Cattle are moving more freely during the last two weeks, as buyers from Buffalo have been covering the county, choosing only first-class feeders. Some Americans have also been purchasing pure bred registered males and females." On the other hand, Haldimand and Lincoln complain that some brood sows are being sacrificed. Lanark also reports that farmers are unloading all surplus stock at a somewhat reduced price.

Referring to cheese, the Northumberland representative states: "Owing to the reduced price, the factory output the latter half of the season will be much below normal. An increasing number of dairymen are shipping cream."

Lambton reports: "Small pigs from six to eight weeks old, which sold last spring at from $15 to $25 a pair can now be bought for $5 to $8 per pair and in some cases for less. The scarcity of rough grains, barley and oats, is accountable for the falling on in hog-raising."

A considerable number of horses have been shipped recently from local points in the county of Durham.

The marketing of field products has been slow. A small quantity of oats has been offering, but very little of the other grains. Middlesex states that on account of the high prices of mill feeds most farmers will feed their grain. Very little hay is going on the market.

Fall plowing is well advanced, and a larger acreage than for many years is now assured.

Labor, generally speaking, is about sufficient, except where there is a rush for silo filling or threshing. Apple pickers in Northumberland who are experienced graders, have been receiving from $20 to $30 a week, in some cases board being included.

BULL IMPROVED AFTER REVENGE

Toronto, Oct. 22.— Mr. Schoell of Buffalo may be all that his admirers claim him to be, but he will have to be that and a little more when he battles Frankie Bull next Friday night in the Armouries, at the Highlanders' show, if the report of the latter's improvement in form, which emanates from his training quarters are correct. The Toronto champion is not one hundred per cent faster, but is punching harder than he ever did in his career, according to all accounts and he does not care whether he wins another match or not as long as he wins this one. He has not forgotten the manner in which Schoell put him over the jumps recently at Buffalo, and he is "set" upon getting revenge.

Frankie got the finest lacing in all his ring experience at the hands of Schoell on that ocasion, and his ribs are still sore from the heavy wallops he stopped in the close work, though the bout was four weeks ago. Bull has a whole lot of ground to make up, and he will have to win by a knockout on Friday to square himself for his rough usage at Buffalo.

Much interest is being evinced in the second meeting of Scottie Lisner and Chip Davis, of Buffalo, also in the re-appearance of Harry Westerby and Norman Lang, who are slated to go six rounds in one of the preliminaries. Both boys in the old days were wicked hitters. Fred Crompton, who is training with Bull, will have a tough opponent in Frankie Conlin, the rangy Buffalonian, who bested "Red" Gallagher at the S.P.A. show, but the veteran is confident that he will pull out on top. Benny Gold and Curly Wilshire should provide a rattling mill, and there should be some mighty jolts when the heavyweights, Sergeants Jim Stockley and Shaw box six rounds for the championship of the regiment.

BALL PLAYERS TALK INCREASES

Persons acquainted intimately with ballplayers are predicting that the chickens hatched during the recent eight game world's series will come home to roost before the winter is over. In other words, magnates will hear a lot about three-quarter of a million world's series when it comes time to talk terms with the players.

That half-million dollar world's series of 1912 gave birth to the Federal League. At least, that series started the idea of a third major league, and the gate receipts of that eight game clash between the Giants and the Red Sox was the stock argument of Jim Gilmore when he was inducing men like Robert Ward, Charles Weeghman and Sinclair to invest fortunes in his rainbow circuit.

The fate of the Federal League probably will defer any one who [illegible] a third major league for some time, but there is no telling what will happen in baseball. One thing is certain, namely, that the players intend to get in on the prosperity wave that hit the game last season.

One already hears such remarks as "Well, they'll have to come across next winter. We were working for wartime salaries and they took in more money than ever before."

Clubs Debts Paid Off.

In a measure that is true. Salaries were lower last year than any time since the Federal League war raised the remuneration of the players to artificial figures. But it also is true that many clubs used their 1919 surplus to pay old debts contracted during the lean baseball years that followed America's entry in the world war. For the first time since buying the Yankees in 1915, Cols. Ruppert and Huston are ahead of the game. Their profits last year made up the losses of other years and left a margin to their credit.

One argument of ball players is that while they have to meet the higher cost of living like other citizens their pay has been reduced to meet it. They also have taken cognizance of the fact that the magnates are thinking seriously of trying out a 168 game schedule next season. This schedule is extremely likely, as Sunday ball in New York and Washington makes it possible to keep most of the teams engaged seven days in the week. Philadelphia, Boston and Pittsburg now are the only towns where Sunday baseball is not a fixture.

"If they play a 168 game schedule will we be paid accordingly or on the basis of the 140 game schedule of 1919?" asked one of the players recently during a discussion on salaries.

Charley Ebbets, the Brooklyn squire, evidently isn't experiencing any trouble with his athletes, despite the fact that the Brooklyn players share in none of the profitable purses that went to the clubs that finished in the first, second and third positions.

Ebbets announces that he already has six players lined up for the campaign of 1920—pitchers Rube Marquard and Clarence Mitchell and infielders Jimmy Johnston, Ivan Olsen, Ray Schmandt and Charles Ward. That is a good start.

Lack of Confidence Amazes.

When one takes into consideration that practically every American has played baseball or understands the game, it is amazing that there have been so many hints, suggestive remarks and shakings of the head in regard to the last world's series played between the champions of the National and American leagues and never has he observed such a lack of confidence in the integrity of the series.

There can be no blinking at the fact that reports and rumors that everything connected with the last series are widespread. On every side one returning from the series is accosted by such remarks as: "Was it really on the level?"

Why should there be all this doubt? Was it the size of the purse? Has the American public so little faith in the men who promote or play its national game to believe that professional athletes couldn't play for a three-quarters of a million house and not fall for temptation?

How could a series like that be fixed and kept quiet? Any one who came in contact with the world's series players and saw the strain they were under can realize how hard the games were contested. Three hundred of the country's leading sporting experts saw the series and not one of them saw the slightest thing that might be regarded with suspicion. And they were men [illegible]

Gamblers Responsible.

The writer traces many of the queer stories connected with the series to sore head gamblers who lost heavily on the Sox, not only in the series, but in the first game. Many people were backing Cicotte in the opener, and when he made such a miserable showing some sore losers started to spread the story that somebody had to go to the little pitching star.

Yet the best pitcher is likely to get a hammering. Cicotte was bombarded just as hard by the Yankees once last summer, and a few days later he blanked the New York team with few hits.

Chicago was such a heavy favorite that the boys who put up big odds on the Sox began to squeal like stuck pigs when they lost. But if Cincinnati had no chance to win then where was the contest?

MORE CONTAGIOUS DISEASES HERE

BOARD OF HEALTH MEET — WILL SUPPORT UTILITIES COMMISSION FOR FILTRATION PLANT

Judging by Dr. McPhearson's report at the Board of Health meeting last night, the condition in the city as regards contageous diseases is gradually growing more serious. There are cases of smallpox in this city and dyptheria is prevalent in the northern and western sections. There are cases of scarlet fever in East City and west of Park street.

The milk test report was better than usual, showing that most milk deliverers are improving the standard of their milk.

Two Deaths at Hospital.

According to Dr. McPhearson's report for the Isolation Hospital there are six inmates at the present time, five cases of dyptheria and of scarlet fever. There has been two deaths [illegible] month.

The question of drainage at the small pox buildings was discussed.

Dr. McPhearson would like to see waterworks installed there to assure convenience and comfort for patients if required this winter. The board decided, however, not to go to any expense in this connection as their expenditure was already high.

No Typhoid Fever.

Dr. McPhearson in speaking of the water condition of the city pointed out that as not a single case of typhoid fever had started in the city this season, the Utolities Commission must be clarifying the water very thoroughly by the chloride method. It was deemed very advisable, however, to support the Utilities Commission in their proposition to establish a filtration plant. This would clear water of all mud and dirt as well as remove disease germs and at the same time leave the water in a palatable condition. The Utilities Commission will, in all probability, but a bylaw before the people on Jan. 1st. for the appropriation of a sum sufficient to erect the plant.

Ontario Newspapers On Monday's Election

A Hot One for Mr. Dewart.

(Toronto Globe.)

Mr. Dewart by his failure to take ground as an individual elector either for or against prohibition injured the cause of Liberalism and gave Liberal farmers who might otherwise have continued to give their support to the party a sufficient excuse for voting for U. F. O. candidates, all of whom were out-and-out prohibitionists.

Yes, They Voted.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal.)

Yes, the women. They voted. And they went strong for that radical measure, the Ontario Temperance Act, then turned around and voted for the radical candidates, leaving high and dry the party that created the O. T. A.

Sir William a Model.

(Kingston Standard.)

All we can say it that it is to be hoped in the interests of the people that a leader will be found who will be brave enough to act up to the words and conduct of Sir William Hearst that, "I did what I thought was right, and if I had to do it over again I would do the same thing."

He Did What Was Right.

(Toronto Star.)

Sir William did that which was right, and what he did lives after him, as the success of the prohibition vote shows. But in his own riding a dead-set was made against him. Knowing that the opponents of prohibition were in the field to punish Sir William Hearst for his services to the cause of prohibition The Star, which had advised him to take it and had applauded him for doing it, could take no other course but uphold him.

A Friend to Ontario.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Sir William Hearst threw away the certainty of victory by his refusal to force a war-time election in 1918. W. H. Hearst may not be recognised as his own or his party's best friend, but never in thought, word or action did Sir William Hearst prove himself other than a devoted friend to Ontario and to public ownership, progress and public rights in Ontario.

The Divided House.

(Belleville Intelligencer.)

The Hearst Government of Ontario, with a magnificent record of honest efficiency and progress, a war record which rings around the world, and a program of advanced legislation, far-reaching in its beneficial scope, has gone down to defeat and been succeeded by a condition critical and dangerous in the extreme—a Legislature divided into factions with no one faction able to assume the reins of Government without combining with another faction.

Brantford Expositor Favors a Coalition Government.

Brantford, Oct. 22. Mayor Macbride, M.P.P., ele t, in an interview, declared that the United Farmers and Labor forces in the Legislature would have Sir Adam Beck to lead such coalition. Mayor Macbride said there was no reason to show conflict with the verdict in London, but it was not desired that the services of Sir Adam Beck should be lost to the Province and to the Hydro enterprise.

OPENING OF A NEW SERVICE TO CONSUMERS

A new idea of providing supplies to the consumer in Peterborough has been inaugurated and installed in E. F. Mason's grocery, where one side of the store is devoted to a self serve system which is convenient and most satisfactory. Each class of goods are in sections with the name above, and every article is priced in plain figures. Customers may help themselves, or can be assisted by the clerk, the goods are taken to the end of the same side where they are wrapped and settled for. The aim of this co-operative system is to provide supplies to consumers at a low cost by eliminating the accounting and delivery expense and help keep down the cost of living.

RADICAL CHANGE IN TREATING INSANE

MANITOBA ADOPTS METHOD OF HOSPITALS, WARDS, AND NO SEGREGATION

Winnipeg, Oct. 22. — Commencing Monday, the method of caring for insane persons undergoes a radical change in Manitoba, and persons suspected of being mentally unsound will not be taken before a Magistrate or a Justice of the Peace, but to the psychopathic ward in the General Hospital to receive immediate expert treatment. The work of classifying and examining all cases will be conducted systematically, and the patients will be sent to one of the two Hospitals for the Insane at Selkirk and Brandon.

Those two institutions hitherto operated under the custodian system have been changed to a system similar to that of a hospital, and wards will be established instead of individual rooms as at present.

Specially trained nurses and internes will be provided, and exhaustive monthly reports of each case will be forwarded to the Superintendent at Winnipeg. It is planned to put an end to segregation of male patients from the female.

TWO WOMEN CANDIDATES WILL BE IN FIELD FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Roused to Action By Board's Refusal to Appoint Mrs. Morris and Work of Organization to Begin at Once---Mr. Eastwood Will Not Serve Longer Than End of Year.

There will be two women candidates for places on the Board of Education at the municipal election on January 1st, next. This action has been decided on following a discussion which was held a the last meeting of the local Council of Women, when the appointment of Mr Vincent Eastwood to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. G. N. Gordon was taken up. The action of the Board in passing over Mrs. W R. Morris, who polled the highest vote of any of the defeated candidates a year ago, has roused the members of the Women's Council and the result will be a vigorous fight on the part of the women of the city for recognition. The work of organization will be taken up at once. Mrs. Morris will probably be one of the two candidates, although she would prefer to work for some one else. The other has not yet been chosen.

The local Council of Women refuse to take seriously the reasons given by some members of the School Board why Mrs. Morris should not be appointed. As to the claim that a man of business experience was required at a time when the Board was faced with a serious building problem, it is pointed out that the contract for the new school had already been let. Mrs. Morris another member of the Board pointed out, was never, it is true, elected to the Board. But men who had never held that position, who had never even been candidates for the honor, were asked to succeed Mr. Gordon. Former members of the Board, who were approached in the same way, refused to consider the proposition on the ground that Mrs. Morris had already gained experience on the position.

Must Reckon With Union Labor.

When the lady candidates find the public asking for votes for members of the School Board they are certain to meet with opposition from a hitherto unexpected quarter. Union labor takes note of the fact that at the last meeting of the Council of Women the members protested against a Saturday half holiday for the letter carriers and other employes at the Post Office. The letter carriers are well organized and can rely on the co-operation of every labor organization in the city when it comes to an election They have been working for a Saturday half holiday for years and only recently secured it. In their fight they were supported by every Board of Trade in Canada, all of these organizations memorializing the Post Office Department to grant the petition of the men Naturally the latter now are inclined to meet with repaisal any attempt to deprive them of a privilege which they have secured only after years of effort.

Mr. Eastwood Undecided.

Mr. Eastwood is still undecided as to whether he will accept the appointment which has been tendered him. In all events he will not serve longer than the end of the year as he has other plans for the future.

The point has been raised that Mr Eastwood, who is a member of the City Trust Commission, cannot for that reason sit on the School Board, this objection being based on an act passed at the session of the Legislature in 1918. There appears, however, to be nothing in the contention as the Act referred to applies only to members of the City Council and not to other municipal bodies.

Soldiers' Memorial.

On Sunday, Oct. 19th, 1919, the unveiling of a Memorial Tablet for those from the congregation who served in the great war of 1914-1919 of the Warsaw Presbyterian Church, was held. The church full of people listened with great interest to the beautiful service, the order of which was as follows:

Organ Prelude, Doxology, Invocation, Psalm selection 41 P I-1-6, Scripture reading, Hebrews 11-32-40, by Rev. W. Archbold, D. D. of Lakefield rector of St. John's Church.) Prayer Solo, Mrs. Foster; Solo Mr. Hilliard Batten.

The commemoration of the fallen who are, Clayton Selkirk, Percy Drew, Charles Hawthorne and Stanley Thompson, was read by the minister Rev. Mr. Brown, after which Rev. Mr Brown spoke feelingly with reference to the boys, with regards to their faithfulness to duty towards the church.

The tablet was then presented by the president of the Ladies' Aid, and accepted by Mr. Munro, trustee of the church. The National Anthem was then sung followed by Hymn 310 Announcements and offertory, anthems, address, Rev. Jull, Presbyterian Church of Lakefield; hymn 812 benediction.

Rev. Archbold, who is in charge of St. Mark's Anglican Church Warsaw, withdrew his service usually held at the same hour, permitting his congregation to attend the service. Permission was obtained for all ranks to wear uniform at that service. About twenty in uniform were present, including Mrs. Millar, Red Cross nurse.

Joseph Wallace

The death took place on Tuesday Oct. 14 at Red Deer, of Joseph Wallace aged 68 years, formerly of Lakefield. The funeral service took place on Tuesday at the Baptist Church, and proceeded to the Lakefield cemetery for internment.

MR. TOOMS
- Thanks To The Electors -

LADIES AND GENLTLEMEN:

I here tender my sincere thanks to the electors of West Peterborough, and also express my appreciation for the magnificent support given me.

Having been in close touch with the workers of this city and understanding their actual needs as I do, I, along with my co-workers, had every confidence in the issue of the election.

It shall be my one endeavor to give my most careful attention to the trust the people have reposed in me, and to the obligations of my position as the successful candidate for the Provincial House.

Your obedient servant,

THOS. TOOMS

To The Electors:

On behalf of the U. F. O. of the Riding of East Peterborough we desire to express our appreciation of the splendid vote accorded us in the recent election.

To our opponents, we will forget every unpleasantness and remember every courtesy extended to us. To our supporters in every part of the riding we are grateful, especially to that splendid following of bright, clean, progressive young men and women who cheerfully made the necessary sacrifice to win.

It will be our earnest endeavor to promote such legislation as will be in the best interests of this constituency and be a real factor in a Government Of the people, For the people. By the people.

Signed on behalf of the U. F. O.,

SEVERE FIGHTING IS IN PROGRESS SIX AND A HALF MILES FROM PETROGRAD

...merous Women are Enrolling in Special Soviet Detachments for Defence of Former Russian Capital—North-Western Russian Army Makes Slow Progress—Bolsheviki Again Defeated.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 23.—Karsnia Gorka, fortified city in the southern shore of the Gulf of Finland, about thirty ...iles west of Petrograd, has been ...ken by anti-Bolshevik troops, according to Helsingfors advices.

Making Slow Progress.

South and southwest of Petrograd the northwestern Russian army seems to be making slow progress. Advices received here, however, would appear to indicate a slight advance by General Yudenitch during the last few days, it being said a severe struggle is in progress six and one-half miles south of the city. Soviet forces are reported to have arrived at Petrograd from Moscow and to be engaged in battle.

Another Defeat.

General Denekine has again defeated the Bolsheviki in the Volga region, having driven the Soviet forces back near Kamyshin, north of Tsaritsyn, according to a wireless message received here from the Denekine headquarters.

The Soviet Government, on the other hand, claims to have broken in the apex of the great wedge driven northward toward Moscow by the Denekine army, the villages of Sievsk and Kromy having been taken. It is said that the Denekine Cossacks are being pursued southward in this region.

Soviet Women Fight.

A Bolshevik wireless message from Moscow says that volunteers are arriving at Petrograd continuously from the remotest Russian villages and are forming special detachments; among them are numerous women. The same message says that Admiral Kolchak in his retreat to Petropavlosk destroyed nearly three million tons of newly-cut grain.

Further wireless reports from Moscow say that the first tanks manufactured in Petrograd were sent against General Yudenitch's front lines and caused the greatest enthusiasm among [illegible] who, aided by these, took numbers of prisoners.

SELF-CONSTITUTED SINN FEIN GOVT. IS ILLEGAL AND INSANE

...ssassins Attached to So-Called Irish Volunteers, Says Viscout French—Law ...r and Order Must Prevail.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 23:—Speaking at Walmsley, Cheshire, last night, Field Marshal Viscount Fren[illegible] Lieutenant and Governor-G[illegible] Ireland, made a bitter attack on the Sinn Fein Government of Ireland.

Sinn Fein Assassins.

Among other things he said, the self-constituted, illegal and insane Sinn Fein Government is possessed of a great secret army called the Irish volunteers, to which are attached assassins whose business it is to murder the police and soldiers who question their decrees in any community. The people are frightened into screening offenders, and courageous efforts on the part of the police are abortive."

"We are anxious," Viscount French added, "to give self-determination, and to be faithful and just to all, but little can possibly be done until law and order are established. When people hear of coersion, I hope they will consider that matter in a just light."

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN HAVE NO QUARREL WITH THE LETTER CARRIERS

Do not Wish to Deprive Postal Employes of Srturday Half Holiday But Would Modify System on Some Occasions

Secretary Fraser of the Board of Trade asked Postmaster Edgar today to send a delegation of letter-carriers and other postal employes to meet a committee of the Board for a conference with regard to the Saturday half holiday. In taking this step the members of the Board are complying with the request, sent in recntly by the Local Council of Women, that this matter be investigated, the Council maintaining that it was a hardship for the citizens to be denied their afternoon mail on the last day of the week. The Letter Carriers' Association declare they are ready and anxious to send the delegation on any day that may be selected by Secretary Fraser.

The letter carriers say that the chief cause of complaint is that citizens are not, under the new arrangement, able to get their Toronto papers on Saturday. They have it figured out that handling these papers does not bring the postoffice department over fifty cents a day, the charge for postage being one-quarter of a cent a pound. For this revenue the papers must be carted to the office in Toronto, carted from the station to the local office, and then delivered by carrier, a system which has nothing to commend it as a business proposition.

If the subscribers of the Toronto papers would take them through the local dealers they could get service every secular day in the year and encourage home enterprise besides.

The carriers hope to meet a deputation from the Local Council of Women at the conference with the Board of Trade.

An Explanation.

The Local Council of Women wish to state that their attitude toward the mail carriers' Saturday half holiday has been incorrectly stated by the press of the city.

Complaints received by the L.C.W. from many citizens indicate a general dissatisfaction with the long hold-up of mail when a public holiday falls on Monday. To relieve this condition without depriving the mail carriers of their weekly half holiday the L. C. W. proposed that this half holiday fall on some day other than Saturday when the following Monday is a public holiday.

This explanation is authorized by the president of the council.

THE ONTARIO ACT PROPERLY PASSED

SEPARATE SCHOOL BOARD DEFINITELY AND FINALLY DEFEATED IN CONTROVERSY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—The Canadian Associated Press despatches today indicate that Ottawa's Separate "Catholic" School Board has been definitely and finally defeated in their controversy with the Ontario Government and Government commission over the forty thousand dollars seized and expended by the Government on separate schools. The Board's appeal has been dismissed with costs and the Ontario Act has been declared quite properly passed.

FARMERS TO STAND ALONE

The members-elect of the United Farmers of Ontario, after due consideration to the matter, have decided that it would be unwise for them to enter into alliance with either of the old parties as parties. They are prepared to assume the fullest share of responsibility and form a government in co-operation with such members of other parties as are in sympathy with their platform and principles and are free to give support thereto. In the formation of a Cabinet full consideration will be given to the various interests of the Province.

J. J. MORRISON,
Secretary U. F. O.

WILL EXPROPRIATE IF NECESSARY

SUCH IS DECISION OF BOARD OF WORKS, RE-PROPERTY FOR DISPOSAL PLANT

At a meeting of the Board of Works last night Mr. Parsons was given instructions to go ahead and prepare his plans for the city sewage disposal plant on the 35 acres of land in Otonabee now owned by Mr. A. Wilson.

This resolution was decided upon when an estimated value of the property was received, which stated that the outside price for the property should be $10,500 or $300 per acre. The lowest Mr. Wilson offered was $20,000 so the Board determined to go ahead with their plans and take immediate steps to expropriate the property.

This is a long looked for step, and practically ends the trouble between the city and the townships of Otonabee and North Monaghan. The plans will be immediately drawn up and by hard work Mr. Parsons hopes to have them ready to present to the Government for approval by Dec. 1st, as required.

Sewer to New School.

A request was also received from the Board of Education to lay a sewer to the new memorial school. This, if constructed, as it undoubtedly will, will have to flow down the Patterson street drain. This is only a 9-inch drain and the city are now up against the proposition of supplying sufficient sewer accommodation as their drains are now carrying a flow that tests their capacity.

The matter of the sewer to this school was left for the city engineer and chairman of the Board of Works to look into and prepare a bylaw for the next session of the Council.

SOVIETS BACK TO LAST DEFENCE

SUFFER A DISASTROUS DEFEAT SOUTHWEST OF OREL REPORT DECLARES

London, Oct. 22. — Forces of the Russian Soviet Government are being slowly driven back to their last defences in front of Petrograd.

Gen. Yudenitch has captured Pulkova, about seven miles south of the city, and Ligova, less than eight miles to the southwest, according to unofficial reports.

Bolshevik troops are apparently formed along the Petrograd-Luga Pskov railroad, where they are stubbornly contesting each attempt of the Yudenitch forces to drive eastward. The anti-Bolsheviki reached a point near Luga last week, but since that time there has been no indication that the railroad has been crossed at any point south of Gatchina which is admitted to be in the hands of the Yudenitch army.

Kiev, which was occupied by Bolshevik troops last week, has been attacked by Gen. Denekine's Cossacks, who have forced the Reds out of most of the city. Southwest of Orel, the Bolsheviki have suffered a disastrous defeat, an official report says.

PEACE OVERTURES BY WILSON IN 1916

ANXIOUS GERMANY MADE TENTATIVE PROPOSALS FROM TINE TO TIDE

COUNT BERNSTORFF TESTIFIES

COMMITTEE INVESTIGATING GERMAN OFFICIALS' RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE WAR

Berlin, Oct. 23. — Count Johann von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador to the U.S., who yesterday was the principal witness before the committee investigating the responsibility of German officials in causing the outbreak of the great war, resumes his testimony to-day.

While on the stand yesterday, Count von Bernstorff told of the efforts made by President Wilson in 1914 and 1916 to find a way to bring peace proposals before the allied Governments. German peace tentatives, made from time to time, however, handicapped Mr. Wilson, in the opinion of the witness, being construed by the allies as evidences of weakness on the part of Germany. It was Count von Bernstorff's impression that Mr. Wilson intended to propose a temperory peace which would not touch on territorial issues and would leave major problems connected with peace to a conference of the belligerents. In 1916, the witness said, President Wilson was in a position to propose peace without victory," but he declared Mr. Wilson deferred action because of the sentiment against Germany in the United States at that time.

Secret Documents.

Secret documents from the Foreign Office are in possession of the committee, and records from the Admiralty and War Office will, it is understood, be produced later.

The former Ambassador said President Wilson held the opinion that the U. S. was the only power possessing sufficient influence to bring about a termination of the war. He referred to an important memorandum, written personally by Emperor William, October 9, 1916, which, at first, it was intended to hand to James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador in Berlin, but which finally was telegraphed to von Bernstorff for transmission to Col. E. M. House, President Wilson's confidential adviser.

Asked to Hurry.

In this memorandum, von Bernstorff said, the Government asked President Wilson to expedite his peace proposals, in view of the fact that the methods of warfare were becoming increasingly severe in form. Count von Bernstorff entered into minute details of alleged conversations with Col. House, with whom he conferred chiefly at Col. House's New York residence. Washington was too public for confidential negotiations, chiefly, von Bernstorff said because of the newspapermen, who despite secretiveness, scattered news inimical to the progress of negotiations.

Von Bernstorff was frequently interrupted by members of the commission of three experts, who asked for elucidation or confirmation of the official documents which were introduced by von Bernstorff.

"When Col. House returned in 1916 from a second visit to Europe," said von Bernstorff, "he told me the chief obstacle to peace then was Paris; that London showed a certain inclination to entertain the proposa and Berlin also assented."

EVERY VOTER SHOULD TURN OUT

FRIDAY'S VOTE IMPORTANT FOR THE PROGRESS OF THE CITY.

It is essential that every voter interested in the progress of the city should turn out Friday and vote in favor of the bylaw, granting the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company certain privileges. A full list of polling sub-divisions appears in this issue, showing everyone where to cast their vote.

It should be carefully noted that property owners only vote on both the by-law concerning the Paper Company and the one concerning the fixed assessment, for the G.W.V.A.

A two-third majority of those that vote is required to pass the first one but a straight majority of those that vote will carry the G.W.V.A. bylaw.

The City Council and members of the Board of Trade are co-operating to gain a majority on both propositions.

Notice Given by Winston Churchill of Drastic Reduction in Personnel of General Staff—Government Has Paid Out Approximately £37,000,000 in Out-of-Work Relief Since Armistice was Signed.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 23.—In discussing national finances in the House of Commons, yesterday, J. Austin Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, said the average daily expenditure from April 1 to September 30, this year, was £4,225,000 and from October 1 to October 15, it was £3,763,000.

Will Reduce Staff.

Colonel Winston Spencer Churchill, Secretary of State for War, has sent a memorandum to the general staff, giving notification of drastic reduction in their personnel by the end of the year. The staff will be reduced forty per cent. below the number of officers enrolled on August 1, at which time the staff had been already reduced by 5,000 men.

Cut Down One-fifth.

An indication of the drastic nature of the cuts in expenditure decided upon by the Cabinet recently was shown in the announcement of Secretary for War Churchill that the army appropriation for the present financial year would be only one-fifth the amount of the present expenditure.

Out-of-Work Doles.

Approximately £37,000,000 have been paid out by the Government in out-of-work doles since the armistice last November, Sir Robert Horne, the Minister of Labor, told the House. Former service men to the number of 275,000 are still receiving such payments.

Austen Chamberlin, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that documents would be laid before the House on Monday, showing the economies that had been effected by the Government, and giving the revised estimates. The Premier, Mr. Chamberlain said, would announce later the date for debate on these matters.

Contract With Germany.

Sir Auckland Geddes informed the House that among the Government contracts placed abroad since the armistice was one with Germany for potash, the amount of the contract being 750,000 pounds sterling.

Strength of Army.

[illegible] strength of the British army, at present 750,000 men,

Washington, Oct. 23.—The United Mine Workers of America today formally rejected the proposal by Secretary of Labor Wilson for a settlement of the coal strike called for November 1st.

WORK IS PLENTIFUL AND WAGES HIGHER

PLACES ARE SOUND FOR NEARLY ALL APPLICANTS FOR EMPLOYMENT

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Increased demand for labor and an upward tendency in wages in some callings, indicating that there is plenty of work available throughout Canada, is shown by recent employment figures obtained from official sources.

Ex-members of the Canadian forces seeking employment have benefited by this condition.

During the past week there were recorded in the Government employment offices 3,423 applications for employment from ex-soldiers and sailors. In the same period there were referred to vacancies 3,288 men, this being practically 96 per cent. of the applications.

Up to date 87,637 applications from ex-members of the forces have been received, and of these 82,962 have been successfully placed, a percentage of 94.60 of the applicants.

There is such a demand for labor that the wages of hushmen have advanced to $75 a month and "all found," which is a record for that industry.

CAMPAIGN OPENS FOR NEW VICTORY LOAN

G. TOWER FERGUSON AND G. R. WARBURTON ADDRESS LOCAL WORKERS.

The local campaign for the new Victory Loan, the canvass for which begins next Monday, was formally opened with a luncheon with the members of the various committees as guests, at the Empress Hotel. If there were any doubts as to the interest taken in the movement, these were set at rest by the large and representative attendance. Success is assured from the beginning. The same active citizens who were behind the former loans are in the field again and have been reinforced by new blood.

W. H. Bradburn, county chairman now, just as he was in 1917 and 1918 presided at the luncheon and rang a note of optimism when he said that the $1,800,000 allotted to Peterborough city and county would be oversubscribed by at least a million.

The speakers at the luncheon were Mr. G. Tower Ferguson of Toronto one of the best known financial authorities in Canada, and chairman of the Ontario committee, and Mr. G. R. Warburton, divisional organizer for the counties of Peterborough, Victoria, Durham, Northumberland, Muskoka and Parry Sound. A report of these speeches will appear in tomorrow's issue.

Mr. F. E. Walden, organist of Knox Church, rendered several piano selections, and sang in admirable style "Mother McCree."

GIVE THE VETERANS A HELPING HAND

To the Citizens of Peterborough:

To-morrow, Oct. 24th, you are asked to vote to authorize the partial exemption from taxation on the Great War Veterans' headquarters.

The property and rooms of the Great War Veterans was presented to them by the citizens of Peterborough and the Veterans accepted this magnificent donation from the citizens with thankfulness and pride of their citizens.

When the grant of $10,000 was given towards this work, the matter was taken up with the Provincial secretary of Toronto and it was stated that an Act would be passed incorporating in the Municipal Act the necessary legislature to enable the municipalities to grant exemption from taxation. This was only partially carried out as exemption did not include school taxes, and also made the exemption subject to the vote of the rate-payers.

The taxes paid formerly on this property was about $150.00 a year. The Veterans taking this property, which was only assessed for $4,600.00, and increased its value to such an extent that it is now assessed for $15,000.00 taxes, of which are about $480.00. If the citizens will go to the polls and vote in favor of exemption, school taxes will be approximately $160.00 or, after grantin gthis exemption, $10.00 more than was received originally per annum. Surely it is not the intention and wish of the citizens who donated these quarters to the Veterans that returned soldiers are loaded up with a fixed charge, $40.00 per month, an amount which will take the dues of eighty members to pay. It is really a hardship to pay $160.00 as we based our estimates at the beginning of the year on promises we received from both the City Council and the Provincial Legislature. The latter did not grant what they promised they would do.

We would ask the citizens to inconvenience themselves to the extent of going to the polls and settling this question. Make a point to do this small favor for the Veterans. We have no organization for this election, we have engaged no rigs to drive you there. It is up to the citizens to voluntary carry out the promises of the City Council as far as they have it in their power.

As citizens of the town, we would ask you to consider favorably the by-law to encourage the new industry in Peterborough. We would also recommend to you the Victory Loan.

Yours faithfully,
THE GREAT WAR VETERANS, ASSOCIATION
H. Stanton, President.

COST OF NEW BRIDGE KEEPING WELL WITHIN THE ESTIMATE

Mr. Barber Advises Board of Works That Construction is Costing Less Than He Anticipated.

"As far as I can judge the contractors are well within their estimated cost of the new bridge construction," stated Mr. Barber at the Board of Works' meeting last night. He pointed out that although quite a large sum had been spent already, all the steel was on hand and most of the lumber. He considered the city had procured a wind-fall in getting that gravel pit so close at hand, and thought that this would save the city possibly $1 a yard in gravel. Mr Barber went on to say that the laying and mixing of concrete had been carried out more cheaply than estimated, and everything considered, so far, the bridge is being constructed below its estimated cost. In view of this Ald. Garside moved that the idea of the steel arch be abandoned and the cement span, as shown in the plans, be constructed. This motion carried, being opposed by Ald. Gainey only, who stood for the steel span across the river.

Ald. Phelan is still objecting to the city paying Mr. Christie's salary, claiming that he is doing work that in the agreement Mr. Barber should undertake. Mr. Barber claimed that if he were called on to pay Christie his salary for the next two years it would cost him money for the privilege of engineering the work rather than receiving compensation for his work. He insisted that there was ample work for three inspectors on the bridge, and to not be short-handed, he was forced to refuse the Mayor's request of getting along with two. Ald. Morrison thought they were getting off easy to have 150 men employed and only three inspectors over them.

The matter was left over for the Special Bridge Committee's consideration.

WHY WORKINGMEN SHOULD HELP.

THE FARMERS of Canada are not the only class that will be benefited by the new Victory oLan, the campaign for which will begin next Monday. The workingmen, too, will be benefited, and for that reason, if on no higher ground, they are asked to do everything in their power to help on the work and to invest their savings by purchasing bonds. By so doing they will make it possible that they be continued in well-paid employment. The markets of Europe are open to the world. The war-wasted countries must be built up. They require manufactured goods as well as the products of the farm, and it takes money to get these goods where they can be converted into cash.

Every chance will be given the small investor to purchase bonds, following the liberal policy that was adopted in the sale of Victory bonds on two former occasions. The banks of the country will advance the money required, and this can be paid back by the subscribers on the installment plan, the payments to be extended over a period of years. No better opportunity to save money, on which interest at the rate of 5½ per cent. a year to be paid every six months, could possibly be given the people of Canada.

One new feature of the coming loan is the decision of the Government to impose an income tax upon the interest paid subscribers, all previous issues having been exempt in this regard. This tax is not likely to affect the small investor, whose interest receipts would scarcely be large enough to figure in the new arrangement. The tax will be paid by the large subscriber who is able to bear such a burden.

THE GRAND TRUNK PURCHASE.

IF A MANUFACTURER, engaged in any line, whether in the production of staples or luxuries, comes a financial cropper, he receives no assistance from the State to tide him over his difficulty. Neither does the Government take over his business for a generous consideration and carry it on with the public funds, making successful or at least continuous operation possible. The man keeping a grocery store or a bake shop, if he has the misfortune to get into deep financial water, has no alternative but to go into bankruptcy.

However, it seems different with a corporation lucky enough to be engaged in the railway business. When the C. N. R. managers reached the end of their tether the Government came to their assistance and relieved them of all financial worries, not to mention other substantial considerations. Then, too, despite the fact that the railway company had been heavily subsidized from the beginning of their venture, and had received material assistance all through the work of construction.

Another line was built under State control and entirely with public funds. The cost so exceeded the estimate that it was found impossible to lease the road to the Grand Trunk Pacific at anything like enough to pay the interest on the investment. The result was that the Government found itself with a white elephant on its hands. Another bankrupt property was added to the list of public-owned utilities.

And now there is a proposition before Parliament providing for the taking over of the Grand Trunk, which is unable to pay dividends. The transaction, if it goes through, will call for the expenditure of millions of dollars. If trained railroad managers cannot make the road pay, how can the Government hope to achieve success? At all events it is likely to be found that the people of Canada will demand that a question of so much moment to themselves shall be submitted to the electorate before Parliament shall take final action.

While he was defending the proposed purchase in the House, Mr. Crerar said that opponents of public ownership argued that the plan opened the door for unfavorable political influence. He added by way of answer to this argument that no more unfortunate influence ever existed in the public life of Canada than that of the private railway companies.

Mr. Crerar is hardly complimentary to his colleagues in Parliament when he tacitly charges that they are liable to be mesmerized by private corporations. If they really are, how can it be expected that they will be immune from temptation when opportunities are greater and the field is wider?

In theory, the public ownership plan may be the ideal system for the operation of utilities, but all such utilities should be acquired on the same business principles as those which are followed in private enterprise.

WOMEN AND THE SCHOOL BOARD.

NO ONE WILL BE inclined to dispute the contention of members of the School Board that men familiar with modern business methods are required. The Board is already well supplied with that class of representatives, some of whom are at the head of large enterprises, familiar with big affairs. Regarded from a purely business standpoint, it is difficult to see how the present membership could be strengthened.

But there are other than commercial features in the management of the local educational system. There are questions in which the welfare of the children are involved, and none but the mothers of pupils can possibly take so active an interest in these matters. So many men appear to believe that they have done their full duty when they have provided school accommodation, an efficient staff of instructors, and have made a businesslike bargain in the matter of putting up a new structure.

A few years ago the idea of woman representatives on the Board of Education was treated with levity, if mentioned at all. But times change. Who a few years ago would have ventured to prophesy that in the year of grace 1919 an independent political organization would have control of the Legislature of Ontario?

There are women on the School Board in Toronto and other centres. Toronto began with one, and now has three, the first member having been re-elected twice. The majority of the teachers of the Public schools of Ontario are women. If women are to be trusted with the highest duty that any mortal can undertake, the instruction of the young, surely women should have a voice in the management of the system under which these instructors operate.

One year ago the women of the city nominated a candidate. They went into the contest without experience and lacking an organization. Yet their nominee missed election by a narrow margin. At the coming election there will be two such candidates. The experience will not be lacking and this time there will be organized effort.

The women candidates will have to take their chances against every variety of factional opposition. Organized Labor will be a factor, but the male candidates for the Board will have to reckon with the same element.

WHO IS TO BE PREMIER?

HARTLEY DEWART went to the country with thirty followers behind him. He emerges from the election with twenty-eight, according to the latest returns. And now, with consummate assurance, Hartley Dewart acclaims himself the successful leader of the Liberal party and asserts tha the should be called to form a government and to fill the office of Premier. Dewart's friends here and elsewhere cackle the fact that he won fifteen seats, including five in Tory Toronto, from the Conservative party. If he did, he lost elsewhere more than he was able to gain. He has less than one-quarter of the total members of the House. The party that he leads is no stronger than it was when he was first elected; it is weaker, numerically and otherwise, than when the appeal was made to the people.

The U. F. O. members of the House, the majority of whom are Liberals who repented and abandoned their old affiliations, now declare that they will not form an alliance with Mr. Dewart's forces. This should dispose of the ambitions of the Liberal leader to hold the highest office in the gift of the people of Ontario.

The Conservatives in the Legislature are evidently wise from the experience of the past and are not likely to repeat their former mistakes. Back in the days of the late Sir Oliver Mowat the Patrons of Industry, a farmers' organization, with a platform practically the same as that of the U. F. O., elected in 1894 over twenty members to the Legislature, sufficient to hold the balance of power. They were chosen as independents, but they allied themselves with the Liberals, and the Mowat Administration had comparatively easy sailing for another four years. In the election of 1898 the Patrons of Industry as a party passed out of existence. The farmer representatives were heard of no more. The attempt to secure something like independent political action went for nothing. The events of the late nineties would be repeated if the U. F. O. contingent in the House consented to make themselves the tail of Hartley Dewart's Liberal kite.

The Liberal party of Ontario was in desperate straits in 1916, but the real disruption did not begin until Mr Dewart was elected in that year, elected by the opponents of prohibition ,and slated from the date of his success as the future leader of a party that, for the sake of gaining power, was willing to abandon anything in the way of moral progress it had ever advocated. When Mr. Dewart was actually chosen leader the real schism occurred. He went to the country, and the result is a weakened following. The Liberal members of the U.F.O will have none of him.

If Hartley Dewart had never been elected to the Legislature, or, when elected, he had never been placed at the head of his party, the Province would never have witnessed the revolution of Monday. The Liberal farmers, sincere in their temperance policy, would never have rebelled as they did and cut themselves free from their old political associations. They, at least, were opposed to having the temperance question manipulated by tricky politicians. The U. F. O. movement would not have grown as it did if the Ontario farmers had had confidence in Mr. Dewart and his hard-shell following. Temperance farmers would have been elected on the old lines, not as independents. The Province would have been spared the spectacle of a Legislature in which there are four parties, none of them strong enough, apparently, to form a government.

HIS ONLY REWARD.

(Montreal Gazette.)

SIR WILLIAM HEARST, largely through his personal action and influence, put on the statute book of Ontario one of the most severe anti-liquor measures ever passed in Canada. He also, through the Government of which he is head, took strong measures to make the law effective. In yesterday's election he was himself defeated, and in the Province generally his Government was badly shaken. The story has been told before. The sense of duty done is the only reward a public man can expect from helping the cause of prohibition.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE GERMANS had their kaiser and the Liberals of Ontario their Dewart. Waterloo for both.

• • • • •

WHAT PROFITS a political leader if he gains five seats in Toronto and drops seven elsewhere?

• • • • •

OF COURSE, none will be so cruel as to deny the Liberals any comfort that they may be able to derive from the result.

• • • • •

MR. BURNHAM to the contrary notwithstanding, the voice of the people will still be accepted as the voice of the Omnipotent.

• • • • •

ANY WOMAN who can rear a family and successfully manage the affairs of a household is surely worthy to sit as a member of the School Board.

GET OUT THE VOTE tomorrow for the bylaw that will bring a new industry to Peterborough, and do not forget to give the Veterans a hand in the claim for tax exemption.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP OF RAILWAYS FAILED

(New York Sun.)

The wreckage of railway earnings under Government operation cannot be better described than by simple comparison in plain arithmetic.

There always have been railroads which in seasons of general adversity have been able to make both ends meet. There always have been roads which, desperately poor in bad times, could not become prosperous in good times. The property deeply mired through the years need not be used to show the desperate plight of the whole American railway system as a whole. The property exceptionally favored can be ignored. Extremes of high and low condition dismissed from consideration, the story is fairly told by the financial decline of the general and vast trackage which threads the wide country and every day does a transportation business which is the prodigy of the world.

Before the present financial destitution no railroad man ever would have regarded the year of 1916 as of golden performance or promise. The Interstate Commerce Commission still was infatuated with its mad policy of starving the railroads Traffic rates were held rigidly down. Coal and other supplies were steadily working up. Equipment was soaring. Labor was driving harder and harder bargains. Construction was not yet prohibitive, but it was burdensome. Operating expenses were grinding at the gross revenues.

Yet in 1916—with only one year intervening between it and Government operation—the great bulk of American railroads, weaving the country from end to end, serving its vast population, industry and business, were in paradise as compared with the second year of Government operation in 1919, with its multiplied passenger rates and its heavily increased freight charges costing the American people not merely tens of millions of dollars, but hundreds, many hundreds, of millions of dollars more a year.

Take examples here, there and everywhere, with the rarely rich and the tragically poor omitted:

In the whole year of 1916 the Baltimore and Ohio transportation bill against the public, expressed by its operating revenues at $111,000,000, was not greatly in excess of its gross revenues for only the first eight months of this year of 1919—$109,000,000. But for the twelve months of 1916 the net revenues—with which to meet interest, provide sinking fund requirements for the discharge of debt, pay dividends and put surplus into betterments and improvements—were more than $32,300,000. This was an average of $2,700,000 a month. In the first eight months of 1919 the net revenues were $1,355,000—a monthly average of about $169,000.

If between now and December 31 the United States Government turns the railroads back to their owners with no relief from the stupendous plight into which they have been dragged by Government operation, the crash of bankruptcy will resound around the globe; for down with the American railway system will go American industry, American business and American bread and butter. Without the American railway system at its very best, in place of its worst of to-day, this nation cannot stand up in the world arena of production and distribution. In the battle for economic supremacy the American people cannot hold their own. The American people, in truth, as civilization has known them in the last half century cannot survive.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor of the Review:—These opinions are those of a private individual. As a member I try to represent the people's wish:

Prohibition has superseded the old cry of salvation. If the prohibition of one possible means of evil is right and proper, the prohibition of all such means is right and proper. It is as plain that this method should have been adopted from the first and that the Creator made a serious mistake in allowing humanity to run wild when he could have stopped it all by prohibiting all means of evil.

Prohibition marks a new era. The Christian era dating from the death of Christ founded upon the regeneration of the hearts of men is no more. Regeneration has given way to prohibition. Henceforth the clergy will the prohibition of the means of committing the seven deadly sins. The modern idea is that an ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure. People will yet live to regret that they have rejected the Divine plan in favor of their own. It is useless to point to the ravages of sin in all its forms and to the means of salvation through repentance when the people have rejected the advisability of repentance in favor of abolishing the means of sin. Regulation is control and self-regulation or self-control is the command of God both through natural and revealed religion. Henceforth we are to be told that religion is not a voluntary matter that the free will and the free agency are discarded theories. When a regiment of the saved march into Heaven, it will be under the flag of compulsion. They were not saved through the death of Christ, but through the law of prohibition. That prohibition is already and effective means to the attainment of the end no one will deny but is it God's plan? If it is, why was Christ called upon to die when prohibition lay ready at hand as an effective means of gaining salvation from the sins of mankind? Thesepetitions of the 18th century was not more fundamental than that which seeks to prohibit that part of creation which has been the cause of evil. In the last analysis the responsibility of the individual ceases and the will of the majority has taken its place. We have yielded to a new temptation and have cut ourselves off from the fatherhood of God and the only means by which under heaven mankind may be saved.

A familiar instance will show my meaning perhaps more clearly to those who have no time to follow up the philosophic and religious principle underlying. Of the fruit of the apple tree sweet cider is made. What is known as the yeast-germ (universally prevalent) turns it to hard cider without the knowledge of mankind. Hard cider is heavily alcoholized and intoxicating. Will the prohibitionist condeman hard cider made wholly by the Creator through His own natural process?

Happy Mothers

Many mothers who in order to keep the home neat and attractive, the children well fed and dressed, continually overdo.

The experience of motherhood alone causes a severe strain upon the system, from which many women recover slowly, and serious feminine disorders may develop unless great care is taken to prevent them.

To such women Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is invaluable. For many years this root and herb medicine has been recognized as the standard remedy for woman's ills, restoring them to a normal, healthy condition.

Mrs. Walsh's Case

Avonport, N. S.—"I have obtained great benefit by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had five children and have taken the Vegetable Compound before each of them was born, except the first one, and if I was pregnant again I would take it. I was always troubled with a bearing down feeling when on my feet but since taking Vegetable Compound I feel a lot better. I hope you will publish this letter if it will help some other suffering women."

A Word to Childless Women

There are women everywhere who long for children in their homes yet are denied this happiness on account of some functional disorder which in many cases would readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such women should not give up hope until they have given this wonderful medicine a trial.

GIVING SCHOOL CHILDREN PIANO LESSONS IN CLASSES OF SIXTEEN

Play as They Sing, and Sing as They Play.

At the last conference of the National Music Supervisors a description of the system of teaching piano music in classes now in operation in the schools of Minneapolis was given by T. P. Giddings, the director of school music of that city. A summary of his remarks follow. It has already been demonstrated that more work can be done in classes by teachers who are properly trained to teach in classes than is commonly done by private teaching. The piano should become more and more a universally used instrument on account of its character. Through the piano or organ it is possible to play complete musical compositions since orchestral works can be produced on the piano.

In our city, piano classes of sixteen were formed the children being from the third, fourth and fifth grades, those who had never had piano lessons. Each class is provided with one or two pianos and smooth engraved keyboards for the use of those who are not at the piano. One child is at the shoulder watching studying and beating time. Each child is furnished with a pasteboard book rest and song primer. The method used makes use of all the instruction the child has had in singing. Having learned the position of "doh" on the piano keyboard, they sing the selection with the sol-fa syllables playing as they sing and singing as they play. Each child remains at the piano only a minute or two, giving way to the child standing while another one takes that place ready to play in his turn a moment later.

A class of sixteen children can be easily handled in this way. The teaching does not begin with the playing of scales. They learn to play little melodies with which they are familiar. Children learn what they come directly in contact with. They really learn what they use.

Two or more pianos may be used but one will do very well. The child then gets one dollar for ten lessons and agrees to practice a half hour each day at their homes or at the home of a neighbor if there is no piano in their own home. In our city a normal training class has been started to instruct piano teachers how to teach by this class method.

"I know the school work and the know piano, and by combining our knowledge they make very successful class teachers," said Mr. Giddings.

The method we follow builds on the knowledge of music the children already have, going from the known to the unknown, and using the piano instead of the voice. They make music they already know by a new method. By singing the known songs as they play they soon become familiar with the unknown piano keyboard.

The rhythm of the songs as sung by the class gives them the sense of moving, and they learn to play by playing, the greatest success being obtained by keeping them playing and singing without a stop.

When the key changes the children learn the necessity of using the black keys in order to make their intervals sound right as they sol-fa them. The black key isn't a matter of theory but a matter of necessary use.

After five or ten lessons in the primer, playing one part melodies, the classes are ready for the piano books. We organized one hundred of these classes the first year, and after giving the pupils a good start in piano playing turned them over to the private teachers. It is desirable to give two lessons weekly. When properly organized, there is no reason why class instruction should not be carried to an advanced stage until the classes are studied by this method.

INSURANCE COMPANIES URGE SINGING

That singing is a source of longevity is a fact that is becoming more and more apparent, with the result that insurance companies as well as physicians are urging the pursuit of vocal study. Albert B. Bach, the veteran teacher of Edinburgh, used to be most emphatic with his pupils over the fact that singing not only strengthens the lungs and voice, but it develops the whole constitution.

The deaf and dumb were pointed out to us having a defective development of the thorax and voice, thereby favoring consumption and a shortened life. Other doctors have pointed out that early deaths reach the highest ratio amongst those who have a small breathing capacity; one famous physician even going as far as to assert that the recent flu epidemic was the hardest on those with a predisposition to weak lungs. With such a deduction in view, it might be well to start children with vocal exercises as early as the seventh year their studies being confined for a time, to the compass of a sixth or an octave. It is reasonable to assume that the earlier in life that a child begins to sing, the more easily does he widen the thorax, the parts which in childhood are cartilaginous, and therefore specially capable of expansion. The organs of the voice have also at an early age the greatest flexibility and pliancy; through deep inspirations and full expirations they strengthen the inner parts, and the development of the internal organs is as important for the health as that of the externals.

A HARP SOLO ASKED FOR.

At a little social evening attended recently, the hostes opened the lid of the phonograph to start some music going and asked "what kind of records would you like to hear—violin, orchestra, contralto solo or quartette?" The question addressed to all the guests was promptly replied to by a lady who said, "have you a harp solo, please?" This incident coming on top of snatches of conversation one hears at any concert or play where there is a good orchestra, and where almost, invariably there is no concealing the audience's appreciation of the harp—these observations combined tend to impress upon the mind how the regard for the harp and harp music is growing. It indicates a high plane of musical ideals as a peep below the surface will show.

The harp is symbolic of good music. The name is never associated with ragtime, or any form of frivolous music. Its very shape, the gracefulness of its outline, spell symmetry. Its tone is sympathetic, readily reaching the heart. It stands apart as the instrument most requiring the caressing touch. Peculiarly fitted as it is for the rendering of the old familiar tunes and the hymns that have become favorites through a lifetime's acquaintance, the harp is perhaps most loved by those who have passed the mid-way of life, those to whom home means more and the outside world less.

For this reason there are those who have faith in the harp some day becoming a home instrument even more than a concert instrument. It is said that some time ago a large audience heard a harp orchestra of sixteen members play Handel's immortal Largo, on which occasion there was not a dry eye in the assembly.

As a people we Canadians are reaching greater heights of musical appreciation, and our love of the harp is a thermometer which shows it.

21,052 LIVE IN KITCHENER

Kitchener, Oct. 22.— Assessment Commissioner Huebnergard submitted the assessment roll to the city council showing the total assessment for the year to be $14,807,202, an increase of $2,201,136 over the previous year. The taxable income is reported at $501,573, an increase of $99,154. The population was reported as 21,052, an increase of 1,285.

DO NOT CONTROL GROCERS

Packer Denies Charges Made by Federal Trade Body.

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Louis F. Swift, president of Swift & Co., to-day denied that the five big packers had threatened to control the grocery trade. His statement was in reply to charges made by the Federal Trade Commission.

"There is no ground for the claim that the large packers bid fair to dominate the wholesale grocery trade," he says. Swift & Co.'s sales of grocery products amount to only a little over 1 per cent of the total wholesale grocery business. The five large packers together handle not to exceed 3 per cent.

"The Trade Commission figures showing the percentage of poultry butter and eggs handled by the large packers are greatly exaggerated." He adds, there is no combination or agreement with other packers in the handling of these products or to divide territory in their purchase or sale.

FOURTEEN TO ONE

Verdict for Prohibition in the Rural Sections of Brant.

Brantford, Oct. 22.—Referendum returns will not be available here until Thursday, when the official count will be given by Returning Officer Wade. Incomplete returns show a majority of from 4,000 to 5,000 negative on all four questions. In the rural districts certain sections showed a vote of 14 to 1 for prohibition.

FIRST SOCIALIST A GORILLA

The first socialist was a gorilla. The first capitalist was also a gorilla. So Charles H. Betts told a large audience of women who gathered at the Republican Club to hear the first of a series of lectures on topics of interest to Miss and Mrs. Voter, given weekly under the auspices of the Republican Women's State Executive Committee.

Mr. Bett's announced subject was "Americanism a Cure for Bolshevism," but he changed it to "Americanism a Cure for Socialism," because while the Socialist, he said, is a gentle thief and the Bolshevist a rude robber, the former is quite as bad a menace in this country. Mr. Bett's gorilla illustration appealed to all the women except one anti-Darwinian in a rear seat, who said that as a good church woman and an earnest wisher of the Republican ticket, she objected to having evolution recognized in her party's campaign.

"The first capitalist," said Mr. Betts, "can easily be visualized sitting at his meal with Mrs. Gorilla and the baby gorillas, the family enjoying the nice sweet cocoanuts and bananas which Father Gorilla, with discrimination and industry, had selected and picked.

"Then along came a bad, lazy Socialist gorilla, who had been too indolent and ignorant to prepare a meal, and he demanded a share of the meal on the ground that he who gathered it was a monopolist. And then the lazy gorilla went off and organized the first Socialist convention in the world . . . .

"There are fifty-seven varieties of Socialists," said Mr. Betts, "ranging all the way from the mentally wormy nuts through the intellectual idiots whose brains are immersed in fluid sentimentality to the savage and hairy Bolshevists whose proper environment is the blood and bushes of the jungle. The only difference between the two extremes is that the Socialist wants to take your property with the aid of the machinery of the State and the Bolshevist wants to take it by force and with the aid of a Red army."

Very Thoughtful.

"I have called, madam, in answer to your advertisement that you have found a dog. My wife thinks it is her Toodles."

"And can you describe it to me?"

"Well—er—not very well. You see I never like to swear in the presence of a lady."

What a Pity!

An untravelled countryman once treated himself to a trip to London. There, for the first time in his life, he saw a schoolgirl go through her gymnastic exercises for the amusement of the little ones with whom she was playing.

After gazing at her with looks of interest and compassion for some time, he asked a boy nearby if she had fits.

"No," replied the boy, "them's gymnastics."

"Ah, how sad," said the man. "How long's she had 'em?"

OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, Oct. 23.—Miss Harris of Toronto is the guest of the Misses Cornwall.

Miss Parker of Swift Current Sask., is visiting friends in this locality, she being the guest of Mr and Mrs. Wesley Wilson last week.

Miss Wark, assistant High School teacher travelled to her home in Smith's Falls, to cast her vote for temperance.

The village ladies who worked so diligently in the recent referendum campaign, are to be congratulated on the result of their effort in Omemee.

The Presbyterian anniversary service will be held on Sunday, Oct. 26 when Major Burch will preach anniversary sermons. On Monday a fowl supper will be held.

Miss Zufelt went to her home near Peterborough on Monday to cast her vote.

Miss Grace Laidley of Lindsay was in the village on Monday.

Mr. Colwell of Peterborough was in the village on Monday.

Congratulations are in order for Mr. William Brown who last week joined the ranks of the benedicts. Miss Edith Feir, one of our most popular village girls being the bride. Many and sincere are the good wishes which follow the young couple through life.

Excitement High.

Excitement was at a keen pitch all day Monday, the polling booth in Coronation Hall being kept busy until almost five o'clock. Later in the evening the village was thronged with a happy crowd of farmers, who paraded the streets until all hours, serenading the many Wood supporters in the village. Mr. Sandy did not appear on election night.

ROLLO IS LABOR LEADER

Position Given Him When Soldier Vote Was Taken.

W. R. Rollo, of Hamilton, is the nominal leader of the Labor party in the Provincial House. This position was given him when the overseas soldier vote was being taken in the last Federal elections. It then became necessary, for the Labor candidates, some 12 in number, to name their party leader on their ballot forms and, by a unanimous consent, the Hamilton man was selected.

TOLD FORMAN TO GET ANOTHER MAN

O'Brien Says He Did Not Think He Would Ever Be Able To Work Again.

"Tanlac is undoubtedly the finest medicine I have ever taken in my life," said J. T. O'Brien, of 24 Larch street, Toronto, Ontario.

"For a long time," he continued "I was in a terribly run-down condition, suffered from disordered stomach and kidneys, and just seemed to be played out. I had no appetite and suffered agonies from indigestion and gas on my stomach. I had a dull, aching pain right across the small of my back all the time and I would get home from work at night feeling completely exhausted. Nothing did me any good. I lost hope of ever getting well and told the foreman where I work that he'd have to take on somebody in my place, as I felt I couldn't hold out any longer.

"Then one of the men at the works advised me to try Tanlac. I did so, and I am back on the job every day now, and feeling just fine. My appetite is splendid. I eat anything and haven't a sign of indigestion. My kidneys don't bother me and I have gained several pounds in weight. Tanlac relieved my stomach of twenty years standing and that's why I'm boosting it like I do."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. H. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Benike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle & Son.

INCREASED CAR FARES COMBATTED

WINNIPEG CITY WOULD COMPEL COMPANY TO CARRY OUT ITS CONTRACT

Winnipeg, Oct. 22.—Round three in the court battle over six-cent fares was won by the Winnipeg Electric Railway Co., when Chief Justice Perdue dismissed the city's application for permission to appeal from the Public Utilities Commission's order granting the company authority to increase fares. In the Court of the King's Bench within a few days the city will apply for an order compelling the company to live up to its original contract, which specifies a basic fare of five cents.

LABOR NOT LIKELY TO SUPPORT DEWART

BUT WOULD WELCOME ANOTHER ELECTION, SECRETARY JOSEPH MARKS SAYS

Toronto, Oct. 23.—A new election could not come too soon for the Labor party, which is delighted at the result of the present hastily-organized campaign, and is sanguine of he immediate future. "We really jumped into this thing," said Mr. J. T. Marks, secretary of the Independent Labor Party, to whom much credit is due, "and the result is far beyond our expectations. It's surprising. Four days before the Simcoe nomination we had no idea of running there. They did not think a Labor man would stand a chance in that riding. I went up there, however, and organized in some kind of a way in that short time, and our man was elected. We are tickled to death. I think if there were a new election the Farmers and the Labor men would get a large majority. There are plenty of places now where we just failed that would swing our men in the next time. The people didn't take us seriously, and we didn't have time to organize."

Mr. Marks adds that Labor would rather follow the lead of Sir Adam Beck than of Hartley Dewart.

STANDS TO LOSE HALF MILLION

Over Montreal if Government Takes Over the G. T. R.

Montreal, Oct. 23.—The city of Montreal stands to lose $500,000 per annum in taxes if the Government takes over the Grand Trunk, E. R. Decarie, Chairman of the Montreal Administrative Commission, announces. This amount is yearly collected from Grand Trunk property here, which would be exempt if the railway belonged to the Dominion Government. Mr. Decarie points out that the same exemption would apply to Grand Trunk property in other cities.

"I Hope Every City and District Will Win My Flag"

When Edward, Prince of Wales—eager, bright eyed, smiling and sincere—arrived in Canada in August, and when he voiced his great admiration of the wonderful achievements of Canadians, on the fields of battle and at home, once again we were thrilled with joyous pride.

He asked concerning Canada's reconstruction programme, and when he was told of the Victory Loan 1919, he graciously consented to the use of his Coat of Arms on a flag, which is to be the prize of honour for districts achieving their quota in the loan.

In dedicating "The Prince's Flag" at Ottawa on Labor Day, His Royal Highness said in part:—

"It is a great joy to me to be associated with the loan, which is the bridge between war and peace, and which is finishing off the job."

"I hope every city and district will win my flag."

Striking, and beautiful in design, this flag will form no only an unique memento of Victory Year, but a lasting and outstanding souvenir of the visit of His Royal Highness—a visit which will remain as one of the most memorable events in Canada's history.

✦ ✦ ✦ ✦

The flag is made in two sizes, 4 feet 6 inches by 9 feet for small cities, towns and villages, and 7 feet by 13 feet 6 inches for cities of over 10,000 population.

Canada has been divided into canvassing districts by the Victory Loan Organization. Each city forms one district. Other districts have been determined according to population.

Each of these canvassing districts has been allotted a certain amount in Victory Bonds to sell. To win the Prince's Flag, therefore, a district has to sell its allotment. That is the one and simple condition.

Anticipating that many districts will buy far beyond their allotment, the organization decided that for each twenty-five per cent. excess of the quota one Prince of Wales' Crest be awarded. Thus the workers in a district doubling its quota will be the proud winners of four small crests for their Honour Flag. These crests will be sewn to the flag. The Prince's Crest—the three ostrich plumes—is shown at the top of the coat of arms.

To every organization with fifty or more employees, where seventy-five per cent. of the enrollment invests a total of ten per cent. of the annual payroll in Victory Bonds, a supplementary Prince of Wales Flag in smaller form—48 inches by 34 inches—will be awarded.

The allotment for each district has been carefully considered, and is based on a conservative estimate of the purchasing power of the district.

Your district can sell its allotment and thus win the Prince's Flag, provided each person does his or her share.

You will gladly do your part and encourage your neighbour to do his.

Remember YOUR purchase may be the one that decides whether or not your district is to be the proud possessor of the Prince's Flag.

The Prince's Motto is "I Serve"
Will You also Serve?

SIR HENRY DRAYTON, FINANCE MINISTER, EXPLAINS TERMS OF NEW VICTORY LOAN

Bond Issue Possesses Many Attractive Features—Way to Invest Will be Made Easy for Small Subscribers No Tax Exemptions.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Sir Henry Drayton, Minister of Finance, has made known the terms of the forthcoming Victory Loan.

The prospectus will ask for a minimum amount of $300,000,000, with the right to accept all or any part of subscriptions in excess of that sum.

As in previous years subscribers will be given a choice of maturity, five-year bonds due November 1, 1924, or 15-year bonds, due Nov. 1, 1934. The securities will carry interest at the rate of five and a half per cent. per annum, payable May 1, and Nov. 1, and the issue price will be 100 and accrued interest for both maturities, making the income return five and a half per cent. per annum. Purchasers may pay in full on application or in five installments, as follows:

Terms of Payment.

Ten per cent. on application; 20 per cent. December 9, 1919; 20 per cent. January 9, 1920; 20 per cent February 10, 1920; 31.21 per cent. March 9, 1920; The last payment of 31.21 per cent. covers 20 per cent. balance of principal, and 1.21 per cent. representing accrued interest at five and a half per cent. from Nov. 1 to due dates of the respective installments.

As a full half-year's interest will be paid on May 1, 1920, the cost of the bonds will be 100 and interest. If payment is made at the time of application the price will be 100 flat. After the initial payment subscribers to have the privilege of paying in full on any due date thereafter, with accrued interest computed at the rate of five and a half per cent. per annum.

For Small Subscribers.

Arrrangements have again been made with the banks for the purchase of bonds by small subscribers on the installment card system, spreading the payments over ten months. Up to their capacity the banks will also accept bonds from small investors for safe-keeping, without charge, for a period of one year.

As in 1918, bearer bonds will be available through the banks for delivery at the time of application to subscribers making payment in full. Bonds registered as to principal only, or both as to principal and interest, in authorised denominations will be delivered to subscribers making payment in full as soon as the required registration can be made. Bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, and $1000, and may be registered as to principal. Fully registered bonds, the interest on which is paid directly to the owner by Government cheque, will not be issued in denominations lower than $500. The subscription lists will open on October 27, and close on or before November 15, 1919.

Not Exempt From Tax.

As previously intimated by the Minister of Finance, the bonds of the new issue, will not carry the tax-exempt privilege which was attached to the issues made during the war. This means that in computing his Dominion income tax the holder of the new securities who is subject to the tax will be required to include the interest as part of his taxable income.

In making the announcement Sir Henry Drayton said: "This is not my loan, it is not the Government's loan; it is the loan of the people of Canada, backed by all the resources of Canada. It is to be spent to discharge our war commitments and provide national working capital. The security is undoubted, the interest return exceptionally attractive. I confidently appeal to the Canadian people for the same full measure of support that has been given to the previous flotations, which have heralded to the world Canada's capacity and standing."

Purposes of Loan.

The purposes of the loan, which are set out in detail in the official advertisements and literature of the campaign, are described in general terms in the prospectus as follows:

"The proceeds of the loan will be used to pay indebtedness incurred, and to meet expenditures to be made in connection with demobilization (including the authorized war service gratuity to our soldiers, land settlement loans andother purposes connected with their re-establishment into civil life); for capital outlay upon shipbuilding and other national undertakings forming part of Canada's industrial reconstruction program, and for the establishment of any credits for the purchase of grain, foodstuffs, timber and other products and will be spent wholly in Canada."

Previous war loans were:

1st—December, 1915, $100,000,000, 5 per cent., 10 years, issued at 97.5.

2nd—October, 1916 $100,000,000, 5 per cent., 15 years, issued at 97.5.

3rd—March, 1917, $150,000,000, 5 per cent., 20 years, issued at 96.

The Victory Loans were:

1st—November 1917, $150,000,000, 5 1-2 per cent., 5, 10 and 20 years issued at 100.

2nd—November, 1918, $300,000,000, 5 1-2 per cent., 5 and 15 years,

BAD WRECK ON G.T.R. AT REABORO

BIG MOGUL ENGINE LEFT TRACK—TURNED RAIL CAUSE OF ACCIDENT

A bad wreck occurred at Raeboro on the G. T. R. on Sunday morning about 4.30 a. m. when one of the big compound moguls, No. 1231, left the rails, taking with her six cars which were loaded with coal The coal was being carried from Port Hope to Lindsay, being heavy steam fuel for the company.

Fireman B. Watson, of Haliburton ,a returned man, was the most seriously hurt and was immediately rushed to the hospital at Lindsay. He was unfortunate in being buried between the boiler and the coal carrier when the engine overturned and was badly scalded about the left arm and leg, by escaping hot water from the boiler. He also had his shoulder dislocated.

Engineer Chas. Golden, of Lindsay, had a marvellous escape. He was hurled out of the cab window and escaped unhurt with the exception of a few bruises and cuts. Conductor James McElroy was riding in the caboose and was thrown to the top of the cabin, but beyond a few cuts about the head is none the worse of the accident. Brakeman Ed. Slater, of Lindsay, and T. Shuttleworth, of Burnt River, were unhurt.

Dr. White, Railroad Physician, of Lindsay, was rushed to the scene of the accident to render medical assistance to the painfully scalded fireman and others of the crew.

The accident occurred just west of Raeboro station, and is thought to have been caused by a turned rail.

The scene of the wreck was visited by many Omemee people on Sunday afternoon.

KEEPS AN EYE ON MINERS

President Wilson Kept Informed as to Threatened Strike.

Washington, Oct. 22.— President Wilson is being kept informed as to the theatened strike of bituminous coal miners, the treaty situation in the Senate and the National Industrial Conference. It was announced today at the White House that improvement in his condition during the past few days has made it possible for him to receive reports from Secretary Tumulty on these and other pressing problems.

BECOME JUST AS DRY AS THEY WANT

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WILL GO AHEAD WITH TEMPERANCE QUESTION

Ottawa, Oct. 22.—There is no special indication here of any intention on the part of the Government to drop its temperance bills, whatever may be the final result of the Ontario referendum. It was stated definitely by more than one minister, that the Government had not considered any other course. The Federal bills are merely enabling bills to allow the Provices to become just as dry as they themselves want to be.

If the Federal bills pass, and if the Ontario vote is indecisive, at least on the fourth question, there would not be much likelihood of the Ontario Legislature asking for a bone dry referendum, but that would be a question for the Ontario, and not the Ottawa, Government to decide.

FARMERS HAVE CONTROL IN NEW LEGISLATURE

THERE ARE 45 U. F. O. SEVEN CONSERVATIVES AND SIX LIBERALS

Toronto, Oct. 23.—There are 58 farmers in the new Legislature, 45 U. F. O., 7 Conservatives and 6 Liberals. As there are 111 seats in the House the agriculturists have a majority of three over all other occupations.

If the Labor group numbering 11 coalesced with the U. F. O. this combination would give them a majority of three, and with the soldier and the one independent Liberal it would be increased to five. If only a small proportion of the 13 Liberal and Conservative farmers joined, the U. F. O. could, without any trouble administer the affairs of the Province.

The standing with a coalition with the Laborites and the Indepenents would be as follows:

U. F. O.	45
Labor	11
Soldier	1
Independent Liberal	1
	58
Seats in House	111
Members to form coalition	58
Majority for coalition	5

The junction of the Liberal and Conservative farmer members would increase this majority to 16.

Conservative Farmers.

The Conservative farmers are: A. M. Rankin, Frontenac; J. R. Cooke North Hastings; J. C. Joynt, North Huron; Major A. W. Grey, Leeds; R. A. Fowler, Lennox; Major T. L. Kennedy, Peel; Hon. G. S. Henry, East York—7.

The occupations of the other Conservatives are as follows: W. D. Black, Addington, County Commissioner; G. H. Ferguson, Grenville, lawyer; [illegible]ington, physician; G. W. Ecclueston, Muskoka, merchant; H. P. Hill, Ottawa, lawyer; Col. W. H. Price, Parkdale lawyer; Gen. D. M. Hogarth, Port Arthur, real estate; J. A. Mathieu, lumberman; W. T. Allan,Simcoe, lawyer; C. Godfrey, West York, physician.

Major Gray of Leeds is an engineer as well as a farmer.

Liberal Farmers.

The Liberal farmers are: F. Rennie, South Bruce; W. A. Mawhinney, West Bruce; W. J. Bragg, West Durham; J. Govenlock, Centre Hurron; J. A. Calder, North Oxford; N. Parliament, Prince Edward.

The occupations of the other Liberals are as follows: Dr. G. McAlpine, Brockville, veterinary surgeon; M. Lang, Cochrane, contractor; R. L. Bracklin, Kent, lawyer; T. L. Marshall, Lincoln, merchant; S. Clarke, W. Northumberland, merchant; W. E. N. Sinclair, S. Ontario, lawyer; E. J. Pinard, Ottawa, agent; R. R. Hall, Parry Sound, merchant; F. W. Hay, North Perth, grain dealer; G. Evanturel, Prescott, notary; J. W. McLeod, Storemont, merchant; Z. Mageau, Sturgeon Falls merchant; Col. H. C. Cooper, North-west Toronto, soldier; J. O'Neill, South-east Toronto, manufacturer; J. W. Curry, South west Toronto lawyer; H. H. Dewart, South-west Toronto, lawyer; Capt. J. C. Ramsden, South-west Toronto, clerk; R. Cooper, Welland, miller; Major J. C. Tolmie, Windsor, minister; D. Raccine, Russel, merchant; Jos. H. Marceau, Nipissing, merchant.

LABOR PARTY MAY HAVE 12.

Secretary Marks Points Out a Possible Mistake.

A mistake in the number of the Labor candidates elected was pointed out by J. T Marks, secretary of the Independent Labor party and editor of the Industrial Banner, who claims, thatif J. B. Johnstone is finally acknowledged elected in Simcoe, then the Labor party has 12 members instead of the 11 reported this morning.

"Johnstone is a straight Independent Labor man," said Mr. Marks, "and he is listed as a United Farmer candidate. He was nominated by a coalition convention of United Farmers, Soldiers and Labor men."

A MOVE AGAINST USE OF TOBACCO

CONFERENCE ON EDUCATION WOULD DISCOURAGE USE OF WEED ENTIRELY

RELIGION IN THE SCHOOLS

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION, NO MATTER HOW SIMPLE, IS STRONGLY ADVOCATED

Winnipeg, Oct. 23.—The work of the conference on education, which is in session here, is to be perpetuated. It was decided at yesterday afternoon's meeting to create a national council, which will carry into effect resolutions that are passed and prepared for a similar congress to be held three years hence.

Several important resolutions were passed. One calls for the provision of free and compulsory education up to the age of 16 and for part time education up to the age of 18. The conference also went on record as favoring larger grants for providing playgrounds suitable for organized play, it being declared that education could not fulfil its proper function unless these were provided.

Religious Education.

The resolutions were passed after an interesting and inspiring time of speech-making. Premier Martin, Minister of Education for Saskatchewan, made a plea for practical suggestions to solve many of the problems connected with rural districts. He also boldly tackled the controversial question of religious instruction in the schools. The Premier declared himself in favor of this and made an earnest appeal to the clergy of all denominations to get together and agree to some fundamental kind of religious instruction, no matter how simple it might be. "If," he said, "the clergymen in Saskatchewan will agree, I shall furnish every facility that is reasonable for providing for religious teaching in the schools of that providence."

Opposed to Tobacco.

A third resolution urged the conference to place itself on record as being opposed to the use of the cigarette, and as discouraging the habit of using tobacco in any form by "parents, teachers and preachers," so that the boys might be saved from the habit. Still another called for the adoption in all the schools of Canada of religious teaching and moral instruction. One more urges that delinquent boys be kept at

Canada's Strength Is Equal To This Test

The stage is all set for the great Victory Loan drive which opens on Monday. The continued prosperity of Canada hangs in the balance.

Since war woke up Canada to a realization of her own strength, the nation has displayed that strength in all directions. Particularly in regard to the Victory Loans has this Dominion shone resplendent.

All the world knows how Canadians lent their money to help in winning the war and now all the world must be shown how Canadians will lend their money again—this time to meet the many obligations imposed by the war and to keep Canada in the envious position she now occupies as one of the most progressive peoples on the face of the globe.

The eyes of the world are on Canada once again. Canada must live up to her splendid reputation. The millions of dollars which are available must be subscribed by individuals to swell the Victory Loan. It is everybody's business to see that this loan becomes of such proportions that it will go down into history as Canada's most successful financial effort in connection with the war.

Wingham voted to raise $40,000 to cover the cost of the Hydro distributing plant.

MAKE PROHIBITION GENERAL IN SCOPE

MR. BURNHAM WOULD PREVENT CARD PLAYING AND USE OF TOBACCO.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Mr. J. H. Burnham, (West Peterboro), has given notice that on the reading of orders of the day for the first sitting of the committee of the whole on the prohibition act, he will move the following resolution:

"That it be an instruction to the committee of the whole on the said power to extend the provisions of the said bill and of the act sought to be amended thereby relating to intoxicating liquors, to playing cards, the feathers of wild birds for dress or other ornamental purposes, and to tobacco in any form."

Refering to his proposed amendment to the prohibition bill, Mr. Burnham said today, "I believe the scope of such a bill should be as wide as the request of the people of a province may require and not be confined to one article. For example, a nation-wide crusade has been begun in the United States for Sunday observance and if the present bill does not show itself capable of extension a province would not be properly equipped to express its wish by referendum. A new era of expressing the people's will has arrived and the methods defined by a federal enabling bill should be complete."

POLICE COMMISSIONERS DISCUSS FINDING BEHIND CLOSED DOORS

Meet Again Today and Will Probably Make Public Their Report on Investigation.

After the ordinary business had been dispensed with at the meeting of the Police Commissioners, yesterday afternoon, Chief Thompson and the press were requested to retire while the three commissioners discussed their finding in their investigation which closed some time ago. They meet again this afternoon at 2 o'clock, when it is expected they will make public their report concerning the charges against some of the members of the force.

Business Disposed Of.

The truant officers report was read and received showing that he had investigated six cases of truancy A couple of these had returned to school, one was the child of parents in the rural districts, who did not understand school law, and a couple were kept at home to help with the work.

Constable Young Raised.

On the recommendation of Chief Thompson, Constable Young, who has served efficiently on the force one year was raised to second class pay amounting to $1,000 a year.

The Chief was granted permission to procure the necessary clothing for use. He reported that he and his men were using the greatest economy in the matter of clothing.

In the accounts appeared Magistrate Dumbles' bill, for $199, and some cents, for stationery for the last 36 years, which was referred to the commission by the council. The mayor explained that the council had referred it to the police commission for explanation, as they did not understand why they should pay an account of 36 years standing. The mayor expressed it in his opinion that the magistrate was simply using this as a method to obtain his $200 increase in pay which was refused him.

Mr. Dumble explained that he had considerable correspondence and the large [illegible] was obliged to use upon which to make his returns were rather expensive. He considered that the city should provide these necessities.

The mayor promised to bring the matter before a meeting of the finance committee, at an early date, and asked Mr. Dumble to meet them.

Then the comission went into secret session.

"MARJORIE" PLAYS TO NO FAVORITES

LEADING LADY OF FINEST BUNCH OF SOLDIER TALENT EVER HEARD.

Ask any returned soldier to tell you the name of the most famous girl in France, and he will smile and answer "Marjorie." "Marjorie" played not favorites, but was the favorite [illegible] of Tommies, Officers and even Major-Generals — and once upon a time there was a Prince who gave a dinner in the officers mess in honor of this same "Marjorie."

Now, "Marjorie" was the "leading lady" of the finest bunch of all soldier talent ever gathered together to entertain the boys while they were in rest billets just behind the lines, and her make-up was so perfect that many believed her to be some famous actress smuggled up to all man's land in the guise of a private soldier. This was true in a measure, as "Marjorie" did go up the line as a common soldier, and remained there for sixteen months a target for German bullets, before Captain Plunkett was given a roving commission to pick out a company of soldier actors and to organize them into an entertainment unit that could be sent right up to the lines to play for the boys.

[illegible] believed for long enough to permit them to go back to the various bases where regular theatrical companies from England were giving performances. Among those chosen was Pte. R. D. DANCING IDOL OF ST. PETERSBURG

STARRING IN "SPITFIRE" OF SEVILLE AT THE EMPIRE THEATRE

"I spent the night with a Canadian gentleman."

This was the innocent answer of Carmelita Delgado, a beautiful girl of the Castilian mountains, when the man she had promised to marry went to the Fiesta of Roses at Seville expecting to find his bride and was unsuccessful in his search.

Carmelita promised to marry Pedro, one of her father's outlaw lieutenants, in order to save the life of Leonardo, another suitor. She went into the mountains with her sheep to forget the unpleasant promise, although she meant to keep her word. There a terrific mountain storm overtook her and she sought refuge in a cabin which was occupied by Kent Staunton, an American artist.

The beautiful Carmelita was dressed in boys' clothing. To all appearances she was a shepherd-boy tending his father's flock in the purple hills. Staunton imprisoned her wonderful features on canvas, regretting however, so much beauty should be possessed by a boy.

Carmelita's innocent explanation that she had spent the night with an American brought down upon Kent Staunton's head the unrestrained fury of the outlaw band. His death was assured. The killing of such a man, they thought, would add honor to the reputation of the slayer.

But Kent Staunton did not die. He found a wonderful zest to living when the little shepherd-boy turned out to be a beautiful Castilian girl who was not indifferent to his love for her.

Hedda Nova, the Russian actress, depicts the role of Carmelita in "The Spittire of Seville," the Universal master photodrama which comes to the Empire Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

FLEW UPSIDE DOWN OVER THE ATLANTIC

WONDERFUL FEATS OF AERIAL NAVIGATION, DESCRIBED BY SIR ARTHUR WHITTEN BROWN AT THE GRAND ON TUESDAY EVENING.

Speaking of the non-stop Atlantic flight made by himself and Capt. Alcock on June 14, Sir Arthur Witten Brown, who lectures at the Grand on Tuesday evening, says that at times they were flying upside down because of the fogs and the mists of the North Atlantic blotting out the sun, moon and stars.

During the flight from the coast of Newfoundland to Ireland a distance of 1,960 miles they flew through atmosphere so cold that ice caked on the instruments, shortly after the "take-off" the small propeller designed to drive the dynamo which generated current for the wireless radio set, jarred loose and was blown away. The men were left without any means of signalling for aid.

Both Alcock and Brown were knighted by the King, shortly after the completion of their stupendous feat. The Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill whilst announcing to them the honor of knighthood at the same time presented them with the Lord Northcliffe "Daily Mail" prize of $50,000.

CAPACITY AUDIENCE HEAR GRAND OPERA

TWO HIGH-CLASS PRODUCTIONS RENDERED IN ONE NIGHT AT GRAND.

A vivid interpretation of Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana," and also of Leoncavallo's "I'Pagliacci," was given by the San Carlo Grand Opera Company at the Grand last night The double bill was produced in order that Peterborough music-lovers might hear more of the principals than would have been the case had only one opera been sung.

"I'Pagliacci" was the opening offering and the work of the five principals reached great heights of excellence and did not fail to impress the large audience. The leading role was sung by Manual Salazar, whose splendid tenor voice was heard to great advantage. Sofia Charlebois sang the role of Nedda, the wife of Canio, in good voice. The minor parts were well handled and the dramatic effects were all that could be desired.

"Cavalleria Rusticana," with Miss Bula Ray Schull singing the part of Santuzza, the deserted sweetheart, and Francesco de Gregorio in the role of Turiddu was produced in a most artistic manner. The other roles were sung with the proper degree of feeling and altogether the interpretation of this great opera was just about perfect.

The large orchestra under the baton of Gaetano Merola, gave finished readings of the scores of both operas. Their rendition of the music from Cavalleria Rusticana particularly pleased the audience.

This engagement of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company was only made possible for Peterborough owing to the fact that the Government had commandeered the Opera House in London for the visit of the Prince of Wales to that city, thus leaving the Company [illegible] management of the Grand is to be congratulated upon securing such a splendid attraction for their Peterborough house.

BOOK LOVERS IN TRANSPORT

Expect Literary Treasures to Be Unearthed From the Volumes Stored at Constantinople.

Some of the books of Livy undoubtedly will be found among the great number of volumes ascertained to be stored in crypts under the public buildings of Constantinople, but will the lost books of Livy be found?

The report that the long-awaited discovery is about to be made may rest on no better foundation than the vague impression of some uneducated Turkish under official. And, indeed, in the absence of any information whatever, on the subject, what more natural conjecture than that the lost historical works will be restored to the world when the vast collection of ancient books whose existence was previously unsuspected come to be examined?

Of the 35 books of Livy preserved to us out of 142, two are incomplete. Of the other 107 books the summaries remain, so that their contents are known. Their full text probably would not add so much to the sum of knowledge, but their recovery has been the dream of classicists for centuries. The occasional discovery of even a fragment in the Vatican or other libraries has been a sensation for scholars.

These tons and tons of books, which it was supposed the Turks burned during their conquests, but which, it appears, they took back to their capital, may increase stores of learning and make more definite our knowledge of particular men and particular periods. It is agreeable to think that forgotten authors of great merit and forgotten works of undisputed value will gain new recognition.

If the missing works of the Roman historian are among the volumes further cause will be given for congratulation over the Turkish downfall.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

MAKE TROUBLE FOR DENTIST

Successful Treatment of Wisdom Teeth Always Is More or Less of a Problem.

Wisdom teeth, especially lower ones, are much more difficult to handle than any of the others in the mouth. When their nerve dies or has to be killed by the dentist he cannot be sure for some time that it is really dead. The reason is that the roots of a wisdom tooth are twisted or curved in such a manner that the root canal cannot be explored.

The upper wisdom teeth have three roots, "frequently fused together, forming a grooved cone, which is usually curved backward," says Gray's anatomy. "The roots of the lower, two in number, are compressed together and curve backward."

It is this backward curving of the compressed roots that gives trouble to the dentist. Often the canal that runs through each root is so narrow and so curved that the finest of the "broaches" used to draw out the dead nerve will not penetrate, and sometimes when it has penetrated it will not come out.

When this happens there is only one thing to do—leave the brooch and apply iodine, which will very soon eat away the steel of which the brooch is made.

The African Elephants Are to be Exterminated To Protect the Settlers

IF the settlers near Port Elizabeth, Cape of Good Hope province, Africa, had not taken to establishing wonderful irrigation ditches and farms at this point, the elephants of Addo Bush still might look forward to attaining a ripe old age, say a hundred years or so, before they buried themselves quietly beneath the ooze of a tropical forest and went to the heaven of all good elephants.

But as it is, one of the greatest elephant hunts of modern times is about to be staged in Addo Bush, and unless Providence, in the shape of an imperial mandate from the British Empire or some similarly august proclamation, intervenes, my lord the elephant will roam no more in the forests of South Africa.

Civilization has crept up and around and about in Cape of Good Hope province until now it has made its last demand upon the wilds, and that demand is that the wild elephant shall be exterminated. The provincial council has listened to the demand at last and has decreed that the Addo Bush elephants must go.

Strolling out of his forest in Addo Bush, where for years he has dwelt in freedom under the protection of the British Government, the big fellow has discovered the pleasing works of the settlers.

In the first place, there were delightful mud and water baths in long rows in every direction.

Now, an elephant likes bathing as well as any human being, and he loves wallowing in the mud. Naturally, on discovering the splendid series of baths which the diligent settlers had opened for irrigation ditches, the herd of elephants residing in Addo Bush took advantage of the find.

They bathed in the irrigation ditches and wallowed in the soft mud, and incidentally they broke down the dams, in the construction of which the settlers had toiled for many weary weeks. After they had gone back to the forests the settlers crept out from their homes and looked ruefully at the damage. It was a case of rebuilding dams and redigging ditches many, many times.

But this isn't all the fun that the elephants of Addo Bush have had with the settlers.

When by dint of faithful tending, weeding and watering their crops the settlers were beginning to dream of a big harvest and a balance in the bank they were likely to awake some fine morning to find that somebody had been in the melon patch.

And it wasn't a boy or a pack of boys who could be scared off by an irate farmer.

It was My Lord the Elephant, who was romping and raging about over the green patch which had cost so many patient hours, scrunching up the delicious fruit which was to have been gathered that very day, perhaps, for transfer to the port and then to a hungry Europe.

An elephant can get away with a lot of fruits of all sorts. He also likes green vegetables of any kind. He is very adaptable when it comes to diet. The great creatures even like berries of ordinary size and will most painstakingly devour several tons of them in their patient determination to get a full meal at any cost of time and trouble.

So that is what the South African farmer had against the elephants of Addo Bush. They are a protected herd, between one hundred and two hundred in number, and they have long occupied a forest reserve of about six thousand acres in the heart of the bush, a district that until comparatively recent years was regarded as possessing little farming value. It was mostly scrub land, waterless and not fenced off. The farms that were developed there seemed of little value. But recently irrigation from Sunday's River has greatly increased the fertility of the farms, and this development has increased the losses suffered by the settlers from the depredations of their gigantic neighbors and has aroused them to a determination to win the consent of the Government to their destruction.

A committee which investigated the matter found that it would take thirteen miles of fencing to enclose the elephant's preserve and that this would not solve the problem. They would have to be provided with water, as there would not be sufficient within the enclosure, and it is probable that they would have to be partially fed also. It is more than doubtful if the enclosure would provide enough natural food. And even if $100,000 were spent for a fence and a system of watering and feeding established at great expense to the Government of the Cape of Good Hope, still the elephants would not be free forest animals any more. They would be simply park ornaments, pitiful survivors of the great race which once trecked so boldly and freely through forest and marsh.

The Addo Bush elephants are said by some scientists to be about the only surviving examples of a distinct variety. The characteristics are very large ears, a strongly arched forehead, short forelegs and a very hairy body. The African elephant has two nearly equal prehensile lips, forming the margin of the proboscis. It has only three toes on the hind foot. A very important distinction is in the conformation of the trunk, which looks as if it were made of a number of graduated segments instead of tapering smoothly, as in the case of the Asiatic elephant. In size the African elephant often surpasses the Asiatic elephant, reaching a height of twelve feet at the shoulders. The circumference of the forefoot is one-half the height of the shoulders.

Drake's Cup Found in Cellar

ARMADA silver dug up near Dartmoor and Ashburnham, trophies concealed for years in the cellars of a bank, have appeared in the past at Christie's in triumph, and to the auction roll of hidden treasures has now to be added a wonderful cup in the form of a territorial globe, associated with the maritime glory of Sir Francis Drake, and discovered again, after having been bricked up in a cellar of an old house in Cornwall. Early last century, says the London Daily Telegraph, the Peter family, of Chyverton, sought in vain for the Drake cup, but an eccentric widow, in order to foil her husband's heirs, had the cup and other plate securely hidden away. It is known that Queen Elizabeth had the greatest admiration for the secular saint of our merchant service, and presents were exchanged between them—although it was not Drake who replied to her bantering question of what a man is really thinking about when he says that he is thinking of nothing with the saucy answer, "A woman's promise."

It was in this spirit of happy exchange that the Queen gave Sir Francis the famous cocoanut cup, surmounted with the form of the Golden Hind, still in the proud possession of the Drake family at Nutwell Court, in Devon. For Drake, with characteristic fancifulness, had presented to Elizabeth one of the newly-discovered cocoanuts as nothing less than a "dragon's egg." So she prettily had it strapped in gold and engraved with his new arms and motto, "Sic parvis magna," and the crest of a "ship on a globe under ruff" held by a cable.

But before this tangible compliments had been exchanged by the twain, and in 1582 Drake's gift for the New Year to his sovereign was a piece of plate of allegorical design, "a salt of gold like a globe." And there is cogent reason for believing that the Queen, not to be outdone by her valiant seaman, repaid the compliment in kind by presenting to him the finest silver globe-cup procurable.

At that time, the indubitable master of craft in such designs was the Swiss [illegible] Zurich, and right nobly did he execute his task. First this beautiful silver-gilt is 20¼ inches high. Taking one of the sixteenth century maps, or portulani, for a model, he most delicately engraved on a globe shape (the cup lifting at the Equator)), a map of the world; the names of the continents, islands, and seas being inscribed in Latin; the land gilt, and the seas reserved in silver, with ornaments of sailing ships, dolphins, and spouting whales. The cover of the cup is surmounted with a vase with cherubs aloft, grotesque masques of the mariners, and fruit, and forming a pedestal for an armillary sphere, which is held in position by arabesque brackets ending in gryphons. The stem is shaped as an ovoform vase, finely chased with marine deities, and supported on a circular base, chased with arabesques and strapwork, and with small landscapes in oval panels.

As a cup, without any historical associations whatever, it would appeal to collectors as a beautiful work of art. With the Drake interest added, it becomes especially precious. When Drake died, in Nombre de Dios Bay, in 1596, and his body was carried for burial a league out to sea ("But for his fame the Ocean Sea was not sufficient roome"), it was found that by his last will he had left everything to his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir George Sydenham, "whatever being within the doors of the mansion house at Buchland, one cup of gold and plate excepted, the plate to be sold for the payment of my debts." The cup reserved was unquestionably the Golden Hind cocoanut cup, but among the debt clearing plate was his earlier gift. At the "Inquisitio Post Mortem" held upon the settlement of Drake's affairs, one of the jury was Thomas Peer, of Dartsmouth associations (his older brother being member for the borough in Elizabeth's reign), and apparently this adjudicator bought the historic cup, passing by descent to Mr. G. F. Thomas-Peter, of Chyverton, after the vicissitudes mentioned.

The geographical interest of the engraved map of the world on the cup is vastly entertaining. Vespucci's name to America had been well established, although Columbus receives proper honors in the inscription, "America sive India, Anno D 1492, a Christophoro Columbo, nomine Regis Castilli, primura detecta." On the British Isles are names, "Irlant," "Scotia," "Anglia," the only addition being "London." And other names leaping to the eye are "Galia," "Polona," "Germa," "Muscovia," "Vienna," "Hamburg," and "Hierosolyma." In the very south of the Southern Hemisphere is "Terra Australia," with a Latin inscription that it was called "Regio Psittacorum" by the "Lusitanians," on account of the incredibly beautiful birds of plumage. It brings back visions of old sailors returning with parrots in cages. Such is this noble cup as it stands, and it will suffice as a work of art, and worthy of its association with one of the greatest fighting master mariners of our spacious history. If rein is given to the imagination, one could have desired it to be of definite connection with one of Drake's achievements, especially when Lord Effingham in "The Ark" counted upon Drake, the chief of the mercantile marine, to become a vice-admiral and fight the Spaniards in his "The Revenge." And such an Armada Cup, in place of chivvying whales and dolphins, would have had to find room for those spitfiring sea gallopers which hounded the Armada to its doom.

EYES OF ALLIES.

British Secret Service Kept Close on Raiders.

Yet terribly destructive as these U-boats were, the number operating simultaneously in this and other fields was never very large, writes Admiral Sims in the World's Work. The extent to which the waters were infested with German submarines was another particularly ludicrous and particularly prevalent misapprehension. Merchant vessels constantly reported having been assailed by "submarines in shoals," and most civilians still believe that they sailed together in flotillas, like schools of fish. There is hardly a Canadian who did not see at least a dozen submarines on his way across the Atlantic; every streak of suds caused by a "tide up," and every swimming porpoise was immediately mistaken for the wake of a torpedo; and every [illegible] of trans-Atlantic voyagers assumed the shape of a periscope. The fact is that, with few exceptions, we knew every time a German submarine slunk from its base into the ocean.

The Allied secret service was immeasurably superior to that of the Germans—I pay particular tribute to the British Intelligence Department in saying thus. We always knew how many submarines the Germans had and where they were; we always knew how many they were building, where they were building them, their architectural characteristics, and the stage of progress, which they had reached at a particular time. It was not the simplest thing in the world to get a submarine out of its base. The Allies were constantly laying mines at these outlets; and before the U-boat could safely make its exit elaborate sweeping operations were necessary. It took a squadron of nine or ten surface ships, operating for several hours, to get a submarine out of its base and start it on its journey.

So we always knew when one came out; and we knew not only that but we knew which one it was and often who its commander was and other valuable details. Moreover, we knew where it went and we kept charts, on which we plotted from day to day the voyage of each particular submarine. At a given time we could thus point to almost the exact spot on the ocean where a particular U-boat was operating.

Old Church Doomed.

London is to lose another of its historical churches. The parishioners of St. Alphage, London Wall, have dropped to thirty-five, and the church will now be amalgamated with the Parish of St. Mary the Virgin and the building will be razed.

Relatives of persons buried in the church may claim their remains, and the ecclesiastical commissioners will pay $50 for their reinterment.

The forthcoming demolition will be the last chapter in an eventful history. In 1013 the citizens of London built a church to the memory of St. Alphage next to the Roman wall. This church became dilapidated, and was pulled down in 1537, and the Priory Church of the Elsynge Hospital became the parish church until it also decayed. In 1777 a new St. Alphage was built on the other side of the street, and so at the moment the curious sight is seen of a church on one side and its churchyard on the other.

Fortunately the loss so far as architecture is concerned will be negligible when St. Alphage's disappears. It is built in the worst Georgian fashion. The beautiful Saxon work, a relic of the old priory, is to be preserved, and this has been turned into a delightful little chapel of ease, always open to those persons in London who care to come in and forget the rush of modern life in the contemplation of an ancient arch.

In one of the old registers of the church is a list of fourteen people in the parish touched for king's evil, dated 1672-1686. King's evil, or scrofula, was thought to be curable by the king "laying on of hands." The register fails to record whether cures were effected.

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210330) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495.00 in case of death.

WOMEN SWIMMERS CANCELLED TRIP

MANAGER OF AUSTRALIAN EXPERTS SCARES AMERICAN A. A. FOR MIXUP

Sydney, N. S. W., On board the steamer Sonoma, bound for Australia, was George Dawsing, Seattle, Wash., the man who was responsible for the second trip of Fanny Durack, the champion woman swimmer of the world, and Mina Wylie, the champion break stroke swimmer, of the United States. It was unfortunate that the second trip should terminate in failure, the same as the first one, but according to Dawsing, the officials of the A. A. U. were greatly responsible for the general mixup.

"It was an outrage," said Dawsing, "that these swimmers should be put to all the trouble they were. On their first trip it was a case of mismanagement and misunderstanding, but the second time there was no such misunderstanding. When I was in Sydney, after Misses Durnack and Wylie had returned home, I took the matter up with the swimming authorities of Sydney and had a thorough understanding regarding a second trip to the states.

Fault of A. A. U. Officials.

"After getting back to the States I took the matter up again with Mr. Rubin of the A. A. U. and it was my understanding with him that there would be no further obstacles to the young women swimming in various parts of the country, at championship meets and otherwise. They objected to my acting as guardian for the young women on account of the expense part of it, but in order to have everything right I agreed to forfeit that part of the deal and let the A. A. U. look after them.

"It may sound like a chronic kicker for me to be telling all these things, but facts are facts and I can only say that the young women were given a very bad deal. They were asked to swim without any chance to prepare for events and otherwise annoyed until they became so disgusted that they decided to quit cold and go back to Australia.

"It is very probable that Misses Durack and Wylie will give up the amateur game entirely, and devote their time to professionalism. Both are wonderful performers in the tank, and a brother of Miss Wylie is still more remarkable. They will prove a sensation in that work, so don't be surprised if they take it up and come back to the States on the vaudeville circuit. It is certain that the A. A. U. officials will not interfere with them."

LINDSAY CHECKER CLUB SEEKS MATCH WITH LOCALS

CHALLENGE MAY LEAD TO THE FORMATION OF CLUB IN PETERBOROUGH

The Lindsay Checker Club have issued a challenge to send a team down here to engage in a friendly contest with the Peterborough checker players. At the present time there is no checker club in this city to accept this challenge but anyone who would like to participate in this match should phone Mr. Roper at the Y.M.C.A. or Mr. Cowan at the Farm and Dairy office. It would be a good thing if this leads to the organization of a checker club in Peterborough to complete with neighboring towns and cities in friendly matches.

JACK ADAMS GOES TO PLAY ON COAST

THREE TORONTO PRO'S, INCLUDING FORMER PETERBORO STAR ACCEPT OFFERS

Vancouver, Oct. 23.—Alf Skinner and Jack Adams, both members of the Toronto N. H. L. team last winter, and Bill Adams, brother of Jack have been signed up by Frank Patrick president of the Pacific Coast Hockey League and manager of the Vancouver club, to play with Vancouver in this season's series. Official announcement of the signing of these stars has been made. Bill Adams is a younger brother of Jack and has recently returned from overseas. He has not played professional hockey before, and will occupy the utility role this season.

Skinner is expected to be the star on the Coast circuit, according to Frank Patrick. He is a fast skater, a crack shot, and should fit in well with the Vancouver forwards.

Jack Adams is reputed to be a sturdy player, and, while not as fast as Skinner, is reckoned to be a first class man.

The signing of these men will not stir up another "hockey war" between the East and West. Patrick states that the Toronto team was released outright last season, placing the Coast League in a position to negotiate for their services.

"SLIVER" KNAPMAN OUT WITH ARGONAUTS

FORMER PETERBOROUGH HOCKEY PLAYER TAKES ADVANTAGE OF FIRST ICE

Toronto, Oct. 23.—Last night was opening night at the Arena Gardens and twelve hundred skaters took advantage of the early opportunity to indulge in the popular pastime. The ice was in good condition for so early in the season.

Conspicuous among the skaters were many well-known local hockey players, who were limbering up preliminary to the coming campaign. Among others noticed were Bennett of Veterans, Wright, Rutherford and Burch of Aura Lee, Watson of Dentals, Dalton Meeking of Barrie and Knapman of Peterborough. Bennett and Knapman are slated to play for Argonauts, Dalton Meeking for Parkdale Canoe Club, Watson for Marlboros, and Burch for Maitland juniors. Wright and Rutherford are in[illegible] junior hockey, and should experience little [illegible] place with the seniors. Both are hard workers, fast skaters and good stick handlers. Dick Carroll, who will coach Maitland juniors and Parkdale C. C. seniors, was also on hand.

With so many senior teams in the field this season there will be plenty of room for those who are graduating from junior company. In fact, it is surmised that efforts will be made to have several juniors make the jump. Burch, McCurry and Munro are among those wanted.

Prominent juniors who played last season and are now over the age limit are Jeffreys, Gunn and Kearns, of U. T. S., Rutherford, Wright and Hogarth, of Aura Lee, Spring of Parkdale C. C., Ross of Maitlands, and Stewart, of Beaches. The last-named, Spring and Hogarth are expected to play for Riversides.

Argonauts are going back into senior hockey in earnest, and Manager Ernie Laidlaw is confident that a speedy sextette will be rounded out. Frank Kinght and "Babe" Burkhart and McCamus are among those who will wear the Double Blue this season. Knight is a splendid defence player, he having starred with the University of Toronto intercollegiate champions for several seasons.

CANADIAN NORTHERN OPERATED AT A LOSS

TOTAL DEFICIT OF YEAR 1918 OVER SEVENTEEN MILLIONS

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—The Senate was given a statement of the operation of the Canadian Northern from the time the Government began to operate until the 31st of August last. The statement was made in the form of replies to a series of questions put to the Government by Senator Casgrain. As to receipts from all sources, they were given in three separate items: First, gross earnings from October 1, 1917, to August 31, 1919 (twenty-three months), $93,502,669; second, proceeds of notes sold to public, $52,871,608; third, advances from Dominion Government for repayment of notes and loans, construction, improvements and new equipment, also interest on securities, $71,606,463.

For the same time, under expenditures, the operating expenses are given as $93,188,470; expenditure on construction and improvements, also purchase of equipment, $56,346,558; for repayment of coupon notes and loans, also interest charges, $71,356,256.

To the question, "Was there surplus or deficit?" the answer was, "Deficit." As to the amount of deficit the statement was that there were net earnings from operation to December 31, 1918, of $4,846,103, but after paying bond interest and all other charges the deficit was, October 1, 1917, to December 31, 1917, $2,368,122; and from January 1, 1918, to December 31, 1918, $14,643,753, making a total deficit to December 31 last of $17,011,875.

Name of Sir Adam Beck as Leader Before Farmers in Session at Toronto This Morning.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 23.—While Sir Wm. Hearst and members of his defeated Conservative Government, at the palatial Parliament buildings in Queen's Park, today were in secret session discussing how best to relinquish the reins of power in this Province, the victorious United Farmers of Ontario with equal privacy, at their dingy, antiquated headquarters near the St. Lawrence market, wrestled with the problem of selecting an official leader who would probably be the next Premier of Ontario. They also discussed important matters of policy and their possible alliance with the Independent Labor party.

Statement Forthcoming.

It is understood that some statement's plans will be forthcoming this afternoon. Members of the Cabinet, when they emerged from the council room, declined to make any statement until the official announcement is given out by the Premier. As for the U. F. TAILORS OF LONDON SEE TROUBLE AHEAD

WEARING PATCHED AND SKINNING CLOTHES LIKELY TO BECOME FASHIONABLE

London, Oct. 23.—Fashionable London tailors are said to be somewhat perturbed over the reported popularity of a clothes conservation "movement."

The "movement" has manifested itself in the organization of "Old Clothes Leagues"—societies with the single pledge slogan—"No More Clothes of the New Variety Until Prices Go Down!"

Those who assume this pledge are expected to regard patches on trousers, shiny coat sleeves and sewn-up splits in boots and shoes as badges of honor. The turning of old suits, sewing in of new lining, and other necessary alterations which make an old trousers, coat and vest serve the purpose of a new suit at one-third the cost, is another part of the practical application of the league's precepts.

To the question, "What is the estimated surplus or deficit for the current year?" the answer was, "Estimated operating deficit, $5,587,428."

AMATEURS IN WEST TAKING IN PRO'S

RUTHLESS GRANTING OF AMATEUR STANDINGS DEGRADING THE RANKS.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—Developments in the Canadian West indicate that a mistake was made by the A.A.U. of C. when it granted to four Western Provinces the right to reinstate professionals. The Westerners demanded this privilege on threat of secession from the national governing body. Wholesale exculpations have been granted and scores of others have been applied for on quite the same grounds as those which have already been made. In view of what is happening and what is bound to follow, it would doubtless have been advisable for the A.A.U. of C. to have defied the malcontents.

National athletic harmony would have been given a temporary setback, but, left to their own devices, the Westerners would have brought about a condition that would have hurriedly convinced the proponents of the hybrid, free-and-easy regulation that they had adopted a wrong course. The true friends of amateur sport in its best sense would have lost no time in again seeking the counsel and protection of the governing body. Even as it is the whitewashed professionals are barred from Canadian championships in hockey, track and field, boxing, and all other sporting activities under the control of the A.A.U. of C.

In the event of a team using ineligible performers qualifying for Allan Cup semi-finals, the reinstated professionals will not be eligible to compete. There will doubtless be, in the course of time, a reversion to the former condition of affairs, but no good will be done the cause of amateurism meanwhile. The national governing body has taken a backward step. The work of years is undone. Its hitherto unalterable opposition to the reinstatement of professionals, strengthened by a clause in its constitution which made the entertainment of applications for reinstatement of professionals a matter beyond its jurisdiction, has been swallowed whole. The slogan "Once a professional, always a professional," is in the discard. Trouble of their own making is descending upon the heads of the A.A.U. of C.

After Tarky.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—A crowd of thirteen hundred United Veteran rioters surrounded the home of W. E. Turley, secretary of the Provincial G.W.V.A. last night. Police reserves were called out before crowd dispersed.

GIRL SENTENCED TO HUNDRED YEARS

IMPOSSIBLE SENTENCES RECORDED FROM ITALY, GERMANY AND OTHER COUNTRIES

In the Central Prison at Constantinople Colonel W. Nickerson of the Army Medical Corps has just found a girl who had served three years of a sentence of a hundred years imprisonment, says Pearson's Weekly.

In this country the heaviest sentence that can be inflicted is penal servitude for life, but in practically every case such a sentence is reconsidered at the end of fifteen years, and usually the prisoner is released.

Yet there are other countries besides half-savage Turkey where frankly foolish and impossible sentences are not uncommon. Italy is a case in point. The tribunal of Modica in Sicily had before them a man called Lupo Salvatore of Comiso, who passed himself off as a lawyer, and had committed no fewer than sixty-three separate frauds.

He was found guilty upon all the different counts, and sentenced to three years imprisonment on each, bringing his total sentence to 189 years. Had the court decided upon the maximum sentence the aggregate terms of his imprisonment would have been 630 years.

Two of the Mafia criminals tried at Tarento, just before the war, received sentences of sixty and ninety years respectively.

It was a child murdered in Germany, who was tried at Griefswald in 1906, who received the strangest punishment on record. He was sentenced to be beheaded twice, then to receive two years imprisonment and finally to suffer loss of all his political rights—in other words to be outlawed.

WOULD PASTUERIZE MILK BEFORE USING

BRANTFORD BOARD OF HEALTH FAVORS THIS METHOD OF TREATMENT

Brantford, Oct. 23.—At a meeting of the Board of Health a comprehensive report on the question of a pure milk supply was submitted by Medical Officer of Health Hutton, in which two recommendations for the passage of bylaws by the city council were made. The first related to the inspection of dairy premises, sealed cans, etc., and the second to pasteurization. The Health Board was unanimous that both bylaws, to take effect May 1, 1920, should be passed and Mayor Macbride, representing the council, concurred.

Some fifteen milk vendors were present and demurred at the proposal for pasteurization. They were informed that no municipal owner ship of the milk supply would be undertaken, in the event that pasteurization plants were established, without recompense to them. M. H. O Hutton was insistent that pasteurization should be enforced, and will likely have a majority of the council in favor of the bylaw recommended

OPENING OF A NEW SERVICE TO CONSUMERS

A new idea of providing supplies to the consumer in Peterborough has been inaugurated and installed in E F. Mason's grocery, where one side of the store is devoted to a self serve system which is convenient and most satisfactory. Each class of goods are in sections with the name above, and every article is priced in plain figures. Customers may help themselves, or can be assisted by the clerk. the goods are taken to the end of the same side where they are wrapped and settled for. The aim of this co-operative system is to provide supplies to consumers at a low cost by eliminating the accounting and delivery expense and help keep down the cost of living.

There will be no service in the Baptist church on Sunday as the pastor, Rev. Mr. Ashton, will leave on Friday to attend a convention at Ottawa.

CITY COUNCIL COMMENDS THE NEW VICTORY LOAN TO PEOPLE OF CANADA

Moved by Ald. Gainey, seconded by Ald. Morrison; That this Council of the city of Peterborough heartily commends the 1919 Victory Loan to the support of the people, as a matter of business as well as a patriotic duty, as its success will be of benefit to the agricultural and business life of the country, and enable the Government to carry out the work of civil re-establishment of the returned soldiers.—Carried.

RED CROSS DONATES $100 TO THE NAVY LEAGUE AT ANNUAL MEETING

Mrs. J. C. Davidson Re-Elected President—Comprehensive Peace Policy Mapped out.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Red Cross Society was held Wednesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock in the Public Library. The enthusiastic members present listened with interest to the reports of the treasurer, secretary and conveners of the various committees. The president, Mrs. J. C. Davidson, in her annual opening address, reviewed the activities of the society, during the past year and urged the continued interest and loyal support of the members for the ensuing year in carrying out the comprehensive peace policy outlined by headquarters.

The society voted $100 to the Navy League Fund, for which a campaign is being carried on this week.

Before the close of the meeting the diploma presented by the Italian Red Cross to the local society, in recognition of its services in helping to raise the amount collected on the Italian Red Cross Tag Day, was exhibited and the cordial letter of thanks accompanying it, was read

BIG CONVENTION AT PORT HOPE FRIDAY

EPWORTH LEAGUERS IN BAY OF QUINTE CONFERENCE TO ASSEMBLE

There is every indication that the convention of the Young People's Societies of the Methodist Church for the Bay of Quinte Conference which opens on Friday afternoon of this week in Port Hope will be the largest affair of its kind held in Eastern Ontario in recent years.

During the war, many of the Epworth Leagues and other Young People's Societies disbanded and their members concentrated their energies on Red Cross and similar war work.

Now that the war is over Young People's Church Societies are taking a free hold on their work. The Port Hope Convention is the first Bay of for four years. It is under the auspices of the Epworth League, but all other Methodist Young People's Societies are entitled to be represented.

The Convention is being held over a week end—from Friday afternoon to Sunday night. This is a new idea and is planned to encourage the attendance of High School students, school teachers, and young men who could not leave their work in the middl of the week, but might get away over the week end.

A splendid programme has been prepared. Some of the speakers will be: Rev. Frank Langford, general secretary of the Young People's Work for the Methodist Church, Rev. F. C. Stephenson, secretary of the Young People's Forward Movement for Missions, Rev. (Major) Harry Frost, of Trenton, Rev. S. T. Tucker, of Millbrook, Rev. [illegible] M. Burns, Toronto, Rev. G. C. Washington, of Baltimore, Rev. A. H. Foster, of Belleville, Rev. W. P. Rodgers, of Napanee, president of the conference, and Miss Hazel Coleman and Miss Doris Browning, of Toronto, specialists in Junior League work, and Rev. J. F. Chapman of Peterborough.

Friday evening's session will be of special interest showing the use of the dramatic instinct in Young People's church work.

A missionary pageant in two acts will be given in costume by the Port Hope young people, assisted by Cobourg Methodist orchestra.

A number of young people from this town are planning to be in attendance.

The delegates will be billeted free for bed and breakfast in the Port Hope homes. The meals will be served in the Methodist church at a nominal price to all registered delegates.

SOME THINGS TO KEEP IN MIND

You should not lose sight of these facts.

A very large proportion of the 1919 Loan is to be spent on turning our fighters back again into producers; so, by doing the right thing by our soldiers, we are also profiting ourselves. The credits created for Great Britain and the Allies will assure our farmers and manufacturers of a market for their surplus goods after our own needs have been met, and this will also tend to steady trade conditions and encourage production. Then, too, part of this Loan is to be used in financing the Provincial house-building schemes. This will not only conduce to the comfort of the community by providing more homes, but will tend to lower the inflated rents which have contributed to the high cost of living.

TEA MEETING

A tea meeting will be held in the George Street Methodist Church on Wednesday, November 12th.

HEBREW CHAPTER OF ROYAL ARCH MASONS

DEDICATED IN TORONTO BY LIEUT-COL. W. N. PONTON K. C. OF BELLEVILLE

Mount Sinai Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, No. 212, G.R.C., Tuesday evening in the Freemasons' hall, College street, Toronto, was consecrated and dedicated in the presence of a large and distinguished gathering of Royal Arch Masons. The ceremony was conducted by M. Ex. Comp Lieut.-Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., of Belleville, Grand Z. He was assisted in the ceremony by R. Ex. Comps R. H. Spencer, of Trenton, Grand J. Henry T. Smith, Grand Scribe E. A. L. Tinker, Grand Superintendent of Toronto district; R. J Reade, Geo L. Gardiner, Dr. Walter G. Price, W J. Wadsworth, and other present and past grand chapter officers.

RUMMAGE SALE, NOV. 8

The Parents' Circle of Queen Mary's School will hold a Rummage Sale at 307 George street, opposite Barries, on Saturday, Nov. 8th Friends of the circle are asked to send in contributions the day before the sale, or telephone Mrs. Medd, 507 or Mrs. W. K. Morris, 1095j, and articles will be called for.

A registration fee of one dollar is being charged, and all young people of the Methodist Chruch will be cordially welcomed.

The song book used in the meetings of Billy Sunday will be used, and the music will be under the direction of Rev. C. S. Applegath, pastor of Port Hope Methodist Church.

DELETE "OBEY" FROM MARRIAGE RITUAL

PROTESTANT EPISCOPOLIAN IN UNITED STATES CHURCH ON THIS STEP.

After a somewhat extended controversy the Episcopal Church in the United States has decided to leave the word "obey" out of the marriage service; so in future young women with certain ideas about married life, will not have to do violence to their conscience by promising something which they have no idea of fulfilling.

This position has only been arrived at after a long and keen fight. The Episcopal Church is by all odds the most conservative of all the Protestant Churches, and what other denominations do in such matters has not had very much influence upon the Episcopal leaders.

The fact is, the bishops confess, that the reality of obedience has long vanished and altho the Anglican Church in Canada, as in Great Britain, still retains the word obey, there are not wanting signs that its deletion is only a matter of time.

For a long time now, many clergymen of the Episcopal Church in the United States have previous to the marriage service interviewed the contracting parties and sought their views on the matter, and in cases where the bride had decided objections to the use of the word, it was not used.

Most Men Skeptical.

Most men shrug their shoulders when they hear the word read by the clergyman and repeated by the bride. Of course, the innocent bridegroom sees in the use of the word a warrant for his domestic authority and fondly imagines that from now on, he will wield the sceptre of authority in the home. It takes longer to undeceive some men than others, but they all get there just the same. Some men are so completely unstrick has been played upon them, and that instead of the bride using the term, it is the bridegroom who ought to pledge obedience.

Opponents of the change insisted that it was simply part of the feminist revolt which has been going on, somewhat successfully for a number of years. They sought to bolster up their arguments by quoting the scriptures and pointing to the long period—hundreds — of years— in which women had without scruple promised to love, honor and obey. Such arguments, however, did not avail many more and the word is doomed to go.

Marriage Relationship.

The fact is that the whole marriage relationship is viewed very differently from what it was years ago. The clause: 'Who giveth this woman away?" indicates very clearly the old view of marriage. A woman was a "thing to be 'given away'" "ame to be captured, a hand-maid o be employed and possessed. On the other hand, she has no objections She was glad to find a guardian and a protector. In some benighted districts the man is still spoken of as the 'head of the house." It almost makes one smile as one lingers over the phrase. Surely it belongs to the dear dead days beyond recall."

The tradition that a woman is property dies hard. But hundreds of professions are open to women and they have that magic thing—the vote. Women no longer creep beneath a man's roof glad to find shelter and a bread-winner.

Little Agitation Here.

There is at present no very great agitation to have the word obey left out of the Anglican form of marriage here in Canada. The other denominations do not use the word A prominent Anglican divine, with whom the writer discussed the matter a few days ago, insisted that there was practically no agitation for its removal.

"We have a clause in the marriage service," he said, "which leaves the woman a right to refuse to obey where her conscience would be violated."

The trouble evidently arises when husband and wife cannot agree as to what is a matter of conscience In the meantime, however, Canadian brides will go on promising to obey and it would be exceedingly interesting to know just how much more obedient they are likely to be than their American sisters, who are not asked to make any such rash promises.

TEN MISSIONARIES.

Funds Raised at Camp Meeting to Support Them.

Campbellford, Oct. 23.—The funds raised at the camp meeting at Missionary Heights, Meyersburg, Ont. during July and August, conducted by Evangelist G. M. Sharpe of Galt assisted by Dr. Andrew Imrie of Toronto, will be used to support ten missionaries—Miss Standen of Barrie, a foreign missionary in China eight native workers in same field and Miss Nelly M. Turner of Campbellford, a home missionary, who will recruit for the foreign field.

KING STREET, EAST OF WATER LEASED TO PET. CANOE CO.

Resolution Passed by Board of Works Allowing the Closing of This Street.

The Peterborough Canoe Company met the Board of Works at their meeting last night with a request to ease that part of King street east of Water street for their own use.

It was pointed out by Mr. Richardson of the company that this part of King street was used only by them. It is a blind street and no one can make use of it without trespassing on their property. They are very often troubled at night by boys who go down that street and sit on the Canoe Company's premises. It is impossible for this to be watched and it affords a dangerous fire trap with no particular advantage. It is impossible to leave a boat at the water's edge without having parts stolen.

On account of these disadvantages the Canoe Company desire to put a fence across this roadway to shut out trespassers.

On a motion by Aldermen Edgar and Crowe a lease will be drawn up with the Peterborough Canoe Club to let them have the ground for a rental of $25 a year with a provision in the lease to be closed at a three months' notice from the City Council at any time.

PREDICTS MILD WINTER.

Ancient Weather Prophet Gives Reason for Conclusion.

Kane, Pa., Oct. 23.—"Nuts are thicker'n woodticks in the big woods, but the squirrels are storin' 'way less of 'em than you town folks is puttin' way taters at $1.50 an' up a bushel, and you can jest bet all the bear-skins you fellers ain't goin' to get that the winter'll be a darn mild one," said Hermit Joe of the Big Kinzua to hunters in that neighborhood.

The old man, who predicts the winters every year, explained further his reasons for risking his reputation on a mild winter. The bears this year are mostly scrawny and light furred, according to Joe, and they are not in a hurry to get into their winter homes, while the fur on small animals indicates to the hermit that winter will be light. Old neighbors say his predictions never fail.

DR. CREELMAN NOW MENTIONED AS LEADER OF UNITED FARMERS

Four Parties Elected to the Provincial Legislature are Watchfully Waiting—Liberals Met This Morning.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct. 24.—Watchful waiting by the four parties in the Provincial Legislature elect, while a small sub-committee of the predominating United Farmers selects an acceptable leader, seems to be the position of things today.

Liberals Converse.

Except the Liberals, who gathered under the leadership of Hartley Dewart this morning to further discuss the situation, there was no meeting of the parties today. The United Farmers "stand adjourned" and have gone back to their fall plowing, to assemble once again on Wednesday to hear the report of their committee regarding a leader. E. C. Drury, of Simcoe, and Sir Adam Beck still seem to be the most prominently mentioned for this post, but the name of Dr. Creelman, president of the Ontario Agricultural College, and former Commissioner of Agriculture under the Hearst Government, was mentioned today as a possibility.

Labor Men at Hamilton.

The Labor men will meet at Hamilton tomorrow to decide upon their course, and it is expected that the Conservatives will meet next week.

Hearst for Lieut.-Governor.

It was rumored today that Sir William Hearst, the defeated Conservative Premier, might be appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario when Sir John Hendrie relinquishes that office shortly.

Honolulu, Oct. 24.—Lenine, the Bolshevik Premier of Russia has been captured by Anti-Bolshevik forces, according to a wireless message picked up by the Japanese ship "Tenyo Maru," in harbor here. The message gave no further details of the reported capture.

G. T. R. Bill Passes.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—The second reading of the bill to purchase the G. T. R. passed by the Government by a majority of thirty, after midnight last night.

NOTHING IMPROPER OR DISHONEST IN CONDUCT OF POLICE, REPORT CONCURS

Judge Huycke, Magistrate Dumble, and Mayor Duncan Assure Citizens That in Their Judgment, They Believe Peterborough's Police Force to be Reliable and Alert—Find That Charges Failed and Should Have Never Been Made.

Following is the finding of Peterborough's Police Commissioners in the investigation into alleged misconduct of members of the police force, which enquiry ended Saturday, October eleventh:

To the People of Peterborough:—

We, the members of the Police Commission of Peterborough beg to report as follows:

Various charges were made, circulated and implied against certain members of our Police Force; this fact being brought to our attention we deemed it our duty to investigate them, and in so doing made the scope of our investigation as broad as possible and with the fullest publicity. We publicly asked all citizens to give us any information known affecting our Police Force. We sat seven days hearing evidence which in some instances affected other individuals and officials. With these we have nothing to do and confine our findings solely to such facts as affected the police and them only.

The origin of the trouble was in a statement made by one Hamilton, first made verbally to the local liquor licensee inspector and later reduced to writing, but not signed, and filed in the license department at Toronto. This was not made known to us by the department, but a copy was shown to certain of our citizens and in this way became semi-public property. Detective Newhall, one of the men affected, learned of this, and asked that conduct and the statements made against him be investigated. To this we greed, believing if the charges made were true, that he should be dismissed, but if untrue it should be so shown and he reinstated in the public esteem and confidence. The whitten statement by Hamilton was made on 13th. May, 1919, and is:

"This information is private that I am about to give and it came to me from Rae Sullivan of Peterborough, who runs a barber shop and pool room, about Saturday, the 3rd of May, in my house. He told me that he could get police protection to steal twenty cases of whiskey stored at Moore's house. Moore is High Constable of the County. I then asked him what police protection he had and he said that Detective Newhall and Taylor had been talking among themselves and Sullivan said that Newhall and Taylor would get Moore out of the house, if he could get the whiskey and Sullivan would be cleared. This was to be done on Saturday night, May 3rd, between 7 and 9 o'clock. It was calculated that Moore's wife would be up town at that time. They proposed to send Moore to the police station and while he was at the police station Sullivan was to take the whiskey. Sullivan would be at the police station when Moore comes over. The object in getting the whiskey was to clear Sullivan against a charge which was being made by the Inspector in regard to illegal possession of whiskey which was seized by the Inspector at Kendry, a flag station on the C. P. R., it having come off the morning train from Montreal on April 30th. Newhall was to see that there would be no policemen there to interfere in taking the whiskey. Newhall and a man named Wiggs are going to swear that they saw Sullivan on the morning of the seizure. Newhall will say he saw Sullivan in town on that morning Police Constable Wiggs will swear he saw Sullivan at 7:30 a.m. in Peterboro.

Hamilton, we find, was likely to lose his license and thought by so making it, he would get a new license or be helped in procuring it by so doing. He admitted on oath before us he did not believe what he said he had been told, and had no reason for thinking he could procure police protection for wrongdoing.

It is also significant that he had shortly before been fined $500.00 through the direct action of Detective Newhall.

As to the charges themselves, they were wholly disproved. No evidence was given to show that Newhall ever in any way connived with lawbreakers or protected them or promised them protection.

We find that neither Newhall nor P. C. Wigg said or swore to anything false in the matters spoken of and we believe them both to be careful and conscientious officers. The suggested charges against them both wholly failed and should never have been made or circulated. The only [illegible] against them as to this was by one Dunford, a local carter and expressman. His evidence was most unsatisfactory, his manner shifty and unconvincing. Even if uncontradicted, it was unsatisfactory and contradictory as not to be credited by us. On his own showing, he was hired by his own friends and accomplice to draw liquor from neighbouring railway stations, and then informed on them to the Inspector, telling where and when the liquor could be seized and his friends and employers convicted. For these particular betrayals his reward was 20 per cent of the fines, netting him $300 However, this may have been as to other persons, and as to which we make no finding; his references to the police, Detective Newhall, in particular, were overwhelmingly offset, not by Newhall alone, but by various independent witnesses whose names were mentioned by Dunford as know-

ONLY INTEREST IS TAXABLE ON THE 1919 VICTORY LOAN

Shakespeare is Revised and Official Slogan is "Buy Till You Have to Borrow"—Use Bonds Like Dollars.

William Shapespear's advice, "Neither a borrower or a lender be," was ruled out of order by the Victory Loan organization when the members met and dined at the Empress Hotel yesterday afternoon and had a get-together rally in preparation for the big campaign which opens on Monday morning. As Shakespeare missed acquaintance with Bill Hohenzollern and his gang, it was felt by the meeting that the day was at hand for some up-to-date advice. Furthermore, it was believed that Mr. Shakespeare wouldn't mind the change, and nobody expressed the fear that he would get wind of it. Hence when another William suggested "Buy till you have to borrow" as a slogan for the campaign, everybody concurred and so it remains.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, county chairman, presided. With him at the head table were the speakers from outside points and the committee chairmen. It was a one-hundred-per cent attendance, with all the salesmen lined up and ready for the get-away. The principal speakers were Mr. G. Tower Ferguson of Toronto, vice-chairman of the Ontario committee and chairman of the Finance Committee, and Mr. G. R. Warburton, divisional chairman of the Trent Valley district, of which Peterborough is a part. Members of the local organization also spoke. Musical numbers were contributed by Mr. F. E. Walden, organist at Knox Presbyterian Church.

England Needs Money.

While the meeting was largely for the benefit of the salesmen, many things of value and interest to the people of Peterborough were brought out, by the speakers. For example, Mr. Ferguson, in his fine address, made this point:

"That while England can never use up her credits, she has used up her money, and money she must have at once. If Canada does not care to lend the money, England will be compelled to ask credits elsewhere. What follows? Canada's markets suffer, and when Canada's markets suffer, Canadians suffer. If not from the viewpoint of the patriot, then as a business proposition, the people of Canada would subscribe the full amount of the Loan."

Funds Not Tied Up.

The interest is 5½ per cent., the security can be seen from any railway coach. Another point is that no subscriber does not tie up his money. If he finds it necessary, he can, without delay, get the equivalent in money. He can take his bonds to the banker, the real estate agent, the merchant, no matter what he asks in goods, be it a house or a supply of coal, and he can buy just as conveniently as with bank notes

Only Interest Taxed.

Mr. Harold Fry, county organizer, straightened out a phase of the Loan that has been misunderstood by many persons. The 1919 Victory Bonds are taxable under the Government's Income Tax. But as Mr. Fry pointed out, "It is only the income a bond holder derives from his bonds that he must account for in his statement to the Government. The principal or in other words the amount invested in purchasing bonds is not taxed."

Mr. J. G. Campazzie chairman of the Publicity Committee, whose enthusiastic work is worth a great deal to the organization, dealt with the task assigned to his committee. Mr. Vincent Eastwood, vice-president, gave the workers some splendid advice gained from the experiences of the last campaign, and said he was confident that Peterborough would win the Princes of Wales' flag with crest.

LABOR TROUBLE ON NEW HUNTER ST. BRIDGE AVERTED BY NARROW MARGIN

Workingmen Object to Foreman and Ask for His Discharge Met at Noon Today and by Small Majority Voted Against Strike.

Laborers and hoisting engineers to the number of one hundred or more, all employed on the new bridge, affiliated with the Building Trades Council, met in the Labor Hall at noon today and voted on the question of going out on strike as a protest against the alleged harsh treatment received from their foreman. A narrow majority voted against the idea of a walkout, and work on the bridge is going on as usual with all the men in their places.

During the recent political campaign the men made no protest, out of consideration for their business agent, Thomas Tooms, now member-elect of the Legislature. Now that the contest is over Mr. Tooms took the matter up with Mr. Townsend of the bridge company, and told him this morning that it would be next to impossible to keep the men at work unles sthe foreman to whom they objected was discharged. Mr. Townsend refused to adopt this suggestion on the ground that the foreman in question is efficient and is able to get the work done cheaper than any other man on the job holding a similar position.

Mayor Duncan and Ald. Phelan, the latter chairman of the bridge committee, were called into the conference. The Mayor declared that Mr. Tooma was an agitator, while Ald. Phelan was of the opin on that the new member of the Legislature was unreasonable in his demands. Both intimated that Mr. Tooms' real object was to secure a higher rate of pay, despite the fact that the men have agreed to work for 45 cents an hour.

This Mr. Tooma most emphatically denies. He says that the men have a contract setting the rate of wages and that the agreement will be respected.

PIERRE LENOIR EXECUTED TODAY FOR HAVING HAD DEALINGS WITH ENEMY

Faces Firing Squad Second Time—Life Spared on Sept. 19th in a Most Dramatic Manner.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Oct. 24.—Pierre Lenoir, convicted on the charge of having had intelligence with the enemy, was executed at Sante Prison at seven o'clock this morning.

Sentenced May 8th.

Lenoir was doomed to death on May 8th, 1918, and desperate, but futile efforts were made to gain a commutation of his sentence. On September 19th, last when the firing squad was in position and all preparations for his execution made, his life was spared for the time in a most dramatic manner. His attorney asserted that Lenoir could give evidence wanted in the case of Joseph Caillaux, who was yesterday brought before the high court of the French Senate on a charge of conspiring. Lenoir was given a searching examination by judicial authorities, but subsequently it was announced that the sentence would be carried out.

The Third Victim.

Paris, Oct. 24.— Pierre Lenoir is the third person to be executed on charges arising out of attempts made by German agents to conduct a "Defeatist Campaign," in 1915 and others who met death as a result of revelations made against them were Bolo Pasha, executed April 17 1918, and M. Duval, who faced a firing squad July 17, 1918. Both were directors of a Germanophile newspaper.

HUNS ARE AT OLD INTRIGUE GAME

WOULD ESTABLISH AUTONOMOUS REPUBLIC IN ALSACE-LORRAINE NOW.

ARCH-CONSPIRATOR CAUGHT

REVOLUTIONARY LITERATURE SEIZED AT HOME OF GERMAN NAMED KOESSLER.

Strasbourg, Oct. 24 — The conspiracy for a revolt in Alsace-Lorraine, having for its object the establishment of an autonomous republic there, is assuming greater proportions than at first anticipated. Koessler, the man alleged to be the arch-conspirator and who has been placed under arrest, has, according to military authorities, made a confession, admitting that he has received 500,000 francs from Germany since last May. The funds were sent to him from Baden, it is said.

Acting as intermediary between the Berlin Foreign Office and the conspirators here, according to Koessler's revelations to the police, was Herr von Gruenellius, a relative of former Imperial Chancellor Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg. According to the military authorities, Koessler has admitted having introduced Herr von Gruenellius to Deputy Jean Longuet last summer, while the latter was spending a few weeks' vacation near Strasbourg. He says the two had a long conference.

Admits He Saw Him.

M. Longuet, in an open letter to the Matin, admits meeting Herr von Gruenellius, but asserts it was a social visit and that no politics was discussed. He adds that the charge is a "political manoeuvre on the part of his enemies on the eve of the election."

Literature seized at the home of Koessler bore the caption, "The Neutral Republic of Alsace-Lorraine," and called upon the population of the two provinces to separate from France as well as Germany.

PETROGRAD FED BY SACK CARRIERS

FOOD SMUGGLED INTO CITY AND SOLD AT FABULOUS PRICES.

RED GUARDS ARE ENVADED

COMMUNIST LAW VIOLATED BUT PRICES MAKE THE RISK WORTH WHILE.

London, Oct. 24.—Petrograd is virtually being fed by "sack carriers" persons who bring in small amounts of eatables from outlying sections in violation of communist law. They are in constant danger, but prices they obtain make the risks worth while.

A report just made to the British Foreign Office by a secret agent in Petrograd gives interesting details of how the "sack carriers" work. A person goes from Petrograd to a nearby country district where, notwithstanding reports to the contrary, there is food, and purchases as much as can be conveniently carried in a sack thrown over the shoulder.

All Trains Crowded.

Every train in Russia is crowded and when the "sack carrier" boards one he finds hundreds of other persons—men and women—with their sacks of food trying to get into Petrograd. The more there are the greater his chances of getting into the city. Each train is met at stations just outside the city by Red guards. As the train draws into the station the "sack carriers" pile off in drores, and every one scurries about to avoid the guards. A certain number, of course, are caught, but hundreds get through. They then slip along through back streets and to alleys to avoid the communist police and troops until they reach the back gate of rear stairs of their customers to whom they sell the food at fabulous prices.

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire were tendered a civic reception at Calgary.

THE BOLSHEVIKI ARE AFRAID OF BLOCKADE

WARNS GERMANY CO-OPERATION WITH ENTENTE WILL BE ACT OF HOSTILITY.

London, Oct. 24.—A wireless despatch received from Moscow says that the Bolshevik Foreign Minister Tchitcherin has notified the German Government that participation by Germany in a blockade against Russia, as has been requested by the Entente, will be regarded as a deliberate act of hostility. The Foreign Minister expresses the hope that Germany will reply to the allied request by an emphatic refusal to acquiesce.

The despatch adds that Techitcherin also has sent a note to the Belgian Government declaring that any recruiting of Belgians to fight against Russia will be regarded as an act of hostility. This note was provoked, according to Techitcherin, by reports that the North Russian Government since the withdrawal of the British troops, had announced its intention to recruit volunteer detachments in Sweden, Denmark, Belgian and Jugo-Slavia.

50,000 BALLOTS SPOILED MONDAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Oct 24.—As the ballot boxes are officially opened and the ballots counted, large numbers of spoiled ballots are reported. It was reported today that thirty per cent. of the general election ballots cast in Northwest Toronto were spoiled, presumably mostly by women, who were not sufficiently acquainted with the procedure of election. The percentage of referendum ballots spoiled was much smaller.

20,000 in Toronto.

It is estimated that twenty thousand ballots on the elections were spoiled in Toronto alone, and perhaps fifty thousand throughout the Province.

LLOYD GEORGE'S GOVERNMENT DEFEATED ON THE ALIEN BILL

Measure was but of Minor Importance and Believed That Govt. May Not Resign—Secretary Shortt, May Retire

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Oct. 25.—Members of the Lloyd George Cabinet are today considering the situation which has arisen as a result of an adverse vote in the House of Commons yesterday, when the Government's amendment to the Alien Bill was rejected by a vote of 185 to 113.

Half the Members Absent.

Because of the fact that there were only about half of the members of the House in their seats when the vote was taken, it is believed that the Government will not resign. But it is possible that Edward Shortt, Home Secretary, who was in charge of the Alien Bill, may quit office. Andrew Bonar Law, Government leader in the House, secured delay until Monday for his colleagues by moving an adjournment immediately after the result of the vote on the Alien Bill had been announced.

Vote of Confidence?

Bonar Law's declaration that any subsequent action by the Ministry would "depend upon the view of the House of Commons as a whole," may indicate an intention on the part of the Government to ask for a vote of confidence at an early date. The Ministerial Council, under the presidency of Premier Lloyd George, discussed the political situation this morning, and later the entire Cabinet assembled.

Reconsider Decision.

It was reported early this afternoon that the Cabinet was devising a method by which the Commons might reconsider its decision regarding the aliens' pilot certificates, on which the Government was defeated. It is pointed out that such certificates are restricted to a few French cross-channel pilots daily entering British ports, in return for similar privileges to British pilots. Yesterday's action in the House was a refusal to modify restrictions withholding pilots' certificates from all aliens.

BOTH BYLAWS ARE EXPECTED TO CARRY

CITY COUNCIL, BOARD OF TRADE AND VETERANS WORK LIKE TROJANS

The two bylaws being voted on today seem to be attracting only a fair measure of interest. Nevertheless, the returns are bing looked for with keen interest by those that have the welfare of this city at heart. The City Council are working industriously to secure as large a vote as possible in favor of the Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Co's bylaw, and in this they have valued co-operation from the Board of Trade.

Both bodies are very anxious to have this bylaw pass and thus bring another large industry to Peterboro.

Great War Veterans are also making strenuous efforts to secure a majority vote for their exemption measure in today's polling. They only need a straight plurality vote, while the Nashua Co's bylaw requires a three-fifth majority to carry.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1919.

FIRST GUN IN THE CAMPAIGN.

THE PESSIMIST is always with us, and he forces himself to the front every time the Government floats a Victory Loan. He declares that the people are not interested, and that they will not cripple themselves financially—these are his words, not ours—to help the Administration out of a hole. But events of the past two years have demonstrated that this particular variety of calamity howler has no gift of prophecy.

"The war is over," says this same pessimist today, who, perhaps, fashions his judgments with himself as a standard. "You cannot convince the people that money is required to pay the bills. It is going to take a lot of hard work to sell bonds this year."

Everybody knows that. It required hard work, skilful management, expert service to float the loans of 1917 and 1918, but the object was achieved in excess of the several amounts aimed at. The same strenuous efforts will be needed this year. They will be employed. The campaign will be carried on by practically the same leaders with the same energetic enthusiasm. The results at the end of the campaign will show another triumph.

All doubts as to the interest taken in the pending drive were set at rest at the luncheon held yesterday at the Empress oteHl. A glance over the audience was sufficient to convert the unbelievers and to convince the skeptical. The best business men in the city were there, men who always take success as a matter of course and who, in the management of their own affairs know nothing of failure. The enthusiasm of these undaunted and unwearied hustlers is as fervent today as it was when the outcome of the war was still problematic. They understand the nation's financial position. They would exert themselves only in a worthy cause. Their confidence in this plan of raising money should be all that is required to establish public faith in the movement.

JUST THINK IT OVER.

A LOCAL FIRM manufactures under a contract a certain line of goods for one of the big department stores in Toronto with which so many residents of Peterborough do business under the delusion that they are getting bargains. The manufacturer gets $4 per article for his goods. Visiting the Toronto store the other day he found his goods on display listed at $11 an article. These goods are shipped to local consumers, who order from the Toronto firm's bulky catalogue. And yet there are those who still wonder at he high cost of living and complain of conditions that they help to bring upon themselves.

A PROVINCE OF WICKFIELDS.

WASN'T IT Lawyer Wickfield, one of the characters in Dickens' story of David Copperfield, who was always going behind the returns to read the motives of people in their every action? He might approve of that action as a general proposition while lamentingg what he regarded as the selfish spirit that inspired it.

Apparently, there are thousands of men—women, too—of the Wickfield stamp among the voters of Ontario. They accept at its full face value everything the Provincial Government accomplished in the way of moral progress, yet, like the supercritical Mr. Wickfield, they concluded that the inspiration for all this reform was the promotion of party interest. They endorsed, in short emphatically and with enthusiasm, the Ontario Temperance Act, and yet took the life of the Administration that gave that legislation to the Province.

Mr. Rowell, of somewhat seared memory among his former political associates in Ontario, might have left behind him a different record as Liberal leader if he had understood this inexplicable phase of human nature. If he had got his banish-the-bar policy before the people in the form of a plebiscite, to be submitted on the same day as the election of 1914 was held, his policy would beyond all question have been adopted, even if it was a compromise, but the Wickfields would have united to make another holiday by slaughtering Mr. Rowell and his followers.

MR. BURNHAM'S FREAK RESOLUTION.

WE CANNOT BELIEVE that Mr. Burnham, naturally disappointed over the result of Ontario's vote on the referendum, is serious when he introduces a resolution into Parliament providing for the extension of prohibition by forbidding the use of tobacco and playing cards, and the decorating of feminine headgear with the feathers of wild but harmless birds wantonly slaughtered for the development of millinery display. We are convinced that in this step Mr. Burnham is simply sarcastic just as the late Sir Richard Cartwright was in 1892 when he introduced his historic freak resolution. J. D. Edgar of Toronto had preferred charges against Sir Adolphe Caron and demanded an investigation by a committee of the House. Sir Adolphe and his friends amended the charges and selected their own judges to hear them. Sir Richard's resolution called for the extension of this privilege to every British subject—Liberals only excepted—accused of crime.

But, after all, Mr. Burnham has not to any extent anticipated public sentiment. Tobacco and card playing have been under the ban of the social reformers for years. Recent events are more than likely to encourage them to new efforts. Mr. Burnham simply gets into the movement by helping to rock the cradle in which it is being nurtured.

Forbidding the use of the plumage of wild birds on women's hats is nothing new. Such a law has been in existence for years in the United States, where it is a misdemeanor to wear an aigrette as a part of feminine adornment. The slaughter of wild birds, that make natural music for the world, is forbidden, for such a purpose. Any American women with a taste for feathery finery, can decorate her hat with the feathers of fowls slain for their food value, and get away with it; or with ostrich plumes, if she be equal to the expenditure, because these are taken from the bird without destroying its life.

The world moves. Apparently it has got far in advance of our contemporary on George street, and other ill-advised and self-appointed critics of public men and events.

It certainly requires bravery on the part of a public man to sponsor anti-plumage legislation in the face of enfranchised womanhood. But Mr. Burnham's leading characteristic has always been something that his friends regard as courage and his detractors refer to as temerity.

WHY NOT?

(Hamilton Herald.)

PROBABLY Mr. Burnham of Peterborough intended his amendment to the Prohibition Act as a specimen of legislative satire. The Act provides for the prohibition of the manufacture of liquor in, or its importation into, any province where the people declare by referendum vote that such is their desire. Mr. Burnham thinks the Act does not go far enough. There are other things besides liquor which are regarded as evils by many people but which are not yet prohibited by law. Should not the people be free to say by plebiscite whether these things also should be prohibited? Why confine prohibitory action to liquor? And so Mr. Burnham proposes that the provisions of the bill be extended to playing cards, the use of the feathers of wild birds for personal adornment or other ornamental purposes, and to the use of tobacco in any form.

Why not? Indeed, the list of questionable things which many people would like to have abolished might be extended indefinitely. Why not put 'em all on the list, and give the people the privilege of voting for their suppression? The social service secretary of the American Methodist Church says that tobacco is the next evil to be tackled by moral reform crusaders, and that they won't be satisfied until the vile weed has followed liquor into the limbo of prohibited things. The crusaders don't like tobacco and they claim the right to take it away from those who do like it. No doubt the crusaders like some things which the tobacco-users don't like; why should not the latter organize to take these things away from the crusaders? What's fair to one is fair for others.

THE PULL OF THE STRIKE.

(Buffalo Express.)

A strike may in itself have no purpose beyond an increase in wages, so far as the bulk of the men who engage in it are concerned. But it means disturbance and opportunity for agitators of disorder.

OH, SURE!

(Guelph Mercury.)

Wouldn't it be a calamity if, some day, prohibition should be enforced against election speeches. When that day comes the whole world will rise up and protest against this infringement of personal liberty.

MAJOR TOLMIE MAY BE IN THE CABINET

MEMBER FROM WINDSOR SPOKE OF AS MINISTER OF EDUCATION.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—Who's to be the next Minister of Education for Ontario? There is much speculation in educational circles on this point.

It is suggested by some educationists that no matter what party or parties form a Cabinet there is a probability that Hon. Dr. H. J. Cody may retain the portfolio of Education. The fact that he was elected without opposition in North-east Toronto leaves the way open, in a sense for him to be approached without regard to party bias, and if Dr. Cody is anxious to carry out his program of educational improvements it is argued that he might not need much persuasion to stay with his work.

Major J. C. Tolmie, M.P.P., of Windsor, a soldier-preacher, is another man mentioned as a possibility.

Mr. William Houston, M.A., former trustee and editorial writer, was around the quarters of the United Farmers yesterday while they were in conference, and his visit there gave rise to rumors that he aspired to the portfolio. In discussing the matter to-day he jestingly admitted that he was "the best man in sight for the job."

WIT AND WISDOM

Horseflesh.

Waiter (to demobbed diner): "Ah good morning sir! So you're back in harness, again?"

Diner: "Yes, and I wish this confounded steak was, too!"

How They Got By.

"It's a mighty good thing," said Uncle Eben, "dat de Ten Commandments was handed down direct, instead of bein' obliged to go through de hands of a lot of committees."

A Very Raw "Rooky."

New Recruit (to Quartermaster): 'Can I have my puttees changed, sir?"

Quartermaster (eyeing puttees): 'But your puttees are new—you've only had them a few days. Why do you want them changed?"

New Recruit—"They're too tight, sir."

Rather Rough.

"Will you," he asked, his voice trembling—"will you give me a kiss?"

Gently, but firmly, Angelina thrust him from her.

"I think you had better see father."

He started, his face pale. Could her love not stand the test of possible parental anger?

"Why?" he cried. "What do you mean?"

She caressed her soft young cheek with her slender fingers.

"Father is a barber," she answered gently.

Nothing Else.

Money isn't everything.
So the wise old sages tell us,
But they never make reply
When you ask: "What else will buy
Goods the merchants want to sell us.

Genius.

"Are you an expert accountant?"

"Yes sir," said the applicant.

"Your written references seem to be all right, but tell me more about yourself."

"Well, my wife kept a household budget for 30 days. One night after dinner I sat down and in less than half an hour found out how much we owed our grocer."

"Hang up your hat and coat. The job is yours."

As The Result Strikes An Outsider

(Montreal Gazette)

The Ontario general election yesterday resulted in such losses for the Government that its retirement at an early date is to be looked for. This was not generally expected. The conditions, however, were unusual. Instead of two parties appealing for support, there were four. The Conservatives were really an advanced socialistic organization, under the dominance of Sir Adam Beck and two or three city newspapers, which roared rather than reasoned and made men of conservative instincts afraid of their platforms. Against them were the Liberals also Socialistic in their attitude; the Labor party, of advanced theorists, and the United Farmers, who on the matter of spending money at least were advocates of a moderate policy. The multiplicity of appeals thus indicated made for uncertainty. Then, in the excitement of the war fever, votes had been given to women, which introduced another factor of unknown influence. The Government, under Sir William Hearst, had some mistakes in its record. Yielding to a senseless call, it introduced in the Legislature and passed a measure to extend beyond the time when their electoral mandates expired the terms of the members. In this it probably injured its cause. The understanding was that there would be no contests to fill vacancies arising in the constituencies. But this was a matter which party managers could not control. Men who cared nothing for either party were nominated—when bye-elections were required; and won seats from the Conservatives. Independence, which has been growing in Canada, was encouraged by what happened. Men who owe no allegiance to Conservative or Liberal plaforms will be a powerful factor in the new Legislature. The plans of the Government involved heavy expenditures and heavy taxes; but the taxes were paid by the few and the many seemed to like the outlays of public money as well as the public ownership theories which ministers advanced. They liked other things better, it would seem, or, with both old parties with the same battle cries they may have thought that it made no difference which they preferred. The Liberals have been showing strength in the other provinces, where things electoral have been going in their favor. Evidently also they have been recovering in Ontario. If there be a general lesson it may be that a Conservative Government does well to follow conservative policy and appeal to the conservative element in the electorate. It was on such lines that in the past Conservatives won their greater successes, and today some of the stronger administrations in the provinces, whatever they call themselves, are conservative either actually or by comparison with that whic has ruled Ontario for some years and has now been broken.

WHEN EX-EMPEROR OF RUSSIA RETURNED HOME

The Dowager ex-Empress of Russia has returned to her childhood's home at Copenhagen.

A refuge from the Bolsheviki, she is now the guest of her nephew, King Christian V. of Denmark.

Surely this tragic lady is one of the most pathetic figures of the war's victims.

Born in 1847, a daughter of King Christian IX., of Denmark—popularly known as the grandfather of Europe—the Princess Dagmar was three years younger than Queen Alexandra, Queen-mother of Great Britain.

The royal refugee, in 1886, left her father's little kingdom to become the bride of the Grand Duke Alexander Alexandrovitch, heir to the throne of all the Russians—the Princess was first of all engaged to his elder brother, who died.

But what tragedy she has known on her pilgrimage. What memories she brings back with her.

Beautiful and charming, the world went into ecstacies over the Princess. Even the poets of France lent their lutes in praise of Princess Dagmar, a brunette with sparkling black eyes.

The marriage was a happy one, and any day in winter the Empress might be seen driving her sleigh whirled along by from three to eight marvellous plunging stallions of the far-famed Orloff breed, from the cruppers of which floated a curtain of blue silk to keep the snow, pulverized by their glittering hoofs, from flying into the imperial sleigh—poor vanished splendors, distant in a forgotten past!

For thirteen years Marie Feodorovna shared the throne of Russia with her husband. For twenty years more she reigned as dowager empress.

Connected with most of the Royal houses of Europe, with her son Emperor of Russia, her sister Queen-mother of England, her brother King of Greece, her nephew King of Denmark, another nephew King of Norway and another sister Duchess of Cumberland, the Dowager Empress was envied by many.

To-day, her children all dead, the country of her adoption in ruins, after knowing tragedy and distress, her beautiful hair powdered with grey, her face grave and shrivelled and forever sad and inconsolable, she seeks a quiet refuge on the shores of her beloved Baltic, where in the days of her childhood she used to play.

FEAR DELAY FOR VETS

Opposition Members Are Anxious to Hear Calder's Report.

Ottawa, Oct 24—Opposition members are anxious to know when the report of the Calder committee on soldiers' civil re-establishment, which completed the taking of evidence over a week ago, will be ready for presentation to the House.

They are suspicious that it is being delayed until after the Victoria by-elections on Monday for the reason that the gratuity question is a big issue there.

Miss Canada Gives Account of Her Stewardship

And explains her War Financing to her citizens

Miss Canada: In humility, because of the sacrifices which have been made for me, but in pride because of the Spirit of Fortitude of your Sons, I come to enlist your most sympathetic support, as expressed by your financial aid, to enable me to meet the many obligations that still remain towards the men who fought. I also wish you to provide me with sufficient National Working Capital to consolidate the position in the world's markets, that you, by your industry, have so honourably won.

Citizens: Perhaps you might like to take this opportunity of telling us how you expended the $610,000,000 we loaned to you last year?

Miss Canada: I would. You will recall that I asked you for funds to carry on the war, and to enable me to advance credits to Great Britain and our Allies, who, by their purchases here, have prospered our farms and factories. Do you want details?

Citizens: Yes. The more facts and figures you give us, the more fully will you answer the natural queries of those to whom you are now appealing for a further loan.

Miss Canada: Very well, then. I suggest you ask me questions. That is the best way to bring out the facts.

Citizens: How much of the Victory Loan 1918 did you use for war expenditures?

Miss Canada: Three-fifths of it —$380,000,000 in fact. Before giving this expenditure in detail I wish to explain that your demobilization expenses as against those of mobilization have been concentrated within a few months. The expense of transporting our Army overseas was spread over more than four years. Consequently the cost of it did not bulk so large in any one year's budget. But to bring home in a few months hundreds of thousands of men, spread from England, France and Flanders, Italy, Egypt, Palestine to far-off Siberia, was a gigantic and expensive task. It taxed all my resources.

Citizens: Realizing the conditions you faced, because of the shortage of shipping, and remembering that other parts of the Empire were eager for the speedy return of their men, we think you did very well. Give us now the details of your war expenditures.

Miss Canada: $312,900,000 was spent for the payment of soldiers since the Armistice—the cost of feeding them, part cost of bringing them home, separation allowances to their dependents, the maintenance of hospitals, their medical and nursing staffs, in Britain as well as Canada, the organization and conduct of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment (which includes the Vocational Training Schools) and the financing and operation of the Soldier's Land Settlement Act.

In addition to this, I have already authorized and am paying gratuities to soldiers on their discharge.

Citizens: What is the amount of the gratuity?

Miss Canada: I used $59,000,000 of the Victory Loan 1918 for this purpose, and expect to use $61,000,000 of Victory Loan 1919.

Citizens: Did you make any other disbursements under the heading of war expenditures?

Miss Canada: Yes, $9,000,000 was spent at Halifax, to be used in reconstruction after the disaster.

Citizens: We quite appreciate the fact that these were all necessary war expenditures. Perhaps you will tell us now what you did in the way of advancing credits to Great Britain and our Allies?

Miss Canada: With pleasure. I advanced Great Britain $173,500,000 to help purchase your grain; and I loaned her another $30,000,000 to buy other food stuffs.

Citizens: Did Great Britain buy any fish from us?

Miss Canada: Yes, $9,000,000 worth. I loaned her the money to pay you for it.

Citizens: Were there any other loans to Great Britain?

Miss Canada: Yes, Great Britain bought $2,900,000 worth of ships built here. I loaned her the money to pay for them. Then I loaned her $5,500,000 to meet other obligations in connection with munition purchases.

Citizens: What security have you for all this?

Miss Canada: Great Britain's pledge to repay—backed by the resources that made her Banker, Manufacturer and Bulwark to her Allies during the war.

Citizens: That's good enough. Did you do anything for our Allies?

Miss Canada: I loaned them $8,200,000 to buy your foodstuffs, raw material and manufactured products.

Citizens: That accounts for last year's Loan. Will you tell us now why you need another Loan, and how you purpose using it?

Miss Canada: I need another loan to finish paying the expenses of demobilization, since the proceeds of the 1918 Loan were exhausted, and to meet the obligations I still owe to your Soldier Sons. I also need money for National Working Capital.

Citizens: What are the obligations to soldiers?

Miss Canada: The cost of bringing them home. The payment of all those still undemobilized, including sick and wounded, who are still in hospital, and who of course remain on the Army Payroll until discharged. The upkeep of hospitals, and their medical and nursing staffs.

Citizens: How much will these items entail?

Miss Canada: $200,000,000.

Citizens: Does that include the gratuities?

Miss Canada: No. I shall need $61,000,000 of the New Loan to finish paying these.

Citizens: Will that include the money to finance the Dept. of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, including the Vocational Training Schools, and the working out of the Soldiers' Land Settlement Act?

Miss Canada: No. I estimate $57,000,000 for this. I have already approved loans to the amount of $26,000,000 to soldiers already settled on the land under this Act.

Citizens: How many soldiers are taking advantage of it?

Miss Canada: Up to August 15th, 29,495 soldiers had applied for land under the terms of the Act. 22,281 applications had been approved. 9,043 men were already placed on farms, and millions of acres will be under cultivation, that might otherwise be idle.

Citizens: What do you consider the great national advantage of having soldiers become farmers, apart from increased production of food.

Miss Canada: The love of outdoor life and the resourcefulness of our soldier-citizens are just the qualities to make them successful farmers, and upholders of the best Canadian tradition.

Citizens: Have you any other war obligations?

Miss Canada: Not that I foresee. I have covered the major ones.

Citizens: You purpose extending further credits to Great Britain and our Allies, do you not?

Miss Canada: Yes, to the extent that your Loan will permit me to.

Citizens: Why sell to Great Britain and our Allies if they can't pay cash?

Miss Canada: Their orders are absolutely essential to the continuance of your agriculture and industrial prosperity. The magnitude of their orders, and the amount of employment thus created will depend upon the success of the Victory Loan 1919.

Citizens: Will you explain simply this idea of credit, and why it is so necessary that we should give it?

Miss Canada: Farmers and manufacturers (and that includes the workers on these orders) must be paid cash for their products.

Therefore I must borrow money from you to give credit, temporarily, to Great Britain and our Allies.

Actually, no money will pass out of Canada.

If you do not grant this credit, other countries will; and they will get the trade, and have the employment that should be yours, to distribute amongst their workers.

And remember, you absolutely need these orders to maintain employment. If you don't finance them, employment will not be as plentiful, business will feel the depression and conditions everywhere will be adversely affected.

Citizens: Will you use the proceeds of the Loan for any other purpose?

Miss Canada: Yes. I must carry out the National Shipbuilding and Reconstruction programme. I am also committed to advance loans to Provincial Housing Commissions.

Citizens: What are individual—personal advantages to be gained in buying Victory Bonds?

Miss Canada: The fact that Victory Bonds are among the world's premier investments—in security—in good interest yield—and in ready saleability.

Citizens: What do you mean by Security?

Miss Canada: I mean that the whole resources of Canada—all the assets of all the people—plus all the wealth yet to be discovered is behind my pledge to repay you your principal when due and to meet each interest payment.

Citizens: What do you mean by "good interest yield?"

Miss Canada: You receive on your savings deposits 3%. Invest in my Bonds, with the security of all Canada behind you, and you get 5½%.

Citizens: What do you mean by "ready saleability?"

Miss Canada: I mean that if, at any time, you wish to get cash for Victory Bonds—that is, sell them—you can do it at a moment's notice. Or, if you want to borrow money on them, any bank will loan it to you and accept them as security. For all practical purposes Victory Bonds are as good as money, except that if you keep a bill in a box at home, or in a vault, it doesn't earn interest but Victory Bonds do.

Citizens: Would you advise a person to take money out of a Savings Bank and invest it in Victory Bonds, and if so, why?

Miss Canada: I would—because I pay almost double the interest paid by Savings Banks and my obligation is undoubted.

Citizens: Do you think Victory Bonds will increase in value?

Miss Canada: They ought to. Every person who subscribed to Victory Bonds last year has made money. I have every reason to believe my credit position must steadily advance.

Citizens: You have given a good account of your stewardship, Miss Canada, and realizing the obligations we have to our soldier sons,—our brothers—to our farmers and industrial producers—to our workers everywhere—to You, the Spirit of our beloved country—to those who have so gladly and gallantly died for her—we pledge ourselves to buy your Victory Bonds to the absolute limit of our ability, and thus ensure the realization of our highest and best aspirations for Canada and all Her peoples.

Cut this out and read it carefully. It will answer a great many of the questions you may be thinking of in connection with the

HOBSON'S CHOICE FOR DISTILLERS

SAY THEY ARE PLEASED WITH THE TEMPERANCE VOTE IN ONTARIO

ADVISED CUSTOMERS TO VOTE NO

SATISFIED SO LONG AS THEY CAN SHIP LIQUOR INTO PROVINCE

Ottawa, Oct. 24—According to their counsel, R. T. Ferguson, of Winnipeg, distillers are not dejected as the result of Ontario's vote on the referendum.

He points out that they advised their customers in Ontario to vote four "Noes" at the referendum, and says that the result should not be regarded entirely as a triumph for the "drys." A large number of those who voted against the repeal of the Temperance Act and against the sale of spirituous and malt liquor through Government agencies," says Ferguson, "were persons who were satisfied with the Act, who favored the retention of the provision of the statute permitting importation of alcholic beverages for domestic use, and who did not approve of the introduction of a new system of selling liquor over the counter."

Every Reason for Satisfaction.

"The distillers of Canada," said Mr. Ferguson, "have every reason to be satisfied with the referendum vote in Ontario. They have all along been opposed to a return to the public drinking bars, and the vote, in the first place, proves that in this they are supported by public opinion. In questions two and three (which dealt with the sale of light beers) the distillers were not materially interested.

Advised Vote of Four "Noes."

"Question four, however, was one of great importance, and on behalf of the distillers, I interviewed Sir William Hearst and asked him what system of Government control over the sale and distribution of liquor he proposed to institute in the event of this question being answered in the affirmative. I pointed out that if it was proposed to have over-the-counter sales of liquor in Government stores, as the prohibitionists were stating, the distillers would have to recommend a "No" vote to this question, as they considered that any system which made it so easy to obtain liquor would not be in the public interest. There is little question that this view was largely held therefore, the distillers placed in the hands of their Ontario customers, who number well over 100,000 people, a booklet indicating their sympathy with a four "No" vote, as this meant the Ontario Temperance Act without amendment, and that Act expressly provides for the obtaining of liquor iner-Provincially for use within private dwelling houses. Had there been any statement of the Goverment's plan, the vote on the question would probably have been different.

Opposed to Prohibition.

"There is no doubt that all those who voted "Yes" to the fourth question are opposed to complete prohibition; and, while it may be granted that many of those who voted 'No' are opposed to the use of liquor in any form, a large number of the distillers' customers, who from experience were satisfied with the provisions of the Act, and were unwilling to vote for a system which the Government had not explained, must be included among those who cast a negative vote Clearly those people were not prohibitionists.

"The distillers of Canada interpret the result as a mandate to the Dominion Government to allow the Ontario Temperance Act to have free expression without further delay."

The Value of Rest.

Your physician will tell you that whenever possible you should lie down for a little rest each day, says the Thrift Magazine. To do so will take some of the load off that faithful heart of yours which keeps pumping away without cessation day and night. Your physician will explain that when sitting down, as compared with standing, you save your heart nine beats a minute, and that when you lie down you take off an additional six beats. So merely lying down means less pumping to be done, and less wear and tear on the body's most vital organ.

It is thrift of time to take a few moments each day from the activities of one's work and stretch out full length. Housewives and others whose work keeps them on their feet a great deal, should sit as much as possible. Increased vitality and longer lives will result from following these simple suggestions.

Quiet Retreat.

An enthusiastic young minister who followed one of the old type in a sleepy village, was thumbing the rostrum a good deal, and disturbed a spider which had found peaceful refuge in one of the crannies for many a day.

Wandering up the aisle homeless, it was met by another spider, and the tale of woe was imparted.

"I can't stand this new minister thumping and jumping about. I have lived in the pulpit for many years, but I can't stay there any longer."

Said the second spider, actuated by a fine spirit of charity: "Come along with me. I haven't been disturbed for fifty years. My home's in the collection box at the door."—London Tit-Bits.

The carelessness of smokers and the ignorance of children are to be blamed for most of the fires which occur in New York.

World's Greatest Cataract.

Niagara Falls is not the greatest cataract in the world. The greatest cataract is said to be on the Iguasa river, which partly separates Brazil and Argentina. The precipice over which the river plunges is 210 feet high, that of Niagara being 167 feet. The cataract is 13,123 feet wide, or about two and a half times as wide as Niagara. It is estimated that 100,000,000 tons of water pass over Niagara in one hour. A like estimate gives the falls of Iguasa 140,000,000 tons.

It is said that every man has his price — yet lots of men give themselves away.

There are lots of cross-tongued people in this world—they talk one way and think another.

NEW LIBERAL LEADER TAKES SEAT IN HOUSE

HON. MACKENZIE KING WAS OUT OF PARLIAMENT EIGHT YEARS

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 24—Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, leader of the Liberal party of Canada, has taken seat this afternoon in the House of Commons as member of the County of Prince, Prince Edward Island He will be introduced by D. D. McKenzie and Hon. W. S. Fielding. Mr. King has been out of the Commons since his defeat, along with that of the Laurier Government, in which he was Minister of Labor, in the reciprocity election of 1911.

Mr. King modestly enough, will not actually occupy the seat of leadership during this session. The acting leader, Mr. D. D. McKenzie, will continue to occupy the desk formerly held by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The session is nearly at an end, and Mr. King prefers that Mr. MsKenzie should not be disturbed. He himself will take the seat of Hon. Rodolph Lemieux, absent in Europe. At the beginning of next session, Mr. King will occupy the leader's desk.

The entrance of Mr. King to the House will be marked by an immediate speech by him on the Grand Trunk deal. The debate on the second reading is drawing to a close, but Mr. King considers the subject of great and urgent national importance, and desires, as leader of the Liberal party to present his views on the situation. It is known that Mr. King is of the determined belief that it is against the public interest for the proposed Grand Trunk agreement to be ratified without much fuller consideration than is possible in the short time now before Parliament.

When he entered the Chamber, escorted by Mr. McKenzie and Mr. Fielding the Speaker announces: "I have the honor to inform the House that the Clerk of the House has received from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery a certificate of the election and return of Hon. William Lyon MacKenzie King for the electoral district of Prince."

Mr. MacKenzie then said: "Mr. Speaker, I have the honor to present to you Hon. William Lyon MacKenzie King who has been elected in the electoral district of Prince. Mr. King has signed the roll and taken the oath and desires to take his seat."

After which Mr. Speaker declared: "Let the honorable member take his seat," shaking hands with Mr. King.

CANADA LAID FIRST CABLE.

Earliest Messages Were Exchanged Sixty-one Years Ago.

The first messages to cross the Atlantic by cable were exchanged August 16, 1858. The first submarine cable on this side of the Atlantic was that between New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, a distance of ten miles, by the Governments of the two provinces in 1851. The second cable in America was also laid by Canadian enterprise between Cape Breton and Newfoundland, a distance of 85 miles, in 1856.

The idea of laying a cable across the Atlantic originated not with Cyrus W. Field, who organized the company that was ultimately successful in the enterprise, but with Frederick Newton Gisborne, an Englishman who came to Canada in 1845 and spent the first two years with his brother, Hartley, on a farm near St. Eustache, Quebec. Becoming interested in electric telegraphy, then showing possibilities of commercial development, the brothers studied the Morse alphabet and secured employment with the Montreal Telegraph Co. as operators in 1847, Frederick Gisborne opening the first office in Quebec.

Some years later Hartley Gisborne went to Egypt, where he became director of the state telegraphs. Frederick became associated with the organization of the British North American Electric Telegraph Association and was deputed to visit New Brunswick and Nova Scotia with the purpose of connecting those provinces with the other Canadas by telegraphs. His representations proving acceptable, he was appointed superintendent and chief operator of the Government lines at Halifax, 1849 to 1851, during which period he became interested in the possibilities of insulating wire in rubber covering to carry the electric current under water. After successful experimentation he prevailed upon the Governments of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick to lay the short cable under Northumberland Strait in 1852. He then proposed the laying of a submarine cable from Cape Breton to Newfoundland and the further extension of cable service from Newfoundland to Ireland. To enlist capital for this later enterprise, he went to New York in the winter of 1853-1854 and there met Cyrus W. Field. The outcome of the interviews with Cyrus Field was the organization of the New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Co., and the successful laying of the Atlantic cable in 1857; but Frederick Newton Gisborne was nevertheless the originator of the idea and prime mover of the enterprise. In 1856 he completed a land telegraph line across Newfoundland that was utilized as a part of the first cable system.

Up to 1854 Cyrus W. Field was not interested in the possibilities of the submarine cable; before meeting Frederick Gisborne he was a moderately wealthy dealer in paper stock in New York City.

Back to Topper.

From the town of Hyde, part of a district near Manchester, where for many years hat making has been carried on, says the London Morning Post, a correspondent sends the following:

The silk hatting industry has been spoken of by ill-informed writers as a decadent trade, but so remarkable has been its revival of late that old men who had gone into retirement in the Denton and Stockport districts are being asked to come back and give the trade the benefit of what little productive energy they possess. There is talk in hatting circles in the Manchester district of a special new brand of topper, to be called the "Victory Derby" in commemoration of the great event lately, when nearly every man on the stand at Epsom on Derby day, from the King downwards, appeared in orthodox dress with a new-style silk hat.

Those who have noticed the trend of the fashions in men's headgear cannot have missed the tendency of late years to follow the continental style in both silks, bowlers and straws. The lower conical-shaped crown of the silk hat has replaced the pre-war style, which had a noticeable curve like a bell, and observant people can detect the French shape here, just as they can in the tapper crown—very slight and only perceptible because the crown is higher than before — of the straw hat of the better quality.

The bowler has changed its shape since 1915 perhaps oftener than any other, but until now it has had a distinctly continental touch, with its higher and more rounded crown and curled brim, which gives a distinguished appearance to a tall man.

So very busy have manufacturers been with the soft felt hats and velour hats that they have rejected all attempts to change the shapes and styles in them, but some slight alteration may be looked for next year.

There is a story going the round of the trade that a special "Peace" hat is soon to be placed on the market. It would not be a surprise to men in the trade if the first head to wear one of these new hats were the King's. It would not be the first time His Majesty had set the fashion in hats and caused a boom in a particular line. Some years ago a Stockport firm submitted an advance sample hat to the King. He was seen in it, and, of course, photographed at a big social function.

A RUSSIAN MURDER LEAGUE.

Strange Story of Activities in Swedish Capital.

At the beginning of August the police of Stockholm discovered what they believed to be a political "murder league" in the Swedish capital. According to the police, the league was composed of Russian Monarchists and its purpose was anti-Bolshevik. Four murders were attributed to it. Sixteen persons were arrested, including five women, and fifty others were under suspicion. The theory held by the Swedish police was that the league intended to end Bolshevism and restore the monarchy in Russia by murdering all the Bolsheviki.

A correspondent of the London Morning Post recently returned from Stockholm holds the opposite theory, that the murders were "executions" by secret Bolshevik agents of traitors to the Bolshvik cause. He says:

"While I was in Stockholm during the years 1917-1919 I had the opportunity of constantly seeing the murdered men — Ardashef, Kalve and Engstrom—and their murderer, the so-called 'Cossack colonel,' Mohamed-Beck Hadjetiache. All these men were constant habitues of the Stockholm Grand Cafe Royal, of notorious fame as the meeting place during the war of scores of German, Austrian, Bulgarian, Turkish and Bolshevist agents, propagandists and other shady personages. During the summer and autumn of 1918 the Grand Hotel Royal and its cafe were crowded with Bolshevist agents, and representatives, official and secret, the Swedish Government having semi-officially recognized the Bolshevist Government and authorized the creation of a Bolshevist legation at Stockholm. Among the members of this 'legation' was Kalve, one of the murdered men, who arrived from Germany with Lenine, but chose to remain in Sweden. This Kalve called himself a 'civil engineer,' but, as I learned, he had spent a couple of terms at one of the Belgian secondary technical schools and then became a professional wrestler and 'strong man' in a traveling circus in Germany. Kalve was appointed by Vorovski, the 'Minister,' as his 'technical attache.' Immediately upon his promotion from a circus wrestler to the Bolshevist diplomatic service Kalve changed both his personal appearance and style of living. From a dirty, unkempt creature in ragged clothes he became an overdressed young blood, with fingers covered with costly rings, gold cigarette case studded with diamonds and heavily [illegible] fan to patronize the Grand Hotel Royal, giving expensive champagne lunches, dinners and suppers and always accompanied by representatives of the demi-monde. He was always escorted by his lieutenant, a Swede named Engstrom (also reported murdered).

"When Vorovski returned from his visit to Berlin in the summer of 1918 a strange thing happened. Kalve, who had been a fanatical supporter of the Soviet system of government, suddenly began openly to condemn Bolshevism, saying that now he had seen it from the inside he was disillusioned; that he had come to the conclusion that all Bolsheviks were scoundrels, and that he had 'resigned' from the Bolshevist service. His late colleagues of the Bolshevist Legation' gave another version of the story. According to them, Vorovski, on his return from Germany, alleged that his two chief lieutenants, Kalve and Zimmermann, had in his absence helped themselves to considerable sums of Swedish crowns from the legation funds.

"A couple of months later I learned that Kalve had offered his services to the Swedish police and was furnishing very serious evidence on the secret activities of Vorovski and the Bolshevist organization in Sweden. The result of this evidence was that the Swedish Government severed diplomatic relations with Bolshevist Russia and 'invited' Vorovski and his staff to leave Sweden, which they did last February. On applying for a safe conduct for himself and his staff Vorovski insisted on including Kalve's name in the list (although Kalve had resigned' several months before), and on being asked why he was so anxious to get a safe conduct for a man who had robbed him, answered: 'I want to get that scoundrel into Russia; then we can hang him.' But the Swedish authorities refused to include Kalve in the list and he remained behind."

A Slow Process.

Mrs. Brown was at the back of the church waiting to have her baby christened. Baby was getting restless, so she beckoned the verger.

"Is the sermon nearly finished?" she whispered.

"No, mum," replied the verger, "another half-hour of it yet. He's only on his 'lastly.'"

"But," said Mrs. Brown, "will it take him half an hour to get through his 'lastly'?"

"No, mum," was the demure reply, "but there's the 'ole more 'ymn and 'im done,' and the 'finally,' and the 'in conclusion to come yet. Don't be impatient."

Somebody Started Yarn That Philosopher's Stone Had Been Found in India

A STORY comes from England to the effect that a British subject in India found, during the war, the long-sought philosopher's stone, and accomplished the miracle of transmuting base metals into gold. As the story goes, the British Government, fearing that this discovery would overturn Governments and destroy the existing gold standard of international exchange, arrested the modern Merlin, court-martialed him on a trumped-up charge of treason, and executed him.

This preposterous yarn is believed, by many, according to English papers. Those that believe it also probably believe that Joan of Arc was not burned to death in the pyre at Rouen, that Doc Cook discovered the North Pole, that Lord Kitchener did not go down to his death in the North Sea. The credulous, like the poor and the profiteers, are always with us.

Even if the story were true, there would be nothing new in it. Men have been killed before because they boasted of possessing the philosopher's stone. Wasn't it Tiberius Caesar who dashed out the brains of an all-too-clever mechanic who declared that he had accomplished the miracle of making malleable glass? Unbreakable glass has had a strange fascination for the inventors of all ages. It has been almost as great a desideratum as transmuting iron and pig lead into raw gold. Old Friar Bacon put the fear of making malleable glass in the forefront of the list of wonders to be accomplished by his great elixir. Our esteemed chronicler Harrison, who was interested in all things and whom nothing escaped, comments thus upon the fascinating problem: "If the philosopher's stone were once found, and one part, thereof mixed with forty parts of molten glass, it would induce such a metallical toughness thereunto that a fall should nothing hurt it in such a manner."

So far the philosopher's stone has eluded the avaricious grasp of man, though time and time again it has been announced that somebody or other has discovered a process of transmuting the baser metals into precious ore. But in spite of these [illegible] our financial system remains undisturbed. And from time to time there are reports in the papers of the secrets of malleable glass having at last been discovered. Only the other day a news despatch announced the discovery of a glass with this "metallical toughness." But I dare say that this grand desideratum is no nearer fulfillment than it was in Friar Bacon's time or in Canon Harrison's day. As for the story of the man who was shot in India for having found the philosopher's stone, I am inclined to believe that it was an old, old story in the days when Cyrus the Great was spreading his peculiar kultur throughout the eastern world. Doubtless if we were to excavate copies of the Thebes Herald or the Memphis Gazette, we should find therein that Ptolemy, or some other Egyptian Kaiser had executed scores of magicians for daring to upset the financial system of Egypt by turning copper and iron into gold.

It's an old world, and in it there is nothing new under the sun.

"Manchester Martyrs."

The execution of the "Manchester Martyrs" in 1867, which caused considerable excitement in British circles over the possible overthrow of Britain's Irish control, was fostered by the Fenian Brotherhood, an Irish political institution initiated in the United States.

March 5, 1867, was the date set for a general rising in the United Kingdom. An attack on Chester Castle, containing 20,000 stand of arms, was planned by branches of the Fenian Brotherhood. The British Government was well informed on the proposed plans, and Col. Kelly and Capt. Deasey, the leaders, were captured by the Manchester police. The Fenians resolved on a rescue, and thirty strong Irishmen attacked the police van in which the prisoners were being conveyed to jail. In their attempt to release the captives the police officer was mortally wounded, and Kelly and Deasy, though handcuffed, escaped. For this deed, three Irishmen, Allen, Larkin and O'Brien, called the "Manchester Martyrs," were executed on November 23, 1867.

Irish national feeling was stirred to a high pitch during the uprising, and fully 150,000 attended the funeral of the "martyrs" at Dublin. The execution was made the subject of a poem later by Timothy D. Sullivan, entitled "God Save Ireland."

Big Appetite for Bugs.

A cliff swallow will eat a thousand flies, mosquitoes, wheat-midgets or beetles that injure fruit trees in a day and therefore are to be encouraged, says the American Forestry Association, of Washington, which is conducting the nation-wide campaign among school children for bird-house building. This bird is also known as the cave swallow because it plasters its nest on the outside of a barn or other building up under the eaves. Colonies of several thousand will build their nests together on the side of a cliff. These nests shaped like a flattened gourd or water-bottle are made of bits of clay rolled into pellets and lined with straw or feathers. This bird visits in the [illegible]

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter."—Miss FLO KELLY, 476 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.

Mr. Hohenzollen as He Appears To-Day

The ex-kaiser, in his exile at Count Bentinck's castle at Amerongen, Holland, is qualifying as the champion wood-sawer of Europe. Within the last six months he has sawn up five thousand fir trees into thirty thousand blocks, and each block bears the date, number of tree and his initials W. H.

No longer does the ex-emperor give his photograph to those he desires to honor, he presents them with a block of wood nine inches in diameter and actually as much as two inches thick, sawn by the imperial hand.

From ten o'clock to one o'clock every morning he saws diligently beneath his favorite fir tree, while the ex-kaiserin reads the papers aloud. For the first week or two Wilhelm did the sawing himself; but he now uses a double-handed saw, and is assisted by a companion, generally his doctor. The ex-kaiser is remarkably strong in his one useful right arm, and he takes a very human delight in the fact that he has tired out very assistant he has employed. While at work he smokes three cigarettes each hour.

We are told that when Wilhelm is not sawing he is usually sulking. He has periods of deep depression, and sits for hours near a greenhouse in the grounds of Count Bentinck's castle speaking to no one. Tugging fretfully at his Vandyke beard, he conjures up memories of what might have been, and these dark hours are succeeded by fits of temper.

A tired old man is the ex-kaiser of today. The fire has gone from his eyes and the ruddiness from his cheeks and despite his strenuous exercise he is putting on weight.

During the day he dresses in mufti, but for dinner he dons one of his gorgeous uniforms, and with his small band of retainers holds a mimic court, thus seeking to recapture a glimpse of his past glory. After dinner he talks with great animation, and he has a disturbing trick of throwing all his weight on the arm of his chair, and his toll of broken chairs is mounting rapidly. All his correspondence is censored, and his naughty spirit chafes against this necessary restriction.

Airplanes His Fear.

His dominant fear is airplanes. He has conceived the idea that he may be kidnapped from the air, and he never ventures into the grounds without first carefully scanning the sky. The other morning a Dutch airplane flying over the castle gave him a severe fright, and he kept indoors for the remainder of the day.

His frequent companion is the little raschund "Senta" which still wears the medal showing its taxes have been paid in Berlin. All the children in the village know "Senta" who has pronounced democratic instincts and a weakness for chasing stray cats.

Wilhelm never ventures outside the castle grounds, the walls of which have been heightened by boards to prevent photographers from taking snapshots. The ex-kaiserin sometimes takes tea at neighbouring houses, but she is rarely away from her husband's side. She is the only one who can restrain him in his fits of passion.

HUNGER RAMPANT IN MOSCOW CITY

RUSSIAN PRINCESS TELLS OF HORRIBLE SIGHTS IN ANCIENT RUSSIAN CAPITAL

Paris, Oct. 23.—Pictures of Moscow's hunger are given in the Figaro by a Russian Princess arriving from Russia. "I will not speak of the terrible, revolting and odious things that passed in the streets of Moscow," she said, "but only of the hunger incidents I saw with my own eyes, and which were repeated day after day. I met a woman and child, (ragged and thin as skeletons, the child crying constantly with an unchanging expression of terror. The mother said that the child was hungry, and asked for a piece of bread, as they had not eaten for 24 hours.

[illegible] turned away saying: 'No,- not money, but bread.'

Envied the Dog.

"Another time I saw a blonde-haired young girl with arms outstretched, leaning like a living crucifix against the wall, and murmuring, 'I am hungry,' Next day she died. I have seen in the middle of a side street a great, yellow, hollowed-aided dog knawing a bone with a little meat attached, while a ten-year-old boy a few steps away, with the pallor of long misery on his face, watched the dog as if hypnotized. With neck outstretched, mouth open and fist clenched, he looked at the dog with hate and ferocity.

Pick From Pavement.

"I have seen children, hardly clothed, hollow-cheeked, and with forms like shadows, on their knees in the street, trying to pick form between the paving stones grains of wheat that had fallen from a torn sack. I have seen before bakeries, men, women and children stretched on the cold stones, awaiting through days and nights their turn to get their meagre ration of bread, and then often falling exhausted and dying at the doorsteps before they received it."

Withdrew Labor Delegation.

Washington, Oct. 23.—President Gompers withdrew his Labor delegation from the industrial congress, after failure of manufacturers to agree to collective bargaining and arbitration of steel strike.

Rioting at Theatre.

New York, Oct. 23.—Rioting broke out last night around Lexington Theatre, where a German opera was being put on. One man was injured.

It Was His Family.

The man was taking his family to the Tarsea pierrots. He walked a little in front and his wife and all the children straggled behind.

Suddenly a policeman laid a heavy hand on the man's shoulder.

"You come along o'me," he said, and in spite of all protests led him away.

At the police-station the man made a last effort to get an explanation.

"What have you taken me up for?" he asked.

"Blowed if I know," said the policeman. "But when ye're locked up I'll go back and find out why the crowd was followin' yer!"

CANADA'S PROGRESS.

Another Page In Story of Country's Development.

The rush to Peace River is on. Every north-bound train is crowded with prospectors for land, for hay, for timber, for oil, for coal, and above all for chances to apply their capital of intelligence, energy, experience, industry, or money to the development of the natural resources of the country for the benefit of mankind—and incidentally for their own personal profit and welfare.

The largest area yet unoccupied, offering undoubted facilities for crop and stock-raising, is the Vermilion district. It is an area 150 miles in length by 50 in width, with a large navigable river flowing through its centre, and with a railway 125 miles away. With the railway and Peace River the trip to this region can be made by raft, flat boat, or steamer. Before the railway reached this point the district was isolated. Mr. F. H. Kitto, of the Dominion Department of Natural Resources, described it thus:—

"Located about 250 miles north of the [illegible] cut off from the outside world except for steamboat service during a few summer months, with its interest focussed on the fur trade of its own great district, the little post has lived its own life and retained its simple customs, far from the stress and worry of greater centres. The dawn of a new era is just approaching, but the transition will be rapid."

Before the war the development of the west, the incoming of settlers, the breaking of new ground, was the subject of much descriptive writing. The war turned our attention to Europe and relegated Canadian affairs largely to the back pages of the newspapers. The Peace River rush is one of the indications that we are getting back to normal conditions, and to the reading of our interrupted story of national progress. The European story is the more dramatic; yet the more prosaic story is one of steadily growing strength. Our country is about as large as Europe, and is capable of sustaining a population equal at least to that of the greatest of European states.

Salaried Man and H. C. of L.

A prominent authority on social questions said something the other day when he was discussing the proposed investigation into the apparently too-high cost of living. He said that, while economic conditions were the fundamental cause of the high prices of necessities, violations of laws designed to prevent concerted raising of prices also might be partly responsible, and then he went on:

"There is no doubt that the majority of the people are more prosperous than ever before, farmers and wage-earners especially. The man who has suffered from high prices has been the salaried man. I wish we could do something to help him. I'm open to suggestions."

While the ones who have suggestions to offer are putting them into presentable and workable shape, it is an appropriate time to pay a deserved tribute to the qualities of the average salaried man who has borne the burden of the high cost of living incident to the war and who has suffered perhaps more than the men who have been in big profitable business, more than the farmer who has reaped a harvest of gold from his fields (more than the wage-earner who has found increase after increase awaiting him on demand.

The average salaried man has kept on the job; he has fed and clothed his family somehow; he has done his full share in buying bonds and sticking away thrift stamps and in giving to all the war causes; he has pinched and economized, taken on extra work evenings and spent his holidays and off hours in the home garden; he has done his duty in the main bravely, loyally, patiently, nobly.

The biggest thing about him is that he hasn't kicked and howled; he hasn't threatened and menaced; he hasn't bombed or Bolsheviked; he hasn't often complained. He has, indeed, borne the middle of the big load and been a good citizen about it. He is not a whit less of a hero than some others whose work has been more spectacular and whose suffering has been more sanguine. He deserves a tribute.

The Difficulty.

"It doesn't follow that a successful business man can be a success in politics."

"No?"

"No. A man may be able to run a big business without any trouble at all, but the minute he tries to run a big city he finds that he's got to please everybody and that's a job he knows nothing about."

Turn Up Their Noses at It.

"Our customers simply laugh at this 2¾ per cent. stuff."

"It's sneer-beer, you might say."

The Cat's Whiskers.

Why is there a black sheep in every flock? Because sheep, in their early domesticated condition, were brown or dirty black, and because nature occasionally "harks back" or reverts to early type in nearly all species.

Why are cockroaches particularly common in seaports? Because they first settled there, coming to us from India, by way of the Levant.

Why does a red flag infuriate a bull? Because, according to one theory, the animal "sees red." The condition circumstances (as on the battlefield), in man, rendering him indifferent to danger, is produced artificially to the bull, with like results.

Why does a dog turn round and round before lying down? Because the animal's ancestor, the wild dog, made his bed thus by forming a hollow in the leaves and branches.

Why has a camel got a hump? Because in its natural state it needs an "emergency ration." If deprived of food for several days, it falls back on the fat of its hump, which then gradually disappears before the limbs are perceptibly reduced. That it carries water in its stomach is well known.

Why is the underpart of a rabbit's tail white? Because the appendage has on occasion to serve as a danger signal. Violently agitated as it is on the approach of danger, it can be seen by other rabbits even at dusk, whereas it might be wholly invisible if the color of the tail was uniform with that of the body.

Why has a cat got whiskers? Because otherwise—and this applies to the whole of the feline family, including lions and tigers — its eyes would lose sight of prey, such as birds or mice, through fatigue arising from concentration. Experiments prove that cats deprived of their whiskers catch few mice, or none at all.—Tit-Bits.

Scandinavian Humor.

The humor of the Scandinavian countries is unfamiliar to most Canadians. Here are some examples of that humor taken from recent issues of Scandinavian papers: Lars Stranna and Elias Vasbotn were caught on a fjord by a storm. It grew dark and the boat was dangerously tossed about by the elements. Finally Lars said, "Kneel on the tiller and say the 'Our Father' for both of us, Elias." Elias complied, but had not gone more than halfway through when Lars cried out, "Stop! Stop! That's enough! We don't need any more! I can see land!"

Corporal (to dull-witted recruit): "Have you a brother?" Recruit: "Yes." Corporal: "Is he as silly as you?" Recruit: "Yes." Corporal: "What is he?" Recruit: "A corporal."

It was in the Spanish flu period and old Oppigar lay at death's door. The minister came and told him he must forgive his enemies. Oppigar promised to do so with the single exception of Peter Svingen, against whom he had a very special grudge. But the minister insisted that even Peter must also be forgiven. "All right, then," said Oppigar, "I will forgive Peter also—but if I get well I'll have it out with the old scoundrel!"

Training Ex-Soldiers.

Canada continues to lead in the important work of the industrial retraining of disabled ex-members of the forces. To-day there are in Canada 11,616 disabled men undergoing industrial re-training under the direction of the vocational branch of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, while the number of disabled men in training in the United States is 6,677. In each instance the figures have been obtained from official sources.

There are at present in Canada 7,049 disabled men receiving industrial re-training in the schools conducted by the vocational branch of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, and, in addition, 4,567 men have been placed for instruction under the direct supervision of the department in various shops and plants throughout Canada.

To date in Canada, 6,073 ex-members of the forces have graduated from these courses.

First Letter to Cross.

The first letter to cross the Atlantic Ocean from America to England was written from the harbor of St. John's, Newfoundland, by Captain John Rutt to King Henry VIII. and forwarded to England on an English vessel on August 2, 1527. Captain Rutt was on a voyage of discovery to China under the patronage of King Henry. One of the two ships under Rutt's command had been lost in the Straits of Belle Isle, and it was this misfortune that the captain reported in his epistle to his royal master.

Tons of Food Destroyed.

Gabriele d'Annunzio Is Most Romantic Figure Living in Modern Europe

WHAT a curious, mediaeval flavor there is to Gabriele d'Annunzio, whose latest exploit was the placing of himself at the head of an army of equally hot-headed Italian soldiers, with which he seized Fiume. In all the war there is no more romantic figure than that of this poet, playwright and novelist. His facile imagination never invented a more fascinating tale than might be written from the narrative of his own life.

Gabriele d'Annunzio had lived life rapidly and knew most of its phases before the war broke, in 1914. All the world knew his books, his poems and his plays and the stories of his affairs of the heart. A half century had passed over his head, and a dreadful ennui seized upon him. He would live one more year, he said, then he would end his life in some manner that would absolutely destroy all trace of his body; he would annihilate himself.

Before that year expired the storm of war burst, and d'Annunzio was reborn. From the first he was the leader of the fight to bring Italy into the war against Germany and Austria, his nation's ancient enemy. With pen and voice he waged a ceaseless campaign.

"Every day that goes by is lost to our eternal glory," was the message that he preached from countless platforms while Italy was still hesitating. And he is credited with having been the greatest single force that turned that hesitation into a declaration of war against Austria.

D'Annunzio was among the first in the field. A man past fifty, he chose to become an aviator, that service that commands only youth's hardiest and bravest. The recital of his exploits in the air reads like a chapter from a volume of a modern "Knights of the Table Round." Time and again he led his air squadron in long raids over the Austrian base at Pola and other Austrian cities. Once, while his comrades dropped bombs upon Trient, he flew low in defiance of the anti-aircraft guns and dropped a poem! Once during a terrible hand-to-hand struggle with the Austrians on the Carso he rushed among his comrades, inspiring them with fiery words. Citations and rewards were showered upon him. When Italy's armies broke under the Austrian drive his voice was raised, crying:

"All the light of a thousand victories does not equal the light of one day of resistance. That which we have lost for days shall be regained for centuries."

He was wounded several times and once was reported dead. The Austrians were said to have issued a large reward for his capture or death.

When the dispute over Fiume arose there could be only one stand for d'Annunzio. The city must belong to Italy, peace conference compromises to the contrary notwithstanding. The fall of Premier Orlando was due in no small part to the sentiment created by d'Annunzio's speeches and writings. Then suddenly came the word that d'Annunzio, at the head of an army, had marched upon and seized Fiume for Italy, thus violating the armistice terms. The Italian 6th Army Corps, ordered by Premier Nitti to intercept and disarm d'Annunzio's force, refused. D'Anunnzio's offence, into which his fiery patriotism led him, is a serious one. A lesser figure might well suffer the extreme penalty for it. The world will be inclined to hope that the leniency that is the due of genius will be meted out to the culprit.

The Food of the World.

While more people are living in the world to-day dependent upon rice than upon wheat for subsistence and a greater number of the human family live upon millet than any other cereal food, wheat is the preferred food among the higher civilized peoples, writes Earl W. Gage, in the Christian Herald. The more progressive peoples of the earth have ever been wheat eaters. Grains of wheat have been discovered in Egyptian tombs of first dynasty, dating back 4,000 B.C., while bread of wheat has been excavated from the ruins of the prehistoric lake dwellers of Wagner and Rohenhausen in Switzerland.

The Cost of War.

The total war expenditures of Canada up to a recent date are placed at $1,327,273,848, not including the cost of demobilization or reconstruction.

PEARL DIVERS.

Quick Fortunes Made and Spent by South Sea Islanders.

The Paumotu islands—sometimes called "gold mines" of the eastern Pacific—present a weird and picturesque scene during the season—for pearl fishing. From August on come the natives from the surrounding islands to dive for pearls in the calm waters of the lagoon thrown open for the purpose. Within the narrow strip of sand which surrounds the fishing ground are huddled 3,000 or more, in a mushroom city, sheltered beneath corrugated iron or thatched huts. It is a motley company.

There are Paumotu divers, bronzed sea gods—who, with their ancestors have been for ages masters of the deep and conquerors of the shark in his own native element. The diver is the centre of solicitude for the buyer and trader. He is the indispensable object of the moving picture man who has busily built his theatre of corrugated iron where he dispenses amusement at metropolitan prices. It is the diver who spends his earnings riding in the wheezy automobile which the owner operates along a half-mile of sandy beach. It is his earnings which attract a host of others.

In his habits of spending his earnings the Paumotu diver is much like the Canadian prospector and miner of the days of gold strikes and boom mining camps. In the days of his prosperity nothing is too good for him. He buys the choicest of foods and tinned goods. He is proud of the appearance of his women folk and lavishes on them silks, satins, laces, Chinese shawls, high-heeled shoes, picture hats and corsets, the last a recent discovery. All of these things the trader has thoughtfully provided.

Sunday is an Easter parade, and a performance at the picture theatre like an evening at the opera. In no golden "horse shoe" in the world are more observant or critical eyes, and woe betide the Paumotu belle who fancies she can attend two of the functions clad in the same costume without being subject to scornful comment.

A good diver during the season will bring up several tons of shells which recompense him well. The diver takes no thought for the morrow. He and his wife bask in affluence and enjoyment. He spends as fast as he earns. When December comes and the fishing season is over they return to their little atoll and the simple life with nothing remaining for [illegible] finery, the memory of a good time and the anticipation of their pleasure the next year.

Cattle in China.

In Canton 25 years ago there were practically no cattle used for dairy purposes. To-day there are about 550 cows of foreign breeds, and about 50 buffaloes kept exclusively for milk. The Hong Kong Dairy Farm and other dairies in Victoria and Kowloon, with a total of 1,200 cows, depend largely on the Chinese residents in those places for the sale of their milk.

Qualified.

"Some," was his response. "I was a motion-picture director for several years."

And he was hired forthwith.—Film Fun.

Proof

"My dear, I was one of the very first to leave," said a man, who, on returning from an evening party, was greeted reproachfully by his wife.

"Oh, you always say that," she retorted.

"Well, I can prove it this time, anyhow," insisted the husband. "Look in the hall and see the gold mounted umbrella I've brought home."

London and the Birds.

After the news from Strassburg that the storks have returned with the end of the war to the old Alsatian city, and are to be seen daily, as in time past, perching themselves in the Place de Broglie comes the news from London that one of the unusual features of this first spring after the war is the presence of the beautiful larger birds in the English capital. So writes a correspondent of the Observer, of London. "On the fringes," he says, "kestrels are now quite common, and in many places one may see their wonderful flight. The handsome jays betray their presence in many wooded gardens that knew them not, by their screech, or the white flash of their wings; sparrow-hawks and carrion crows are coming to be common; and even the magpie has been seen where for years he has been unknown." And now that they have come, no doubt some way will be found of so convincing them of their welcome that they will come again.

Bending Metal Pipe.

In order to bend metal pipe without kinking it is necessary to fill it with some substance which can be easily removed after the bending is accomplished. Sand or rosin is commonly used, but in Germany a new method has been originated which consists in filling the pipe with water under pressure from packing, but a test of water tightness and pressure resistance is also applied at the same time.

Relics of a King-maker.

Guy, the [illegible]pons, Earl of Warwick, known in history as the "king-maker," was a man of great stature. How far myth will improve upon facts is illustrated in his case by great relics shown to visitors at Warwick Castle. Principal among them are his porridge pot, his meat fork and his armor.

The porridge pot holds 120 gallons, the meat fork is six feet long, and the armor is ample enough in size to fit a horse.

As a matter of fact, it is a horse's armor. The fork is not a fork at all, but a medieval military weapon, and the porridge pot is a garrison cauldron of the sixteenth century.

In short, the so-called relics are fakes. But the average visitor at the castle, while amazed, accepts them in full faith as veritable.

Shipping Sunk.

British merchant shipping sunk by the Germans during the war is officially aggregate at 2,197 vessels, having an aggregate tonnage of 7,638,920.

New Kind of Construction.

Several exhibition halls and assembly rooms have been built in Norway by attaching to the uprights a "netting" fashioned from wooden rods about a third of an inch square in cross-section, which are bound together with tin-plated iron wire, and subsequently covered with a durable plaster. Structures of this sort, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, are easily and quickly constructed and are said to be useful in winter time.

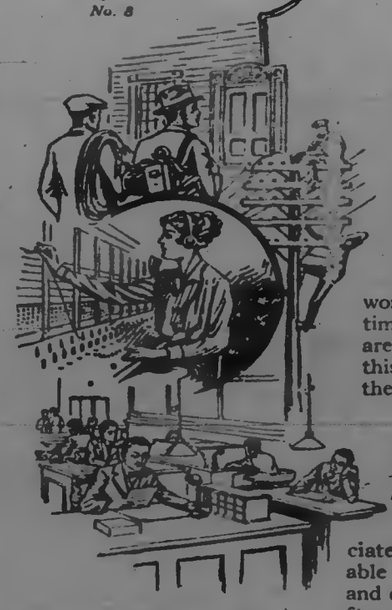
After-war conditions, and the telephone No. 8



A Faithful Staff is Indispensable

NO company providing a continuous public service could hope to meet the public's demands without a loyal and faithful staff of employees.

The loyalty and fidelity of telephone workers is proverbial. In great emergencies, times of crisis and danger, telephone workers are found sticking to their tasks in order that this vital service may be uninterrupted. On them the heaviest burden often rests.

We gratefully record the fact that Bell Telephone workers have always been foremost in loyalty to employers and the public.

That employees in their turn, appreciate our treatment of them in providing agreeable and stable working conditions, sickness and death benefits, pensions, etc., is apparent from the general harmony between employer and employee and the long service records of so many telephone workers. This continuity of service makes for expertness and efficiency.

And telephone workers appreciate the kindly co-operation of subscribers.

NEW YORK NEWSPAPERMAN SAYS THAT THE PRINCE OF WALES IS A WONDER

Adds That Future King Has Good Reason to be Proud of Canada, His Future Dominion

A New York newspaperman writing of his experiences in reporting the visit of the Prince of Wales to Canada, writes enthusiastically:

"He's a wonder!"

"If three words and three alone, were to be allowed for the ordinary person to sum up, after a careful observation, just how he felt about that dapper little fellow—the Prince of Wales—who now is beginning the last lap of his tour of Canada, those three words probably would just about tell the story—He's a wonder."

From the moment he stepped from the little white-topped motor launch in the Bay of Fundy six weeks ago to jerk his big, rough hand to his cap and be welcomed to St. John, N.B., by Premier Borden, the Duke of Devonshire and a score of other Canadian dignitaries through Halifax, Quebec, Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and through the coal fields of Western Ontario, up into the fishing districts of Saskatchewan, this fellow who fought side by side with the "regulars" of the Canadian army has endeared himself to men and women and little children in an almost unheard of fashion.

Canada, saddened and cut to the very heart by the frightful loss of life and expenditure of money in the war, showed its spirit, its courage and its nerve when it draped its streets and its docks from north to south, from east to west, wherever this lad went, and covered its sadness with smiles to meet him and greet him, and to show him that, after all, deep down in its heart it had a very real appreciation of his own fine character—a character that made a "Kingsboy" of a prince in Flanders Fields, and stripped the royal decorations from his breast that he might live and die, if need be, for Britain and for the supremacy of right.

True, the Prince of Wales has a very real right to be proud of Canada. And just as truly, Canada has the same right to thrill with joy at the knowledge that its king to be is a man among men, one who can grin with them, one who can caress the sobbing mother of a soldier lost in battle, one who can pick the girls from their twinkling feet and swing them merrily onward to the tune of "Over There."

Emerging from the crowd that has gathered, he stops for a moment as an old woman touches his arm and says: "Sir, may I grasp your hand? My son died at Cantigny. He had written to me much of you. He admired you greatly. And I am his mother—alone in the world now."

You see the heart of the boy then. A tear steals into his eye and he just puts his arm around this fine old lady and leads her to one side and says: "My dear madam, England's heart is sad with you. I feel so deeply the sorrow that has come to you. God bless you. Let us be proud that your son died in such a noble cause."

He is as much at home with the pretty girls as any fellow I ever saw. And they crowd about him and talk with him just as if he were any other good looking youngster back from the war with a load of good yarns to spin. With his poise and his way of doing things, he would make them fall in love with him if he didn't have as much of a "drag" as the doughboys say, as he really has.

The Prince is a soldier if there ever was one. He performs his ceremony of inspecting guards like clockwork. He has his father's trait of stopping a moment somewhere along the perfect line of soldiers at "attention," and conversing for a moment with some wounded or decorated soldier.

"Where were you injured?" he will ask. And almost instantly, his taffy colored head turns sidewise and leans far over, almost touching the lips of the soldier, as the Prince awaits his answer. This is a trait of his father, the King. He appears not to want to miss one word of the soldier. As soon as the soldier has replied, the Prince jerks his head back straight, steps back, sticks out his hand and receives the big, rough fingers of the soldier and gives them a good, wringing shake.

He is a picturesque object as he stands, facing a military band at salute. His perfect poise, the expression on his face his kindly manner, his evident uncertainty of things, his natty uniform. Whhether he be in the khaki of the army or the blue of the navy he is a picture all in himself, and any of his friends who see him will remember always.

Not only for the pleasure of the present, but for the sake if the next and succeeding generations, that picture deserves to be preserved. Various attempts have been made by the photographers to obtain a likeness perfect enough to stand as the true picture of His Royal Highness. Universal consent agrees that Van Dyke's fine portrait of him, made in London, Eng., gives the finest conception of him, and that is the picture which most Canadians will treasure.

I spent enough time with the Prince of Wales, continues the New York writer, to find out just what kind of a fellow he was. I am not English. I went to meet him, and be with him just as an American with unobstructed and free right-of-way to write what I saw. If I had not written what I did write—that he was one of the finest youngsters I ever had the pleasure of meeting and observing—I should have written a thing that was not true.

IS NOT OPPOSED TO THE CONCRETE ARCH

ALD. GAINEY BELIEVES COST OF STEEL SHOULD BE CONSIDERED.

In a report of a Board of Works meeting that appeared in last night's issue it stated that Ald Gainey was the only one who voted against the concrete arch for the new Hunter street bridge. He points out that this was misteaching and explains his position.

He is not against erecting the concrete arch, but voted against deciding not to enquire more fully into the cost of a steel arch. Some time ago it was decided by the Council to have plans prepared with a concrete arch and then plans for a steel arch. Then the Council were to decide taking into consideration the cost, appearance and efficiency of the bridge, which material would be best.

Ald. Gainey voted against the motion at the Board of Works, which decided upon the concrete arch before considering the steel arch as contemplated. He still maintains that the first resolution was the proper one and is in favor of considering both kinds and then deciding.

LABOR SITUATION IN THIS PROVINCE

APPLICATIONS FOR WORK SLIGHTLY IN EXCESS OF THE VACANCIES.

An analysis of the Labour situation in the province of Ontario during the week ending Oct. 11, made from the reports of the Trades and Labour branch, shows that the number of men applying to the bureaus for work is slightly in excess of the number of vacancies for men reported. During this feek 2,819 men registered and jobs were received for 2,465. The number of men actually placed in positions was 1906.

By far the biggest demand was for general labourers, orders of this nature numbering 1007 in the week. The bureaus were able to supply 696 of these men.

Classes of work for which there were more men than openings include commercial occupations for which 197 men applied during the week. On the other hand, in the building and metal trades, there were more orders than men.

In the women's departments the largest demand continues to be for household workers, only a small percentage of whom can be secured. Of 213 orders received in the week, 67 were filled. The supply of casual workers was more satisfactory, and 308 day-workers were placed in 366 positions. The shortage of women and girls for factory work also continues extreme.

KING ALFONSO VISITS VERDUN

GEN. PETAIN CONDUCTS SPAIN'S RULER OVER WORLD-FAMED BATTLE GROUND.

Verdun, Oct. 24.—Over the historic and tragic battlefield of Verdun, King Alfonso of Spain walked today with Marshal Petain, chief defender of the citadel during the tremendous struggle that was fought in February and March, 1916.

The King proceeded to the military cemetery, where he deposited a wreath of orchids tied with wide ribbons, forming the Spanish colors, upon which was pined a tribute from the royal visitor.

The party then turned to the battlefield, reaching Fort Douamont at 10 o'clock. Great interest in the fort was evidenced by King Alfonso, who asked to be shown the underground passages leading to the outer redoubts. When he and the marshal emerged from the deep-shelters they were both stained with mud.

Wat Not Surprised.

France was not surprised by the German offensive against Verdun, Marshal Petain told the King during their walk over the field. The latter expressed his surprise when given this information, as it has been generally believed the Germans launched that attack almost without warning.

"We knew of the enemy's plan" said the marshal in describing the battle. "It was a defensive battle at first, the fight commencing at seven o'clock on the evening of February 21st, after violent artillery preparation."

"Six weeks before," he continued "we had received our first information from learning of the construction of a formidable system of railroads leading to Verdun. There were fourteen tracks formed into a network that stretched out from the German base toward our lines. We [illegible] to move supplies and munitions."

STRAINING AT GNATS SWALLOWING CAMELS

FRANCE PERMITS GERMAN IMPORTS BUT BARS ALL WAGNER MUSIC.

Paris, Oct. 24.—Newspaper satirists here are having fun with a prefect of police who forbade a concert programme in the Tuileries gardens composed of the music of Wagner and Berlioz. Judging from the sputter of comment aroused, the French music lover is beginning to grow a bit hungry for the strains of "Lohengrin," and "Siegfried." It is said a club is soon to be fomerd under whose auspices Wagnerian music will be privately performed.

A writer in Le Journal thus sarcastically refers to the ban that descended upon the Tuileries concert:

"Dogs without muzzles are taboo in the squares and public gardens; so is the music of Wagner.

"Meantime, Germany sends us Bolshevist tracts by the carload. She has withdrawn the millions of bayonets which she has been exporting to us for five years; but she is already replacing them by a table and pocket knives. She is preparing to invade us industrially and commercially. What of that? Supposing some curious person should ask of the authorities an explanation of this German aggression, no doubt the reply will be 'Don't worry.' We are on guard. We the Tuileries.'

"I am not passionately fond of Wagner's music. I even admit bare facedly that, as between Wagner and Saint Saens, I prefer Massenet. But that does not prevent me from thinking this boycott idiotic. Were we the defeated people in this war we might well find insolent these operas, which would exalt the pride of a victorious nation. Siegfried forging his sword would then be an undesirable. But all of Wagner's Valhalla has collapsed. Siegfried has fled weaponless into Holland. So now we may well listen without bitterness to the music of the god of Baireuth. The dragon, Fafner, who pretended to frighten, is now but a caged beast to whom we throw bits of bread."

Unlike any other bonds, Victory Bonds carry with them a sense of service. The need of Canada prompted the issuing of them and the desire to help prompted the initial purchase. Today the campaign opens for the Victory Loan 1919 when Canadians in all parts of the nation will unite again to keep the great dominion secure. Secure, not from the invasion of the enemy, but from the roads of such monsters as hunger, want and unemployment.

To re-establish the returned soldiers in civil life and to put Canada on a sound business basis are the paramount reasons for the flotation of the 1919 loan. The bridge from war to peace," was the expression used by the Prince of Wales in connection with the Victory Loan 1919. The reconstruction programme of Canada is a big one and to finance it will depend to a great extent upon the success of the loan.

The Minister of Finance has issued $300,000,000 in Gold Bonds to be sold to the people at par, bearing interest at 5 1-2 per cent. This interest will be paid twice a year, on May 1 and November 1, without charge at any chartered bank. The bonds are issued in four denominations—$50, $100, $500 and $1000 and are for two maturities 5 years or 15 years as the subscriber desires. Bonds may be secured from any official canvasser, any Victory Loan committee, or any chartered bank. Payment may be made in full at the time of application or at the bank in installments as follows; 10 per cent. on application, 20 per cent. on December 9, 1919, 20 per cent. on January 9, 1920, 20 per cent. on February 10, 1920 and 21.21 per cent on March 9, 1920. This last payment is the 30 percent of the principal that [illegible] and interest at 5½ per cent. on the installments from November 1. The first interest will be paid to all on May 1.

CAUGHT BIG LUNGE

When Mr. H. L. Ferris and Mr. C. H. Steel, of Auburn, N.Y., return home they will probably have many fish stories to tell the folks across the line. Word comes from Chemong that these gentlemen caught a lunge weighing 27½ lbs. last Friday.

Mr. R. D. Tobeco today captured another lunge weighing 18½ lbs.

LAST EXPIRING GASP OF THE MEMBERS OF THE CITIZEN'S LIBERTY LEAGUE

Claim in Letter to Attorney General Lucas That Mistakes Have Been Made in Totaling Vote on Referendum and Ask for a Record of Ballots.

The attorney for the Citizen's Liberty League has addressed the following letter to Attorney General Lucas:

Dear Sir: Referring to the conference that Mr. Bill of the Citizens' Liberty League and I had today with you and Mr. A. M. Dymond, K. C., I write to point out again to you the questions discussed at our interview.

Under the order-in-council of September 4th., 1919, the Citizens' Liberty League was appointed the representative of the affirmative side of the questions being voted upon under the Referendum Act, and being thus placed in the position of a candidate, should have been furnished by the deputy returning-officer with a certificate from each polling subdivision or polling place in the province showing what ballots were cast for the affirmative side and what ballots were cast for the negative side, and showing also the number of ballots rejected at each polling sub-division or polling place.

This was not done, except in a few instances, and as was drawn to your attention today, the statements received were most confusing. It is impossible to say from them what number of persons voted for the affirmative, and what number of persons for the negative.

The form furnished by the Government to the returning officers and by the returning officers to the deputy returning officers has provision in two columns for filling in the number of votes cast. At the top of he one column is the word "for" and at the top of the other the word "against" and in the certificate received on the Government form from the deputy returning officer for polling place 42 A. Southwest Toronto, the total would appear to be on question 1, 83 "for" and 146 "against" and so on with reference to the other three questions aked under the referendum. It is impossible to say what "for" means, or what "against" means, and further we would draw attention to the fact that the form under the election and has not in it any such words.

I has come to the knowledge of the Citizens' Liberty League, as was stated to you today, that shortly prior to October 20th, telegrams were sent by the Government to returning officers in the province, intimating that this form 21 was incorrect in that the word "yes" should be in the place of the word "for", and the word "no" in the place of the word "against" where they appear in the form supplied. Apparently from information obtained the deputy returning officers were not aware at least in some instances that an error existed in the form 21 as supplied by the Government for the purpose of making their returns of voting in their polling sub-division or polling places with the result that errors undoubtedly have taken place in the computation of the votes in many of the polling sub-divisions and polling places throughout the entire province, and it is possible now to say what was the vote of the different questions asked under the Referendum Act. The information received indicates that the error was discovered too late to possibly advise all deputy returning officers.

The Government stated that they desired to have a true mandate from the electors on the different questions asked, and the Citizens' Liberty League, irrespective of other considerations, feels that the returns made by the deputy returning officers of the votes in the polling sub-divisions and polling places may not be at all the correct vote given on the different questions asked, and that the only possible way to rectify the error made in the form, is to have a recount of the votes in each and every polling sub-division and polling place throughout the entire province. The Citizens Liberty League, therefore consider that the only proper action for the Government to take is to have a recount of the ballots in each and every polling place throughout the province.

EDITOR'S MAIL

MR. GUISE-BAGLEY COUNTERS

Editor Review: My attention has just been called to your article in last Saturday's issue relative to my connection with the Conservative party. I seem to have missed it at the time.

I presume the article was inspired by the man that has made the big fight for the party in this riding, but I refuse to believe that he has authority to speak for the party.

My connection with the Citizens' Liberty League has nothing to do with politics, and I deny that to be a Conservative one has also to be a teetotaller.

As to my connection with the Conservative party, if to be in line with that or any other party, involves the surrender of my liberty of thought on a question of religion, which this drink question undoubtedly is, I utterly refuse to line up. They may burn me at the stake for my religious opinion if they like, but I will maintain that this wave of fanaticism and religious intolerance that has for its text "touch not, taste not, handle not;" that would take away from the Jewish people the right o use wine in their religious ceremony, and would cut out the use of wine in the blessed sacrament of the altar; and would denounce even the Almighty for what He has created, and would rather allow sick persons to die than that they should have facilities to procure what God has provided for their relief, is not God's religion, but emanates from the evil one. Satan is today masquerading as an angel of light and this pretence of goodness is filling the land with spiritual pride and spiritual bjindness and preparing for the "great apostasy." That being so, I with many other perfectly good Conservatives, refuse to follow Mr. Sodon into the net he would spread for me.

I deny that religion has anything to do with politics—I insist on the great principles that Conservatism has always stood for. I contend that the liberty our fathers fought and died for is ours to hand down to our children, liberty of conscience, and liberty of action so far as we do not interfere with the liberty of others, giving equal rights to all regardless of race, station or creed.

If the Conservative party has departed from these ideals, I do not wish to any longer be associated with it. I believe the Independent Labor party holds to these ideals, and in a recent letter to your paper I stated that I believed the Laborites and Conservatives very nearly approximate in their views and objects, and if the Conservative party that I have served all my life, has so apostatized from their old principles, that it turns out that the I.L.P. is more orthodox on these cardinal principles, I suppose I shall have to go to that party.

I still have hopes, however, that true Conservatives will in the end predominate, and that our old party will purge itself of its errors, and throw off the yoke of those who would pervert it, and that out of the chaos that now exists a clean new party will emerge that will not the sake of catching a few v subvert its principles and flout best supporters.

Thanking you, sir, I am, etc.,
J. G. GUISE-BAGLEY

THERE ARE NO DUDS IN BIFF, BING BANG

HAMILTON TIMES LANDS THIS OFFERING AS WORTH WHILE IN EVERY WAY.

"There are no duds in "Biff, Bing, Bang," says the Hamilton Times, the altogether different attraction which opened a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House yesterday and bids fair to pack 'em in at every performance. Laughs go over the footlights and fall amid the audience with the rapidity of bullets from a machine gun, and every laugh, let it be said, reaches its objective.

To attempt to describe all the things the clever "Dumbells" do is a difficult task. The performance can best be described as one endless charge of laughter. People gasped at yesterday's performance, and then just gasped some more. Holding one's sides had no effect. When the wells of risibility and tapped laughter has just got to flow, and the "Dumbells" have found the weak points in most play-goers' armour. And how mercilessly they drive their jokes home! They simply harry one with joke after joke.

If you don't believe all this, ask some of those gallant boys who fought "over there." They all know the "Dumbells." They all can attest, too, to what a sunny rift in the black clouds this gifted group of entertainers was behind the lines, when men, tired and low in spirits sometimes—for the Hun almost won several times—were lifted back to their wonted courage and resolve because of being made to laugh by the English singing and the English ways of these self-same entertainers.

"Majorie" is here with all her pristine charm and naivete. No more praise is necessary. All veterans of the great war will be at the Grand this week and what hallowed memories shall be re-awakened. The company is a more capable one, and those of us who remained at home shall fail to catch the rare spirit of heart that nerved the arms of our brave men if we do not see this excellent offering.

This talented company of entertainers are at the Grand Theatre, Peterborough, tonight; tomorrow, matinee and night.

TANGLED TONGUE OF TOREADORS

"Think in Spanish. Be Spanish. Live Spanish."

That was the mandate of George Seigmann, Universal director, to his company during the filming of "The Spitfire of Seville" which is to be shown at the Empire Theatre today and tomorrow.

Mr. Seigmann is a great believer in photodramatic atmosphere.

"One can't depict a sad role just after he hears that his mother-in-law has left his home," he says. "A photoplayer must be in the proper atmosphere."

That was why he insisted that his company get into a Castilian atmosphere for the filming of "The Spitfire of Seville," the scene of which is placed in the mountains of Southern Spain and in Seville.

As a result Mlle. Hedda Nova, the star, spoke nothing but Spanish, as did many other members of the Company.

"Buenas Dias," she would say in the morning.

"Buenas Dias, como esta usted," would answer Thurston Hall, her leading man.

Bye-and-bye, Seigmann who does not speak Spanish, became peevish.

"Say!" he asked indignantly of Thurston Hall, "where did you learn Spanish?"

"Mlle. Nova taught me," answered the leading man.

"Change the next scene to Hoboken," he ordered, then added:

"Now speak Joisey City."

Thought She Was a Boy.

Carmelita, dressed in boy's clothing, came down the road dancing with her shadow. On the green slopes of the Castilian mountains above her grazed her drowsy sheep. It was high noon in Southern Spain; so quiet that the spinning of the humming-bird could almost be distilled into sound.

But the drifting white clouds only served to hide the hammer of Thor and mask the gathering of the storm-clan.

Kent Staunton, an American artist, saw the girl; thought naturally that she was a boy, and with the banter of a man to a man-child began to imprison the classic features on his canvas.

"What a pity," he said, "that a fine, hard-working boy should look so like a girl; to be so burdened with beauty when, I dare say, his sisters go begging for looks."

It was evening when Staunton had done. The sheep, perhaps neglected a little, had wandered far into the hills. The storm was brewing with a fury that bespoke danger to the wayfarer.

Carmelita sought refuge in a mountain cabin. Staunton happened to select the same shelter from the elements.

"Throw yourself down there and go to sleep, little fellow," Staunton said, little knowing that the shepherd-boy was the beautiful girl for whose love a feud raged among the outlaw band of which her father was leader.

It was an irate band that Carmelita faced in the morning, particularly when she frankly said: "I spent the night with an American gentleman."

The whole story is to be delightfully told at the Empire Theatre on Friday and Saturday in "The Spitfire of Seville," a Universal photodrama with Mlle. Hedda Nova, the Russian dramatic princess, in the stellar role.

The tug J. H. Sackett, with a tow, collided with the Dominion White Star Line steamship Rimouski, near the Quebec bridge.

A street car containing four male passengers and the motorman plunged down a ravine at Edmonton, Alta., and no one was hurt.

Although officially reported wounded and later killed in action, C. Franklin, C. E. F., Port Burwell, returned home yesterday.

Last of Famous Kentucky Feudists

ANDERSON HATFIELD, better known as "Devil Anse," who, according to despatches, was at the point of death several days ago, and may have passed out by now, was one of the most famous of Kentucky feudists. The fighting betwen the Hatfields and the McCoys was hardly less celebrated than the feuds between the Montagus and the Capulets or those between York and Lancaster. Not so many lives were lost, but still more than a hundred men are supposed to have been killed as well as several women as a result of the quarrel over the trifling matter of some pigs. In those days pigs were not of much more value than cats. A war over a pig now would not attract so much attention. In the beginning the pigs were owned by Randolph McCoy, or so at least Randolph contended. He missed them, and one day when passing the Hatfield pig-pen, observed several shoats that he at once identified as his property. Hatfield refused to surrender them, and an appeal was made to the nearest magistrate, who, as a Hatfield, decided that they were Hatfield shoats. That was the beginning of the quarrel between the two families, which up to that time had got along in neighborly fashion.

There were several fist fights between younger members of the families but nobody was seriously injured until 1880, when Paris and Sam McCoy met William Stayton, a Hatfield henchman, in the mountains. He got the drop on them and shot Paris, who falling put a bullet through Stayton. Neither man was seriously injured, and they were able to rise, throw away their weapons, and go to the mat in good old Kentucky fashion. They gouged and bit and kicked until both were covered with blood and bruises. Then Sam McCoy, it is alleged, drew his pistol and killed Stayton. He escaped to the mountains, but was later on caught and placed on trial. He was acquitted. This, of course, did not lessen the bitter feeling betwegn the two factions, and every time one of the rival clans would meet there was likely to be a fight. Gradually most drawn into the feud, for the McCoys and the Hatfields were numerous and had many affiliations by marriage. The pig grievance had long ago been forgotten. It was now a matter of avenging human blood. The next big fight occurred in 1882, and was provoked by an election dispute.

Ellison Hatfield dared Talbert McCoy to fight him. The challenge was accepted and the fight began. Hatfield was getting the better of McCoy when the latter drew a knife and plunged it into his adversary several times. Hatfield, though streaming with blood had strength enough to raise a big stone, and was in the act of dashing out McCoy's brains when he was shot by a partisan of the opposing house. Presumably this was Phamer McCoy, who, with Talbert and Randolph McCoy, jr., was arrested, while the still breathing Hatfield was carried away. The prisoners were placed under guard, composed of both Hatfields and McCoys, and while they were being convoyed to Pikeville, they were overtaken by a posse of Hatfields. The Hatfields demanded that the prisoners be surrendered. The McCoys protested in vain, and so the young feudists were in the hands of their enemies. They were not taken to Pikeville, but across the state border to West Virginia, there to be held until the fate of Hatfield was decided. The word sent back was that if he lived the McCoys would be surrendered; if he died they would follow him.

Hatfield died. The McCoys were then sentenced to death by the Hatfields, who decided that the execution should take place in Pike County where their victim had been killed. So they were taken back to Kentucky, tied to trees and shot by a band of Hatfields. After this desperate act the Hatfields returned to West Virginia. A Kentucky jury indicted twenty-three of them for murder, and the Governor of Kentucky made a formal demand upon the Governor of West Virginia for the surrender of the fugitives, who were in his state. The Governor of West Virginia refused, and what the Governor of Kenfucky said to him was extremely unlike the historic remark of the Governor of North Carolina to the Governor of South Carolina. But with the governors at loggerheads an expedition of Kentuckians, headed by Frank Phillips, a deputy sheriff, and composed chiefly of McCoys, slipped across the border, rounded up the Hatfields after considerable fighting and brought them back to Pike County. There was further furious correspondence between the governors, but in the end the prisoners remained in the custody of the Kentucky courts.

Then followed the most terrible crime of the long feud, and as it happened, about the last. The Hatfields sneaked up on the McCoy home one night and set it on fire. As the victims tried to escape from the burning house they were shot down by the ambushed Hatfields, and several were killed, though some escaped and killed more than one of the enemy. Among the victims was Alphare McCoy, an eighteen-year-old girl, who was shot dead. Ellison Mounts was proved to be the murderer of the girl, and he was hanged in the presence of the largest crowd that ever witnessed a Kentucky execution. Several others were sent to prison for long terms, and the stern action of the authorities broke up the feud.

Efforts are being made to induce increased growing of cotton in South Africa.

Not So Equal.

"Don't you like to get back to nature, where all men are equal?"

"Yes, but it doesn't always work out that way. Summer cottagers are inclined to snub the campers."

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN R. WRIGHT

The death occurred at 3.30 o'clock this morning of Elizabeth Wright, wife of John R. Wright, 116 Gladstone avenue. Deceased was 57 years of age and had been in ill-health for some time and her death was not entirely unexpected.

She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her sorrowing husband, three daughters, Edith, Margaret and Anneta, and one son, Walter, all of whom are residing at home.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, Monday, at 2.30 o'clock, to Little Lake Cemetery by motor. The service in the house will commence at two o'clock, Rev. Mr. Chapman officiating.

MR. TOOMS AT HAMILTON

With Peter McArthur, Goes to That City for Conference.

Thomas Tooms, M.L.A.-elect, and PeterMcArthur, president of the Independent Labor party here, will leave tonight for Hamilton to take part in the conference called in that city for tomorrow to discuss the question of working with one or other of the four parties in the Legislature.

MR. FERGUSON'S MAJORITY.

Brockville, Oct. 25.—The official statement issued by W. S. Johnston, the returning officer, shows that Hon. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Mines in the Hearst Administration was elected for Grenville county by a majority of 1,279 over G. Arthur Payne, U.F.O. candidate.

MISS CHAMBERLAIN SUFFERS BROKEN HIP

AS VEHICLE MOVED ON.

Miss J. Chamberlain, of the Chamberlain Estate, suffered a broken hip as the result of an accident at the corner of Charlotte and George streets yesterday afternoon. Miss Chamberlain got on the street car at the corner and had taken her seat. Then, with a pencil in one hand and her purse in the other she stood up to pay her fare. The car started and she fell in the aisle. She is over eighty years of age, and is naturally rather feeble and suffered greatly from the fall. She was taken immediately after the accident to Nicholls Hospital in Comstock's ambulance.

Wooden Money.

Who ever heard of wooden money? The only known currency of this kind is issued by the Hudson Bay Co., and circulates all over the vast territory controlled by that powerful trading concern.

It is a coinage consisting of pieces of wood known as "castors," which are stamped with a die. These are accepted everywhere in that territory as cash, and are exchangeable for all sorts of supplies and commodities at the widely scattered stations of the corporation.

The area governed by the company is vast. In one straight line it extends as far as from London to Mecca; from King's Posts to the Pelly Banks is further than from Paris to Sarmacand. Over all of this region the corporation exercises a complete dominion, employ the native Indians, chiefly Ojibways and Crees, to collect the furs which furnished its revenue.

Hudson Bay is about two-thirds the size of the Gulf of Mexico. It is an almost landlocked sea, with 3,000 miles of coast line. More than 300 years ago Hendrik Hudson, trying to find the northwest passage, wintered there. His crew mutinied and set him afloat in an open boat with his son and seven others. He and his companions were never seen again.

The unit of value in that part of the world is a beaver skin. Two martens are equal to one beaver. The trapping is done in winter, and in spring the Indians bring the pelts to the stations, receiving in payment for them wooden money. With the latter they buy what supplies they need at the store maintained by the company at the station.

Still Think of Us as Pioneers.

Pre-war ideas of Canada as a wild colony appear to die hard in England. For instance, a London writer in a famous daily says:

"I have just noticed what I regard as a very interesting advertisement in an imposing contemporary: Footman required for Canada. Good situation, etc., etc. Really I should not have been more astonished if I had read that a stockman was required for Berkeley Square. Does it mean that the threatened exodus of well-to-do families from this country is already begun? Certainly no every-day pioneer wants to take a footman with him!"

Hot Weather.

"Call this hot weather," said a visitor to Canada. "Why, I've seen it so hot down south that the popcorn popped right on the stalks." "Whew!" exclaimed the host. "And that's not all; the juice of the cane in the next field turned to molasses, ran through the fence, mixed up with the popcorn and formed the finest combination of popcorn and molasses that ever crossed your lips."

NOTHING IMPROPER

ing about it. His charges against the police or any of them we find absolutely untrue.

Other charges were made or suggested at the hearing against other members of the force.

Sergeant Blade was charged with conspiring with one Akey, a liveryman, to steal liquor from Inspector Stewart's office. We find this charge disproved—indeed no serious effort was made to prove it.

Detective Newhall, Sergeant Blade at various times making insulting and jeering remarks to and of Inspector Stewart, thus interfering with his duties and lessening his efficiency. These charges we find untrue.

A charge was also made that some members of the force, name, not given, were went to advise Hamilton, the hotel keeper, by telephone, when the Inspector was going to his house so he should not be caught in illicit liquor selling.

This charge we find not proved, and it was contradicted flatly by all members of the force asked about it, and one Howden, from whom it was said to have emanated, denied all knowledge of it.

A charge was made against P. C. Boyd by one Faux. Faux last spring was in gaol serving a six months' sentence. While there one Johnstone was also an inmate awaiting trial for illicit liquor dealing. Johnstone was to be taken down to the police court for trial by Inspector Stewart. Faux's story was that Boyd was at the gaol with or for a prisoner and while Stewart was taking him down told him, Faux, to tell Johnstone to break away from Stewart and he would receive police assistance and protection to get away out of town. He said he told this to Johnstone and immediately after so advised Mr. Robert Rae, turnkey at the gaol. Faux's story and demeanor in them... and that impress us, and it was flatly and wholly contradicted by both Boyd and Rae. Johnstone was not present nor could be be found. We fully exonerate Boyd on this charge.

Grave charges were also made against Chief Thompson. The first one dates back to 1915. One Lavasseur had been convicted of selling beer in what had been a so-called club. Some of his liquor there was seized. This beer was taken to the police station and the Chief was charged with taking it to his own home and using it there. It was alleged the Chief admitted so doing and that Sergt. Kidd said he, Kidd, took it there. Kidd is now chief of police at Parry Sound and was called down to testify. Both he and Chief Thompson denied ever taking it to the house or saying it had been so taken. In addition Chief Kidd swears he enquired if it could be used in any of the hospitals or homes and says he sent it to St. Joseph's Hospital and House of Providence. Ed Cooney, a local expressman, swears he took it there on Kidd's instructions about Chrismas 1915, and it is further shown the cases are still here, with some of the liquor still unused.

This charge we find wholly disproved.

Another charge against the Chief was in conection with some beer seized (and wrongly so as it appears) on the way to Bridgenorth in 1916. This beer was ordered to be given up to the owners. Some of it was not called for, and it was alleged the Chief took this, or some of it, away north on a hunting trip that fall. Sergt. Brown, now Chief of Police at Sudbury, was given as the authority for this statement. Chief Brown was brought down from Sudbury. Both he and Chief Thompson most emphatically denied that this was done, of that they or either of them had ever said so. It was further proved to our satisfaction that these cases remained for a long time at the station, that the manufacturers asked for return of the cases, and that Sergeant James Reid in the presence of another official, and to the knowledge of several, emptied the beer into the sewer and the cases and bottles returned to the brewers. The receipt of the brewer's agent for these cases and bottles was produced.

This charge therefore is wholly disproved and falls to the ground.

Another charge against the Chief was that in 1918 he stole four bottles of whiskey while in custody of the court. One Birdgenaw, had been convicted of bringing liquor from Montreal in a valise. The valise and contents were confiscated and 19 bottles were sent to the Department in Toronto according to regulations. One bottle was broken, making it 20 in all. It was alleged there were 24 bottles and that Chief Thompson misappropriated the remaining four. Birdgenaw had at first said there were 24 bottles, but later, on 29th. November, 1918, wrote retracting this statement and apologising for making it. He said he had been mistaken and that only 20 bottles were taken from him, which were all accounted for. The Chief, of course, said he had obtained 20 bottles in all, which we find to be correct. The unfortunate circumstance in this matter was that after Birdgenaw's correction and apology were made, this untrue statement regarding the Chief was persistently repeated and circulated throughout the city.

This charge too, we find wholly unfounded.

In conclusion, we desire to say that we have purposely made this investigation as broad and thorough as possible. We have called all available evidence and invited relevant information from any possible source. We fully realize that one of the chief assets of a police force is its honesty and... is impaired, the usefulness of the police is gone. We have fully and fairly investigated every charge or suggestion made and nothing improper or dishonest has been disclosed. We assure our citizens that in our judgment and according to our information, we believe our police force to be reliable as well as alert, and that the public may rely not only on the men's efficiency, but upon their honesty and integrity as well.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

LEADER KING FIGHTS PURCHASE OF G. T. R.

BUT BILL PASSES SECOND READING BY MAJORITY OF 30.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—Shortly after midnight the Liberal amendment to the motion for the second reading of the Grand Trunk bill calling for the postponement of final consideration of the measure until next session was defeated on a vote of 91 to 61, a government majority of 30. The second reading was then declared carried on the same division. Three government supporters voted with the opposition: Major-General McLean of Royal, N. B.; J. F. Johnston, Last Mountain, Sask.; and Major Andrews, Centre Winnipeg.

The house then went into committee on the bill but progress was soon reported and the house rose at 12.20.

The bill will be considered in committee on Friday and given third reading not later than Monday, when it will go to the senate, where a debate of some duration is expected.

The first speech by Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, the new Liberal leader, since his re-election to parliament had the effect of livening up the Grand Trunk debate in the Commons to a considerable degree today.

King's First Speech.

Mr. King, who had been introduced when the house met, and who occupied Hon. Rudolphe Lemieux's seat, announced that M. D. D. McKenzie would continue to be house leader for the party for the remainder of the session. Mr. King's speech was punctuated by considerable applause from his supporters and interruptions by government members, a number of whom rose to challenge statements made by him.

Mr. King maintained that there was absolutely nothing in the bill to justify the impression that the government was about to purchase the Grand Trunk System and to bring about a greater measure of nationalization of railways. He argued that so long as a portion of the stock remains in the hands of the present shareholders, the government would not own the road. As a matter of fact, he said, it would be impossible for the government to take the road over until 1950. The opposition leader described the bill as an agreement to transfer the management of the Grand Trunk Railway to the men who had managed the C.N.R., and to enhance the value of Grand Trunk stock and make the people of Canada pay the liabilities of the Grand Trunk and G.T.P. systems. He urged the government to fix a date prior to the announcement of the acquirement of the railway as a basis for fixing the valuation of the stocks to the arbitrator.

WASTED ENERGY IN LOVE AFFAIRS

JAPANESE WOMAN DOCTOR DECLARES AMERICAN WOMEN TOO ARDENT.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Do Americans love too energetically? Dr. Tomio Inauvo, of Tokio, the famous Japanese physician who boasts that she never feels tired, believes that American girls look tired, while Japanese girls never look tired. She thinks that American girls waste too much energy in love affairs. The midget physician's contention ran afoul of much opposition on the part of a majority of the thirty-five women physicians from different countries all over the earth, who spent sixteen hours here yesterday in seeing the sights of Washington, and who returned to New York this morning.

Dr. Kristine Munsch of Christiania, Norway, maintains that love affairs will keep girls young, and her assertion was seconded by Dr. Alma Sundquist, of Stockholm, who likewise believes that love renders secure that bloom of youth and beauty to women. She thinks, however, that American women spend too much money in rushing from one place to another, and that they do not get enough outdoor exercise.

"In Sweden," she said, "we walk out into the country a great deal, and take time to sit down in lovely places to think over our impressions. You never have time here to digest what you see."

Trenton electors will be asked to vote on a by-law granting the Chemical Produce Corporation exemption from taxes for ten years.

CHECKER TOURNAMENT HERE ON THURSDAY WITH LINDSAY

Old Rivals in Other Lines of Sport Now Enter a New Field.

The Lindsay checker players are coming here for a tournament with the local enthusiasts on Thursday, Oct. 30.

This leaves only a short time for the local players to get together, but they are determined to do their best. Chief Thompson and Peter McArthur, two of Peterborough's best at the game, are already lined up and they with all others interested are requested to meet at the Y.M.C.A. Monday evening to make arrangements for Thursday's tournament

BRILLIANT PLAY IN BILLIARDS TOURNEY

HOPPE LEADING COMPETITORS FOR 18.2 BANK LINE CHAMPIONSHIP.

New York, Oct. 23.—Willie Hoppe still leads the players who are competing for the 18.2 balk line championship in the national tournament here. He defeated George Sutton in last night's game, 400 to 298 in five innings. Hoppe has won all his games. Morningstar and Schaefer have won two and lost one game each, while Sutton has won two and lost two. Cochran and Yamada have each won one and lost two, and Slosson has been defeated in all three starts.

Hoppe and Young Schaefer each won for an average of 80, which is high for the tournament.

Jake Schaefer, of Chicago, son of the late Chicago billiard wizard, played a remarkable game against Kinrl Yamada. In the first three innings Yamada failed to score a point. Schaefer's runs were 83, 155, 6, 148, 8 with an average of 80. Schaefer's exhibition was the most brilliant of the tournament so far.

George B. Sutton, the Chicago veteran, outplayed Cochran, the young Detroit expert, winning, 400 to 62. Sutton's average was forty, with high runs of 78, 73 and 70.

Ora Morningstar defeated George Slosson, 400 to 202. Morningstar's average was 20 10-13, and his high runs 148, 127 and 31. Slosson's average was 16 10-12, and his high runs 95, 42 and 22.

ONE MILLION FOR RED SOX CLUB

CLAIMED THIS WAS OFFER MADE TO FRAZEE—DENIES CLUB IS ON MARKET.

Chicago, Oct. 24.— Harry Frazee president and owner of the Boston Red Sox of the American League, has been offered more than $1,000,000 for the club, according to a report sent out from Washington by Representative Gallivan. This offer may bring about a change in the ownership of the Red Sox as Frazee is credited with making the remark that he would dispose of the club if he could get his price, and, it is believed, his price was said to be $1,250,000. It is thought that president Johnson has been busy trying to get together Boston business men who would take the club off Frazee's hands.

Gallivan, according to his own statement given out in Washington, is at the head of the syndicate that has made the above offer to Frazee, and in the event the deal goes through he (Gallivan) will be appointed president. The latter has been a baseball enthusiast for years and has been one of the most ardent rooters in the town, and it is reported he endeavored to buy into the club on other occasions.

If the Boston club is sold to the syndicate of business men it is likely the team will transfer to the Braves field to play all its games. The property on which the Red Sox play at present is extremely valuable for automobile purposes, it being in the automobile centre. It is said the grounds can be disposed of at an enormous price. Besides, if the Red Sox move to Braves field the overhead expenses of both clubs would be cut in half, making it possible for the teams to earn a satisfactory dividend on their investment.

Denies Report of Offer.

New York, Oct. 22.—President Harry H. Frazee of the Boston American League club denied emphatically here today that he was considering the sale of the club to a Boston syndicate.

"I have never received an offer from Congressman James A. Gallivan, who is a close personal friend of mine," said Frazee, "and I am not negotiating for the sale of the club with anyone. From time to time I receive offers through the mails from apparently financially irresponsible parties, and these letters remain unanswered. More than a year ago I gave a thirty-day option upon the club to a combination which had asked my price. The option was never exercised and at its expiration I withdrew it. The club is not in the market, and I cannot understand the basis for the present report."

FREDDIE WELSH IS RELEASED

New York, Oct. 24.—Capt. Freddie Welsh, U. S. A., formerly lightweight champion pugilist of the world, was discharged by a magistrate to-day when arraigned on the charge that he had bitten Harry Pollok, his former manager, in the ear. Pollok for the third time, according to a police officer, failed to appear to press the charge. Capt. Welsh, who was in uniform, said he was through with the fighting game forever. He asserted that Pollok's charge was unfounded.

PORT HOPE BOWLERS DINE ON WILD DUCK

Port Hope, Oct. 23.—Port Hope bowlers enjoyed a wild duck dinner at Gore's Landing to finish off the season, followed by music, euchre and bridge. Before leaving for home the secretary, on behalf of the club presented the winning rink, Messrs. R. B. Thompson, W. D. Stephens, Capt. Colwell and Geo. Andrews, with silk umbrellas.

The St. Swithin Tradition.

A "special cable despatch" to a New York paper tells that on July 15 (St. Swithen's Day) "a water spout which burst about Tobermory, in Argyleshire, spread a shower of herring over the town and part of the town of Hull. They fell in heaps on the pavements and roofs. Gulls were quickly gobbling them up, and later these were assisted by hens, ducks, and cats."

There has been a great deal of talk about "St. Swathin" for many years. It turns out that Swithin never was a saint, although he was a bishop. Every newspaper every year reminds people that July 15 is St. Swithin's Day, and that if it rains that day it will rain for forty days. As a matter of cold, scientific fact the weather bureau expert in New York says that the longest spell of continuous rainy days known in that district was in 1907, namely, eleven days. The same expert doubts if there ever were forty consecutive days of rain anywhere except in the tropics, and except, of course, the "rainy season" mentioned in Genesis.

In connection with Swithin it may interest those who have not looked him up in the encyclopedia to see the origin of the legend: He was Bishop of Winchester about 855 A.D. Before he died, he begged to be buried in the open churchyard and not in the church. So he was. But after a hundred years the monks thought to honor him and the church by reburying him in the chancel. They appointed July 15 for the removal, but on that day it began to rain heavily and continued steadily for forty days and nights. The monks took the hint and let Swithin stay where he was.

"IF ALL WHO HATE WOULD LOVE US."

If all who hate would love us,
And all our loves were true,
The stars that swing above us
Would brighten in the blue;
If cruel words were kisses,
And every scowl a smile,
A better world than this is
Would hardly be worth while;
If purses would not tighten
To meet a brother's need,
The load we bear would lighten
Above the grave of greed.

If those who whine would whistle,
And those who languish laugh,
The rose would rout the thistle,
The grain outrun the chaff;
If hearts were only jolly,
If grieving were forgot,
And tears of melancholy
Were things that now are not—
Then love would kneel to duty,
And all the world would seem
A bridal bower of beauty,
A dream within a dream.

If men would cease to worry,
And women cease to sigh,
And all be glad to bury
Whatever has to die;
If neighbor spake to neighbor,
In love demands of all,
The rust would eat the sabre,
The spear stay on the wall;
Then every day would glisten
[illegible]
And God would pause to listen,
And life would be divine.

—James Newton Matthews.

BUOYANCY OF THE AIR.

Temperature Has a Great Deal to Do With Buoyancy of an Airship.

Weather observations are even more important to an airship than to water borne craft. Temperature has a great deal to do with the buoyancy of an airship. Here, however, we behold a paradox; for the officer, prior to a flight, carefully shades his thermometer from the rays of the sun before reading it, although his airship is going to be exposed to full sunshine.

It is the same paradox that gives rise to indignation in the average citizen when, at the close of a broiling July day, he reads the official weather report, according to which the highest temperature was only ninety. He feels positive it was at least a hundred—and so it was over a sun-baked pavement.

The universal practice of taking air temperatures in the shade is not sheer perversity on the part of the weather man. He would like to be able to answer the question, "How hot is it in the sun." Unfortunately, this question merely prompts another, "How hot is what in the sun?" A thermometer exposed to the sunshine registers the temperature of the glass and metal of which it is made, not the temperature of the air.

The shaded thermometer registers more or less accurately the temperature of the air, perhaps the most important factor of weather. The thermometer is doubly protected by its wooden case. Perhaps there is also a ventilating device in the shape of a revolving fan.

An alternative to reading the thermometer in the shade is to whirl it rapidly in the air at the end of a cord. The evaporative heat which the instrument absorbs is immediately lost by conduction to the air.—Popular Science.

LET WOMEN FIGHT FOR FASHION MODESTY

POPE BENEDICT URGES CATHOLIC LADIES TO REPUDIATE EXAGGERATED CLOTHES.

Rome, Oct. 23.—"On the domestic hearth woman is queen," said Pope Benedict to-day in answering an address presented to him by the women's unions. The Pontiff added that changed time had given woman functions and rights she did not possess in former ages and enlarged the field of her activities, but that no alteration in man's opinion or no novelty of things or of events could separate woman, conscious of her high mission, from the family, which was her natural centre.

Pope Benedict praised the growing determination of the Catholic woman to dedicate herself to the education of youth and the betterment of the family schools.
